MINISTER OF LABOR ASKED ABOUT TRAINMEN OUT OF WORK

He Says the Government Is Waiting to See What Railway Authorities Are Going to Do Toward Redeeming Promise, But Cannot Act Until Something Definite Occurs—Inadequacy of I.C.R. Lines Is Debated.

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the action of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. in not reinstating a number of its employes who participated in the strike last summer was discussed by R. L. Borden. The leader of the Opposition interpellated the Minister of Labor on the subject. Hon. Mackenzie King reviewed the course of the negotiations and showed that the Government had taken a hand in the dispute at the instance of the men. It seemed strange, however, that no action had been taken to enquire into the case of any individual who had not been taken back into the employ of the company. Charles M. Hays, president of the company, was a self-constituted judge to determine whether a man should be guilty of any act of violence which would preclude him from enjoying the terms of settlement.

The yearly discussion over the extension of the Intercolonial Railway into the counties of Nova Scotia where no railway facilities now exist, occupied the balance of the session. Hon. George P. Graham defended the line, and intimated that when Mr. Fielding returned to the House something definite might be expected.

When the House met, Hon. Frank Oliver introduced a bill to amend the immigration act. Its object is to make the act conform with certain judicial interpretations of the measure, framed last session, and does not interfere with the principle of the law.

R. L. Borden introduced the question of the reinstatement of employes of the Grand Trunk Railway, who have lost their places on account of participation in the strike of last summer. He wanted information in respect to a number of points, more particularly as to the meaning of the words "as soon as possible," in the agreement, and finally, if the Government had, or proposed to conduct an enquiry into the number of men guilty of disorderly conduct.

The Minister of Labor then explained, under the present situation, the company claimed that the terms of the agreement had been fulfilled; or, in other words, that the men who had not been reinstated had been guilty of acts of violence.

Pending the result of the action of the company, Mr. King said the Government had considered it advisable not to take any further steps. If the action of the company in the end was not satisfactory, the Government would take such steps as it deemed advisable to see that justice is done them.

D. D. McKenzie (Cape Breton) proposed a resolution to the House that the time had arrived in the development of Nova Scotia when the Intercolonial Railway should be extended to those counties of that province that are not at present served with railway facilities.

Hague Conference Agreed On.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The State Department yesterday announced successful completion of the long-continued negotiations looking to the gathering of an international conference, with the object of suppressing the opium traffic. With one exception, all of the nations addressed on this subject have agreed to the conference, and word came from The Hague that May 30 next had been unanimously accepted as the date, and The Hague as the place for the conference.

The American commissioners have not yet been appointed, but it is probable that the delegates who rendered efficent service at Shanghai in 1909 will be named. They are Bishop Chas. Brent of the Philippine Islands, Dr. Hamilton Wright and Charles D. Tenny, Chinese secretary of the United States legation at Pekin.

No Water to Run Mills.

Glens Falls, N.Y., Dec. 13.—The mills on the upper Hudson are confronted with a serious situation, owing to low water and lack of power to operate mills. The International Paper Co. yesterday shut its plant down at Fort Edward, and, at the mills in this city and in Corinth, machines are run with great difficulty. Unless rain comes and raises the rivers, complete suspension of operations will follow.

The Hudson River was never so low, and four inches of ice now covers the river. The Union Bag & Paper Co.'s plant is now being operated by steam power.

Shot By His Wife.

Philadelphia, Dec. 13.—Herbert Mason Clapp, a wealthy clubman of this city, is in a hospital with a bullet in his head and likely to die, and his beautiful young wife is locked up charged with having shot him. According to the police, the couple quarrelled in their bedroom at 3.30 yesterday morning, and Mrs. Clapp jumped out of bed, secured a 4-calibre pistol and shot twice.

Take Their Fate Bitterly.

Barrie, Dec. 13.—When Governor Simmons showed Thomas McNulty and Mary Dolan, whose executions were to take place on Wednesday, that their sentences had been commuted to life imprisonment. "That's cruel, cruel," moaned McNulty. "I don't deserve it. I was foolish, but I never committed the crime of writing that letter, telling her to destroy the child. I'm innocent of that. I cannot live with such a cloud over me."

Mary Dolan collapsed on learning that her life was doomed to be spent behind prison bars.

DECLINED TO PAY TRIBUTE

New York, Dec. 13.—When he was told that he was about to die, aged Salvatore Tollizzano, mortally wounded by three revolver bullets on Nov. 30 last, told the Hoboken police yesterday he had been shot for declining to pay tribute to the "blackhand." Shortly after making his statement, the old man died, and within an hour a warrant charging murder had been issued for a man supposed to be a lifelong friend, whom he accused.

Tollizzano had amassed a cosy little fortune in running a milk route in Hoboken's Little Italy. Late last month he was found in a hallway, unconscious, and with three bullet wounds in the back. He persistently refused until yesterday to tell who shot him. When he found he was dying, however, he admitted that a month ago he got letters from the "black-hand" demanding $1,000. He paid no attention to the letters, but on the date named was waylaid by a man whose name he gave the police. He grappled with his assailant, but was overpowered and shot.

Smuggled Necklace Costs $25,000.

New York, Dec. 13.—A pearl necklace, worth $8,000, has cost Mrs. Ada F. C. Adriance of Poughkeepsie more than $25,000, because she attempted to smuggle it into the country on her return from Europe last August.

Mrs. Adriance made no mention of the necklace in her declaration. The custom examiners were suspicious, and her clothing was searched. The necklace was found, concealed in the lining of her hat. It and some articles of clothing, not mentioned in the declaration, were seized, and Mrs. Adriance was indicted for smuggling. She pleaded guilty, and was fined $5,000.

To regain her necklace Mrs. Adriance was compelled to pay the full foreign value of the jewels, about $8,000, in addition to the duty, which was about $4,000 more. These amounts, together with the $8,000 originally paid for the necklace, the $5,000 fine and counsel fees, make the total cost of the necklace more than $25,000.

Indian Given Eight Years.

Brantford, Dec. 13.—Eight years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence given to John English, a Six Nation Indian, 60 years old, by Judge Hardy here yesterday, on the charge of arson. English was found guilty of setting fire to the barns and house of Lawrence Davis, a neighbor, and causing a loss of $3,500. The lives of three members of the family were endangered by the fire, and they were barely awakened in time to escape.

Thomas Clause, employed by English, told of the prisoner coming home on the night in question partially drunk, and asking him to help in burning Davis out. Relatives of English testified yesterday against his veracity.

Tammany Hall Scorched.

New York, Dec. 13.—Historic Tammany Hall was badly damaged by fire early yesterday. For some time the structure was in grave danger, but the firemen by hard work managed to confine the flames to the top floor. The Olympic Theatre, which was managed for many years by the late Tony Pastor, was damaged by water. Chief Croker estimated the loss at about $50,000.

Abandoned the Steamer.

Kingston, Dec. 13.—The steamer John Sharples, aground at Stony Point, has been abandoned by the underwriters. The Donnelly Wrecking Co. sent two steamers to the scene to work on the contract.

Criticized American Women.

London, Dec. 13.—Dr. Emil Reich, the sharpest critic of American women of the present day, died at his home here yesterday. Dr. Reich was one of the best known lecturers and authors of the age.

Winnipeg Campaign Ends.

Winnipeg, Dec. 13.—The final day of the civic campaign passed off in quiet but strenuous efforts of the opposing forces to strengthen their respective positions in what has been the hottest of many strenuous civic battles. The Social and Moral Association made this the principal issue, and their candidate, E. D. Martin, is running solely on this ground, whereas Mayor Evans seeks a third term simply as a vindication of his record. However, apart from this, there are four bylaws being submitted to the people, and, with controllers and aldermen, many voters will have 11 ballots to mark.

While both the Sheererites and the supporters of Mayor Evans and the police commissioners profess themselves confident of the result, it depends almost entirely on how the silent vote will go.

The citizens are unanimous in expressions of relief at the close of what necessarily has been a loathsome campaign, with both sides muckraking to strengthen their cause.

Heir to a Fortune.

Kingston, Dec. 13.—Marion McClusky, a former Kingstonian, is sought for at Oswego, believed to be heir to part of an estate of $1,000,000, left by James J. McClusky, the millionaire paper bag manufacturer of New York.

He Sold the Outfit.

Kingston, Dec. 13.—William Brown, aged 40, formerly of Toronto, is under arrest for selling a horse and rig at Napanee, which he hired from F. A. Bisby of Kingston.

CHILD RESCUE

An Interview With W. A. Gunton, Provincial Inspector of the Department of Neglected and Dependent Children—The Ideals and Accomplishments of the Children's Aid Societies.

Mr. Gunton, who was here recently in connection with the investigation in Belmont township, and who is visiting all parts of Ontario under Superintendent J. J. Kelso, of Toronto, gave the Review the following facts.

Being asked "Is this work of the Children's Aid Societies growing?" he said "Yes, new societies are being organized all the time. The last two were in Temiskaming District and in York county, outside the city of Toronto. There are now about 65 societies, and most of these are doing splendid work."

6,000 CHILDREN SAVED.

"Have many children been rescued?"

"During the past 18 years more than 6,000 have been saved from neglect, vice and crime, and of this number less than one per cent. have turned out to be bad or abandoned characters."

"Apart from the charitable side of the work, does it pay financially?"

"It certainly is the cheapest way to deal with this class of citizens. The children, after being taken, are sent to the shelter, where, through charity voluntarily given, they are clothed and fed until placed in foster homes. During this period the board is paid by the county or city. When once the child is placed in a foster home all expense ceases. Should one of these children be left in the evil surroundings until guilty of crime, then he is sent to the Industrial School, where the municipality must pay $1.25 per week for three years or more, and the province has to pay besides $1.75 per week. Then, if the child grows up past 16 before he is convicted of crime, all know how the expense is thousands instead of hundreds of dollars to catch, convict, and punish him. So, it is readily seen that our way is the cheapest and at the same time the most natural way for we do not keep big institutions where many children are housed together for years, but we put the children in good, Christian families, where they may be loved and cared for as are other children."

FOSTER PARENTS CHERISH CHILDREN.

"Do these foster parents really love these adopted children?"

"We have seen cases where they seem to think more of them than many parents do of their own. They are usually more careful because they are conscious that others are watching them."

"Do you visit these wards?"

"We make it a rule to visit all the children once or twice a year, and if we are not fully satisfied we remove the child, and if the child should be abused, which rarely happens we summons the parties to court and have them punished. The great thing, however, is to be very careful about placing children, and then we have very little trouble."

A HIGH-MINDED PURPOSE.

"What is the real purpose of the societies?"

"Our purpose is to save the children from ignorance, neglect, vice and crime, and so save our country from degradation and weakness and poverty. If all the children are rescued there will soon be no adults to reform. We do not believe in taking away from their parents as many children as we can, but as few as we can. We would rather help improve the home than remove the child because we think the home is the natural place for the little ones; but when parents so far forget their obligations as to neglect or ill-treat their own, then the state steps in and cares for them, because the children belong to the state as well as the adults."

THE CAUSE OF DOWNFALLS

"What is your opinion as to the cause of children going wrong?"

"In a general way I think some adult is to blame always. The child has either not been taught properly trained properly or has been set a bad example. The following are causes of delinquency among children—Allowing girls out at night unaccompanied by an adult guardian. Failure to teach girls common facts which they should know. Allowing boys to frequent pool rooms, theatres and hotels, the use of tobacco; the reading of vile literature; the failure of parents to keep the confidence of their children, and to make home life pleasant and attractive.

"The great causes of neglect are strong drink, laziness and immorality of parents."

PETERBORO' OFFICIALS CAPABLE

"What about the Peterborough Society?"

"We are well pleased with the work being done. Your officers are wide awake and up-to-date in their methods of work. Agent Cochrane is one of the best officers in Ontario. He was left alone in the world as a small boy, and knows how it feels. He is a thoroughly good man, and so commands respect. He is very just and kind and uses splendid judgment. I find that the children love him. When they meet him in the streets they shout 'Hello Mr. Cochrane,' and they always receive a kindly salute. Those, however, who ill-treat or neglect their children are in dread of his approach, for they know he will not tolerate it. My only regret is that Mr. Cochrane's whole time could not be devoted to this work of rescue and placing of children and then of visiting them when placed. Mr. Cochrane is getting up in years, but has more life and activity now than many men of forty."

HATTIE LEBLANC'S LAWYER CALLS WIDOW A VAMPIRE

Attorneys in Trial of French-Canadian Girl at Cambridge, Mass., Present Their Cases to the Jury—Witnesses Saw Mrs. Glover Near Laundry on Night of Murder — Little Prisoner in Danger of Going Blind.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 13.—The evidence upon which a jury will convict or acquit Hattie Leblanc of the murder of Clarence F. Glover was completed shortly after the beginning of the afternoon session of the trial yesterday, and the remaining two hours was occupied by Melvin M. Johnson, the leading counsel for the little Cape Breton girl, in the opening of his plea for her life. The lawyer declared at the outset that the little girl was brought from the provinces solely for the white slave traffic, and then, turning to Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, who induced her to leave her home, Mr. Johnson denounced the widow as a vampire, and recited Kipling to emphasize his point. He will finish his argument to-day.

District Attorney J. J. Higgins yesterday made one last effort to introduce Glover's alleged dying statement that Hattie Leblanc had shot him, but when he declared that Mr. Johnson himself had said that Hattie had admitted the shooting, there was a burst of passionate protest from the defence. Again Judge Bond ruled the evidence out of the case.

When Mrs. Glover was on the stand, the district attorney became involved in a heated argument with Judge Bond upon the admissibility of some of her evidence, and the colloquy became so bitter that the district attorney was threatened with expulsion.

Two more witnesses were introduced, who declared that they saw Mrs. Glover close by the laundry on the evening of the shooting, while the widow denied that she was out of her house on that night. Then after a breathing spell of half an hour, the principal defender of Hattie Leblanc began his final effort to obtain her freedom.

It is expected that Mr. Johnston would close before noon to-day, and that the rest of the day would be taken up by the district attorney.

Hattie Leblanc is facing another danger nearly as terrible as a verdict of guilty. She may soon become totally blind. Optic atrophy has attacked her. There is one hope, her youth, and skillful oculists believe there is a chance to save her sight. Even if decay of the optic nerve is arrested, however, she will always be partially blind.

ANGLICANS HELD RALLY

A splendid rally of the members of the Anglican churches in Peterborough was held in St. John's school last night. The Rev. Charles Carpenter presided supported by the Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. H. R Trumpour and Messrs. Davies and Moore presidents of the sister branches of the A.Y.P.A.

Mr Wadsworth gave a splendid recitation while supper was being served.

The committee of St. John's are well pleased with the large attendance, which augurs well for the future success of any effort by the combined branches of the A.Y.P.A.

ALL ARE RESCUED

Passengers and Crew Taken From the Steamship Olympia.

Valdez, Alaska, Dec. 13.—All the passengers of the Alaska Steamship Co.'s steamship Olympia, which went on the rocks at Bligh Island, Prince William Sound, Saturday night, were taken off the ship at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, together with the mails and baggage, and were conveyed to Valdez and Ellemar. Most of the passengers are here. Those at Ellemar are well cared for in the little village.

The Olympia left Cordova Saturday evening, after unloading a large quantity of coal in her after-hold, and soon ran into a fierce gale. The empty stern stood too high out of the water, and in the tempest the ship became unmanageable, and was spun about by the wind. About midnight she went hard and fast on Bligh Island reef.

Wireless Operator Hayes sent out the distress call, which was picked up at Cordova and Valdez, and also gave as much information of the wreck as he could, for the water soon put out the fires and made the wireless unworkable. The Government launch Donaldson, from Port Liscum, and the steamer June left at once for Bligh Island, and took off the passengers without mishap to any of them. The crew also were saved.

It is hoped to save the freight on the Olympia, but it is feared that the vessel will be a total loss. There is a rock through her No. 1 hold.

CHARLES F. RAYMOND

The reportorial staff of the Review pauses in the busy grind of the day to pay a tribute to one who but a few weeks ago was with us, and now lies silent in the grave.

The late Charles F. Raymond was the same to each of us, whether the copy book was crowded or clean. He was courteous and kind and took an interest in us.

We have heard eloquent clergymen and evangelists talk for hours, but none of these have impressed us with the practical doctrine of human kindness as did he, in the few months we spent together.

To his widowed mother, his bereaved wife and sons, we extend our sincerest sympathy.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

It is proposed to establish municipal pawn-shops at Montreal for the benefit of the poor.

C. Robert, an influential farmer of the county, was nominated in St Johns, Que., as the Liberal candidate for the coming bye-election.

All the victims in the Bellevue, B.C., mine disaster have been identified and the company has issued an official statement, giving the number of dead as 31.

The Department of Mines at Ottawa has sent out a mining expert, Mr. Hudson, to investigate the causes of the disaster in the coal mine at Bellevue, Alta.

There is fear of a street railway strike at Winnipeg, as the board of arbitration has ruled that the company was justified in dismissing men found drinking while wearing their uniforms.

John Jaffray of Carberry, Man., was crossing the track to reach the depot, when he was killed by an engine. He was a brother of Hon. Robert Jaffray of Toronto. Deceased had lived in Carberry for ten years.

Boy Broker's Effects Sold.

Boston, Dec. 13.—More than 40 men and women yesterday thronged the salesrooms of a Roxbury storage warehouse to attend the auction sale of the personal effects of Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," who recently disappeared, leaving behind him many victims of his alleged high finance methods. Bidding was lively for most of the articles offered and more than $5,000 was realized.

A seven-seated touring car, which Davie presented to his mother about a year ago, was knocked down to "H. I. H." for $1,000. Those initials are said to represent H. I. Harriman of Newton, to satisfy whose mortgage for $11,500, the sale was held.

An Old Practitioner.

St. Thomas, Dec. 13—Dr. W. C. Vanbuskirk, the oldest physician in St. Thomas and Elgin County, is dead. He was born in Yarmouth Township 96 years ago of French-Canadian parents and resided in St. Thomas 70 years, practicing medicine since 1853.

Apple Packer Fined.

LIBERALS HAVE MADE ONE GAIN MORE THAN UNIONISTS

Lancashire Is Showing a Unionist Tendency, But the Rural Districts Near London Seem to Favor the Government — Lloyd-George Says Home Rule Will Be Arranged to Prevent Any Established Church.

London, Dec. 13.—The polling results show monotonous regularity and the returns yesterday leave the Government one seat to the good, the Unionists having gained 21 seats from the Government, and the Government coalition 22 seats from the Unionists in the election of 518 members out of 670. The position of the parties last night is as follows:

Opposition: Unionists 229.

Lancashire, by increased Unionist and decreased Liberal majorities, is displaying a consistent tendency in favor of the Unionists, while the county district contiguous to London are following the lead of the capital in favor of the Liberals. Thus the Right Hon. Louis Harcourt retains his seat for Rossendale with a greatly reduced majority, 1,074 less than he received in the last election, while Tottenham and Walthamstow, in Middlesex and Essex respectively, give big Liberal votes.

The pollings thus far show no very decided movement in either direction, except such as might be explained by the local circumstances. To-day's 42 polling will include a number of Scotch and Welsh constituencies and will indicate whether Scotland and Wales remain loyal to the Government.

Chancellor Lloyd-George, speaking at Newtown last night, declared that no home rule bill will give the Catholics in Ireland any power over religion. A clause would be provided to prevent any religion from being established, whether Catholic or Protestant.

HAMILTON MOTHER KILLS HER CHILD

Hamilton, Dec. 13.—When little Harry Patience returned from play yesterday afternoon to his home in Kenilworth avenue, he was unable to get into the house, and, securing assistance, the door was forced, and on the floor was found the dead body of his brother Bert, aged 4, and nearby the unconscious figure of his mother, with a terrible gash in her throat. It is supposed that Mrs. Patience cut her child's throat and then attempted to commit suicide. A razor, covered with blood, was found under a sofa.

Mrs. Patience was conveyed to the City Hospital, and it was announced, after an examination had been made of the wound by the doctors, that her chances of recovery are very slim, as the windpipe has been penetrated. Mrs. Patience is employed by the Canadian Fowler Co.

Residents in the neighborhood say that she was around during the day, acting in a perfectly rational manner, while her husband is unable to explain the theory of the police that she must have suddenly had an access of homicidal mania.

At a late hour last night an operation was performed on Mrs. Patience, which increased her chances of recovery, so the doctors say.

False Returns Charged.

Winnipeg, Dec. 13.—Criminal proceedings were officially set on foot by Warehouse Commissioner Castle in the City Police Court against the Thunder Bay Elevator Co., Ltd., of Fort William.

Flogging Political Exiles.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 13.—All the opposition parties in the Douma have united in addressing an interpellation to the Ministers of the Interior and Justice, regarding the reported wholesale flogging of political prisoners in the Zarantui and Vologia Prisons in Siberia. It is charged that the Government is taking a brutal revenge on its political opponents, and by so doing is disgracing Russia.

It is reported that Saconeff, the assassin of Minister of the Interior Von Plehve, has died in Zarantui, as a result of flogging or of self-inflicted injuries.

The Douma yesterday adopted the provision of the education bill, transferring the church primary schools to the jurisdiction of the civic authorities. The clerical faction violently opposed this provision. Many thousand schools are effected.

Asks Armenians to Go Home.

Brantford, Dec. 13.—E. Aknouni, one of the prime movers for constitutional government in Turkey, and a representative of the Armenian revolutionary federation, addressed a meeting of 400 Armenians here Sunday, exhorting them to return to their native land and use their influence in securing a continuance of constitutional government. The meeting passed a resolution calling on civilized countries for assistance in the relief of the hundreds of Armenian political prisoners now in Russian prisons. Aknouni is also endeavoring to divert American and English capital in Turkey, as a safeguard for the continuance of constitutional government. He is on a tour through Canadian cities, and will visit Hamilton, Galt and St. Catharines this week.

Not Her Child Say Relatives.

Kingston, Dec. 13.—Relatives of Gertrude Enright are disinclined to believe that the child found in Rochester is hers. It is rumored that the girl made a statement that the dead body was brought to her by a girl friend, who asked her to help get rid of it, and that she assisted in disposing of it. Chief of Police Bailey says he has had no word from Rochester to look for the missing girl. The girl's father died a year ago. There is a mother and several children. The mother is prostrated at the news which came to her through the newspapers.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Ottawa Journal has got hold of an erroneous idea regarding municipal government by commission. The Capital has a Board of Control, and the Journal says "the ratepayers can get nothing else in that line except the arbitary appointment for some prolonged term of some body to rule over them without any say of their own as to whom it shall be or for how long." The first commission that took the place of the city council, that of Galveston, Texas, was composed of members appointed by the Governor of the State, and it did such excellent work that public attention was called to the system. Commissioners by appointment, however, did not long prevail, and was not adopted by other cities nor retained in Galveston. Over one hundred cities in the United States have the commission form of government, but the commissioners are elected by the people and they have all to say as to who their civic rulers and administrators shall be. They are elected for a definite term of years, and usually retire at different periods, so that they are kept in touch with the wishes of the people. Most of the cities have methods by which a commissioner whose line of conduct is questioned can be compelled to submit himself for re-election before his term of office has expired, and have provisions for a referendum on important questions and for the initiative of measures by the electors. A commission of this character, without the recall, initiative and referendum attachments, would be a city council with a few members, who would be elected for a longer term than a year, and in such a way that one or more would retire each year.

BURKING INQUIRY

When a motion was made in Parliament to permit the Public Accounts Committee to enquire into accounts of 1908, it was opposed by Sir Wilfred Laurier and voted down. Last year one of the Ministers was ill and the accounts were not, it was urged, fully enquired into, and there had not been opportunity to examine into others, but the Premier's reply was to bring the matter up in the Committee and if it desired the Committee could make the request. But he knew, he could not fail to know, that the Public Accounts Committee, or the majority of the Committee which control its actions, has acted as though it were a body constituted for the purpose of ensuring the non-production of information, and relegating the request to the Committee was a way of refusing it.

The Government has persistently refused investigations in abuses. As far back as 1899, the request from the conservtive of the House for an enquiry into the Yukon scandals was refused. In 1906, Mr. Borden asked for an investigation of the Marine and Fisheries Department, and his request was not granted, and a similar fate befell a motion for an enquiry into the management of Public Lands. Refusals also met, at various times, requests for investigations of the great spending departments, for a civil service enquiry, for an enquiry into the Mayes-M'Avity scandal, and for an investigation of the Grand Trunk Pacific expenditures.

If the Government had nothing to hide, if it was not afraid of having the transactions connected with the public business made known, there would be no reason why it should refuse the enquiries. But enough has come to light, some through other proceedings, to show that such investigations were needed and that if they had been held, the country would have been saved considerable loss. The grafting in the printing bureau would not have gone the lengths it did, and getting at all the facts in cases such as that of the Mayes-M'Avity affair, where an increased charge was made on dredging so that payments might be made to others than the contractor, would tend to put a stop to such transactions.

As Mr. Borden said in a recent speech in the House.—

"The fact that there has been an admittance pass to the people in connection with the maladministration of the Printing Bureau, the fact that there has been maladministration and inefficiency, the fact that there has been stealing and loothing and grafting in that department since I moved my resolution in 1906, down to the time that Mr. Doherty moved his in 1909, ought to bring shame to this Government. For that loss, for that maladministration, for that stealing and grafting the Government is morally responsible. But although the mills of Government grind slowly, they grind exceedingly small, and the time will come when the responsibility for those things will be lifted from the shoulders of the men in the department and laid upon the shoulders of the men who are really responsible."

And the men who are really responsible are the Ministers and their supporters.

THE DISCONTENTED MAN

Coming down street of a winter morning you fall in with a friend. Hands in pockets, hat pulled down, walks like a rocking-horse, slips and slides over the pavement. Is in an entirely pessimistic mood. He's the discontented man. His tale of woe is a fearful thing. All the troubles of life are his.

The furnace went out during the night—very inconsiderate of the furnace. It's a poor one at any rate.

The cold water tap of the hot water arrangement is frozen up tight. Pipe probably busted. Doesn't know. Got to have the plumber. Dreads the bill.

Cellar window fell in during the wind and seven jam jars of preserved squash are busted. Sorrow in the household and poverty in the pantry.

The Society of Eternal Preservers of Public Peace met last night and left him off the board of directors. Thing they haven't done for years. Can't understand it. Some underhand work, sure thing. Doesn't believe he's a back number—at least no one has told him so.

His rink of the curling club has gone to Punkin Hollow to play a tankard match with the Punkin Pulverizers. Gave him the go-bye and took along another man as lead. Disgraceful conduct, isn't it.

In his tale of woe he just misses being run over by a reluctant street car. In escaping this danger he collides with a classical master of the Collegiate and both go down. Language unparliamentary follows. Spectators cannot identify the culprit.

He gets to his place of business sore, morose and petulant. Life is really not worth living. It all began with that blamed furnace.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Ottawa Journal cruelly remarks—"Evidently Toronto's ideal of a street car is a place something like the country corner grocery store, where the patrons are allowed to stand around or sit on boxes, smoke, swap yarns and have a good time generally."

A serious riot in Calcutta, in which Hindus and Mahommedans attacked each other, caused by the approach of a Moslem festival which involves a sacrifice of cows, which are considered by the Hindus to be sacred, demonstrated the necessity of British rule in the interests of the natives. The British permit the natives to participate in the government of the country, so far as possible, but if they were left to themselves the various sects and races would be at each other's throats.

THE WORTH OF FRUITS

Both Food and Medicine

"Fruit-a-tives" is made of juices of fresh, ripe fruit.

"Besides contributing sugar, mucilage and other matter as food, apples by their acid and aromatic principles, act powerfully in the capacity of tonics and antiseptics and when freely used they prevent debility, strengthen digestion, correct the putrefactive tendency of nitrogenous foods, avert scurvy, and strengthen the powers of productive labor. If our friends would only provide themselves with apples, we venture to say that not one man or woman in fifty would care for animal flesh to eat."

GEORGIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

"Fruit-a-tives" is made of the fresh juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. "Fruit-a-tives" contains all the medicinal principles found in these fruits, combined with valuable tonics and intestinal antiseptics.

"Fruit-a-tives" is more valuable than fresh fruit because "Fruit-a-tives" gives you all the good of the fruit without the tough fibre which often proves a tax on digestion.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

REV. MR. RIDDIFORD ON PROTESTANTISM

Rev. W. C. Riddiford delivered a most stirring appeal to the people of Otonabee, to rally to the support of Protestantism. "Become members or adherents of some church," he said. "Fall in somewhere." If the Protestant ranks are thinning it is due to the carelessness and apathy of those who are too indolent to show their colours, and stand by the old flag of religious liberty. Let every man go to some church and register his name, and take part in the support of it."

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

An opportunity is afforded to Canadian business men manufacturers fruit importers, capitalists, etc., to personally investigate business conditions and opportunities for investment in the West Indies and British South America. H. C. MacKenzie, Cornish, managing editor of Canada and West India Magazine, has arranged with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to secure the S. S. Lake Manitoba, a roomy, comfortable ship, provided a hundred and twenty-five persons signify their intention to take the cruise. It is proposed the steamship will leave St. Johns, N.B., January 14th, 1911, for a six weeks' cruise, returning on or about February 24th, which will permit a visit to Cuba and Havana, the various ports in Jamaica, Trinidad, Georgetown, Demerara, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Antigua, Grenada, Barbadoes, Martinique, Porto Rico, San Domingo and Bermuda, returning to St. Joe. This ship will be especially equipped with electric fans, orchestra for dancing, etc., a fine motor launch for special shore trips, a room for the convenience of photographers, deck awnings, hamocks for those who desire to sleep on deck, etc. The well-known high-class service of the Canadian Pacific Empress steamships will be provided. It is the desire to give Canadians an opportunity for the expansion of commerce between these various countries, and nothing will be left undone to assure the maximum of comfort for the minimum of expense. The number will be limited to 150 passengers, and the fare for the round trip will be from $200 to $300, according to accommodation. This trip has received the endorsement of the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada.

Peterboro Conservative Club

The club rooms have all been renovated, papered and painted and are now open for Conservatives, where they will be welcome. Every Saturday evening addresses will be given by prominent Conservatives. The membership fee is only $1.00 per year. 6d

Weather Forecast.

"I do not think," says Edmund Yates in his book, "Recollections and Experiences," "I never met a man more hopelessly deaf than Charles Kemble at seventy. Some of us were sitting one afternoon at the Garrick Club when a tremendous thunderstorm broke over the house.

"It raged with extraordinary fury, one clap exploding with terrific noise immediately above us like a volley of artillery.

"We looked round at each other almost in horror, when Charles Kemble, who was calmly reading, lifted his eyes from the book and said in his trumpet tone, 'I think we are going to have some thunder; I feel it in my knees'."

Australian Sheep Output.

A Government report recently issued at Sydney shows that Australia leads the world in sheep farming. The estimated value of the Australian flocks is $280,000,000 and their annual gross output is estimated at 75 per cent. of the value. The number of sheep in the countries leading in the sheep industry are given in Mr. Baker's report as follows: Australia, 87,043,266; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia 58,510,828; United States, 54,631,000, and United Kingdom, 30,011,833.

Prices for hogs were unchanged. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $6.75, and $6.40 f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 10 were 2200 cattle, 800 sheep and lambs, 3800 hogs and 230 calves.

There were a few choice Ontario stall-fed steers on the market, for which $6.25 was bid and refused, the seller asking $7 per 100 lbs., and it was reported that one extra choice steer was sold at $7.25, but of course these prices were exceptional, and, now that the holiday season is approaching, butchers in some cases might be even tempted to pay more for an odd beast in order to make a good showing. The demand for the ordinary class of stock was good on account of the favorable weather, and even at the advance in prices noted above an active trade was done. Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c; common at 4c to 4¼c, and cows and bulls at from 3c to 4c per lb.

A weaker feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, and prices scored a decline of 5c to 15c per 100 lbs., owing to the increased offerings and the fact that stocks on spot are commencing to accumulate some. At the above reduction there was a fair demand from all the packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $7 to $7.10 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The foreign markets for Canadian bacon are weak and 1s to 2s per cwt. lower than a week ago.

There continues to be a strong undertone to the market for sheep and lambs, and prices for the former since this day week have scored a further advance of 50c, and the latter 25c to 40c per 100 lbs. This is due to the falling off in the receipts and the good demand from butchers for supplies. Sales of sheep were made at 4¾c to 5c, and lambs at 6¼c to 6¾c per lb. The market for calves is also strong, and prices are steadily tending towards a higher level. Sales of choice stock were made at 7c to 7½c, and good at 6c to 6½c per lb.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Dec. 12.—Cattle—Receipts, 5800 head; fairly active and 15c to 25c lower; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.75; shipping, $5.40 to $6; butchers, $4.75 to $5.80; heifers, $4.25 to $5.75; cows, $2.75 to $5; bulls, $3.75 to $5.25; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $5.25; stock heifers, $3 to $4.10; fresh cows and springers, $2 to $3 lower, $30 to $65.

Veals—Receipts, 1000 head; active and steady, $4.75 to $10.50.

By Stewart Edward White

"Nonsense," rejoined Newmark, leaning forward in his turn. "I know you too well, Jack Orde. You're a fool. Do you seriously mean to say that you dare try to prosecute me? Just as sure as you do I'll put Heinzman in the pen too. I've got it on him, cold. He's a bribe giver—and somewhat a criminal conspirator himself."

Newmark leaned back with an amused little chuckle. "If the man hadn't come to you and given the whole show away you'd have lost every cent you owned. And for your benefit I'll tell you what you can easily substantiate. I forced him into this deal with me. I had this bribery case on him. What had the man to gain by telling you? Nothing at all. What had he to lose? Everything—his property, his social position, his daughter's esteem."

He paused a moment to puff at his cigar.

"I'm not much used to giving advice," he went on, "least of all when it is at all likely to be taken. But I'll offer you some. Throw Heinzman over. Let him go to the pen. He's been crooked and a fool."

"That's what you'd do?"

"Exactly that. You owe nothing to Heinzman, but something to what you would probably call repentance, but what is in reality a mawkish sentimentality of weakness. However, I know you, Jack Orde, from top to bottom, and I know you're fool enough not to do it. I'm so sure of it that I dare put it to you straight. You could never bring yourself to the point of destroying a man who had sacrificed himself for you."

Chapter 36

"YOU seem to have this game all figured out," said Orde with contempt.

"Well," said the other, "let's settle this thing. The fact remains that the firm owes a note to Heinzman which it cannot pay. You owe a note to the firm which you cannot pay. All this may be slightly irregular, but for private reasons you do not care to make public the irregularity. Am I right so far?"

"You might hear the other side," interrupted Orde. "In the first place," said he, producing a bundle of papers, "I have the note and the mortgages in my possession."

"Whence Heinzman will shortly rescue them as soon as I get to see him," countered Newmark.

"If you force Heinzman he'll land you," Orde pointed out.

"There is Canada for me. He travels with heavier baggage."

"You'd lose everything."

"Not quite," smiled Newmark. "And, as usual, you are forgetting the personal equation. Heinzman is—Heinzman. And I am I."

"Then I suppose this affidavit from Heinzman as to the details of all this is useless for the same reason?"

Newmark's thin lips parted.

"Correct," said he.

"But you're ready to compromise below the face of the note?"

Newmark hesitated.

"Yes," said he, "because I know you well enough to realize that there is a point where your loyalty to Heinzman would step aside in favor of your loyalty to your family."

"And you think you know where that point is?"

"It's the basis of my compromise."

Orde laughed.

"The worst of it is I believe you're right," said he at last. "You have the thing sized up, and there isn't a flaw in your reasoning. I always said that you were the brains of this concern. If it were not for one thing I'd compromise sure, and that one thing was beyond your power to foresee."

He paused. Newmark's eyes half closed again in a quick darting effort of his brain to run back over all the elements of the game he was playing.

"What is it?" asked Newmark at last.

"Heinzman died of smallpox at 4 o'clock this afternoon," said Orde.

Newmark's face went slowly gray. For a full minute he sat absolutely motionless.

"Where are you going?" asked Orde quietly.

"I'm going to get myself a drink in my bedroom," he snapped. "Any objections?"

"No. After you get your drink I want to talk to you."

Newmark snarled at him: "You needn't be afraid I'll run away. How'd I get out of town?"

Orde looked thoughtfully at Heinzman's affidavit, which, duly disinfected, had been handed him by Dr. McMullen as important. Then he arose to his feet and glided softly across the room to take a position close to the door through which Newmark had departed. Finally the door swung briskly inward. Like a panther Orde sprang forward. He pinioned Newmark's arms to his side, where he held them immovable with one of his own. The other hand he ran down Newmark's right arm to the pocket. There followed an instant of resistance. With a sharp cry of pain Newmark snatched his hand out and gazed amazedly at the half crushed fingers. Orde drew forth the revolver Newmark had grasped in the coat pocket. He spilled out the cartridges and tossed the empty weapon to Newmark.

"There's your plaything," said he. "So you wanted that affidavit, did you?"

He paused.

"I don't need to tell you that I've got you," said he finally, "nor what I think of you. I can send you over the road for the best part of your natural days; also I've got these notes and the mortgage."

"Quit it," growled Newmark. "Send me up and be d——d!"

"That's the question," went on Orde slowly. "You hurt me pretty bad, Joe. I thought of you as a friend. I had a hard time getting over that part of it. We've been together a good many years now, and as near as I can make out you've been straight as a string with me for eight of them. Then I suppose the chance came and before you knew it you were in over your neck."

"Oh, for God's sake, drop that preaching. It makes me sick!" broke out Newmark.

"I'm not preaching," said Orde, "and even if I were I've paid a good many thousands of dollars, it seems, to buy the right to say what I d—n please. And if you think I'm working up to a Christian forgiveness racket you're mistaken. I'm not. I don't forgive you."

"Well, turn me over to your sheriff and let's get through with this," said Newmark sullenly.

Orde rose.

"Look here, Newmark, that's just what I've been coming to, just what I've had such a hard time to get hold of. I'm not going to hand you over to any sheriff. I'm going to let you off. No," he continued, in response to Newmark's look of incredulous amazement, "it isn't from any fool notion of forgiveness. I told you I didn't forgive you. But I'm not going to burden my future life with you. That's just plain, ordinary selfishness. I suppose I really ought to jug you, but if I do I'll always carry with me the thought that I've taken it on myself to judge a man. And I don't believe any man is competent to judge another."

Newmark, who had listened to this rambling exposition with curiosity, broke into a laugh.

"You've convicted me," he said. "I'm a most awful failure. I thought I knew you, but this passes all belief."

Orde brushed this speech aside as irrelevant.

"Our association, of course, comes to an end. There remain the terms of settlement. I could fire you out of this without a cent, and you'd have to git. But that wouldn't be fair. I don't give a hang for you, but it wouldn't be fair to me. Now, as for the northern peninsula timber, you have had seventy-five thousand out of that and have lent me the same amount. Call that quits. I will take up your note when it comes due and destroy the one given to Heinzman. For all your holdings in our common business I will give you my note without interest and without time for $100,000. That is not its face value nor anything like it, but you have caused me directly and indirectly considerable loss. I don't know how soon I can pay this note, but it will be paid."

"All right," agreed Newmark.

"Does that satisfy you?"

"I suppose it's got to."

"Very well. I have the papers here all made out. They need simply to be signed and witnessed. Timbull is the nearest notary. Come," said he.

In silence the two walked the block and a half to the notary's house. Finally the papers were executed. In the street Newmark paused significantly, but Orde did not take the hint.

"Are you coming with me?" asked Newmark.

"I am," replied Orde. "There is one thing more."

In silence once more they returned to the shadowy low library. Newmark threw himself into the armchair. He was once again the coldly calculating, cynical observer. Orde turned to face him.

"You have five days to leave town," he said crisply. "Don't ever show up here again. Let me have your address for the payment of this note."

He took two steps forward.

"You're a dirty, low lived skunk. If you think you're going to get off scot free you're mightily mistaken."

Newmark half arose.

"What do you mean?" he asked in some alarm.

"I mean that I'm going to give you about the worst licking you ever heard tell of," replied Orde, buttoning his coat.

* * * * * * *

Five minutes later Orde emerged from Newmark's house, softly rubbing the palm of one hand over the knuckles of the other.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

He turned out of the side street. His own house lay before him. He stopped, then stole forward softly until he stood looking in through the doorway.

Carroll sat leaning against the golden harp, her shining head with the soft shadows bent until it almost touched the strings. Her hands were straying idly over accustomed chords and rich modulations, the plaintive half music of reverie.

Orde crept to her unheard. Gently he clasped her. She sank back against his breast with a happy little sigh.

"Kind of fun being married, isn't it, sweetheart?" he said.

"Kind of," she replied, and raised her face to his.

Tennyson's Love For Birds.

Alfred Tennyson was all his life a great lover of the woods and fields. Trees, birds and flowers were his everyday companions, and he faithfully studied the habits of Dame Nature's English nurslings. The lark, the nightingale, the owl and the linnet were his favorite birds. He was also greatly interested in the sea birds, the peregrine falcons, the cormorants, seagulls, etc., and in the long legged sea birds, the visitors to marshes and pools. He thought the curlew, of which he has written in "Locksley Hall," a very noble bird and loved its wild call over the marshes. There are many references to birds native to England in his poems, and all of them show a thorough acquaintance with the individual characteristics of the different species.

At Farringford the poet's garden was the home of the wild birds of the hedgerows. The blackbird and robin and the smaller birds flocked there in great numbers, and it was considered far more important that they should feel welcome there than that the fruit should be permitted to ripen undisturbed or the garden be kept in proper order.

Domesticated birds also Tennyson numbered among his friends. Brilliant peacocks and more sober doves and pigeons, he loved them all.

USEFUL FEET

Walt Mason

My feet are broad and flat and large, and either shoe might be a barge. My feet are always in the way; I stumble o'er them every day; and all the people that I meet are ever looking at my feet; I've heard them saying as they passed, that Cinderella is outclassed. I gaze upon my trilbys wide, and oft my bosom swells with pride, for, though they look like hods of bricks, I've trained them to some useful tricks. If there's a sick man needing aid, those feet will give a street parade, and hasten to his humble door, that I may do some helpful chore. If there's a neighbor plunged in woe, those blamed old trilbys seem to know and they go scorching down the road, that I may ease that neighbor's load. If there's a sane and helpful plan to benefit the creature man those feet are straining in their shoes, and not a minute will they lose; they carry me in haste away, that I may butt into the fray. If earnest men, with weapons strong, are battling with some grievous wrong, those trilbys fairly paw the ground, as though they heard the martial sound, and bear me to the scene of strife, that I may fight as for my life. Some people hand me large bouquets, and praise me forty-'leven ways, but I'm an idle, trifling skate, content to go a careless gait, who shies at care and toil and sweat—my feet deserve the praise I get!

like illness, it is often necessary quickly to raise the temperature of a room. PROBLEMS WHICH CONFRONT SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Discussed at the Annual Meeting of the Sunday School Institute of This District at Charlotte Street Church Yesterday—Several Interesting Addresses.

The problems which confront the Sunday school, and the best means by which to overcome them were threshed out yesterday at the annual meeting of the Sunday School Institute for the Peterborough district, held in Charlotte street Methodist church in the afternoon and evening.

The officers of the Institute are Rev. F. L. Farewell, B.A., Assistant General Secretary of the Sunday schools of the district, and Rev. W. P. Rogers, B.A., Sunday School Secretary of the Peterborough district. The chairman of the district is Rev. G. W. Henderson.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises at 2 p.m., conducted by the pastor of the church. A comparative study of Sunday school statistics followed, given by Rev. W. W. P. Rogers. The aim and purpose of the Modern Sunday School and its place in the community as an educational institution was discussed by Rev. F. L. Farewell in a very clear and exhaustive manner. What is the aim of the modern Sunday school, asked the speaker, and what is its relation to evangelical work? The motto of the organization is to reach every member of the church and the community. Its function is to relate everybody to the church. It is not desirable or natural that boys and girls should grow up to a certain age, say twenty or twenty-five, before they connect themselves with the church.

Another function is to prepare them for service that is for ultimate Christian service to the world. Another function is character building, instilling in the young the principles of missionary service. We can be true missionaries in every day life, so that the question resolves itself into the statement that the Sunday School is an evangelistic and educational institution for the purpose of teaching moral and religious truths to old and young alike, with an ultimate view of winning them to Christ and preparing them to live their largest and best lives in world-wide service.

Rev. W. P. Rogers was the next speaker. His topic was "How can the Cradle Roll organized A.B.C. and Home Department contribute to the realizing of the ideal—all the members of the Church and the community in the Sunday School and all the members of the Sunday School in the Church."

The above named organizations, said the speaker, have only came into existence during the past few years, with the idea of bringing into the church the whole of the Sunday school and the community in general. The point is to contribute the ideal. There are only seven cradle rolls in the district out of forty-four Sunday schools.

It does contribute a lot to the realization of the ideal and makes a bond between the home and the Sunday school which otherwise would not exist.

The Home problem was next discussed. Many young people think when they get to a certain age they must leave the Sunday school under the impression that they are too big to go. This problem has often been called the big boy problem. The object of the Home Department is to keep within the Sunday school those is in every community those who drift away from Sunday school and some who were never in one.

The subject was treated very exhaustively, and many excellent points were brought out which might help to overcome the difficulties enumerated.

After this Rev. F. L. Farewell spoke on some things the Sunday school might learn from the Public Schools in methods of grading and teacher training.

"The Why," "The Whom" and "The How" of evangelism in the Sunday Schools was next discussed by Rev. W. P. Rogers, followed by a conference on Primary, Junior and Intermediate work, led by Rev. Mr. Farewell. The appointment of resolution and other committees concluded the afternoon session.

At 6.30 refreshments and a round table conference on Sunday school management was conducted by Rev. Mr. Farewell. At seven-thirty a meeting of the resolution committee was held conducted by the Rev. W. P. Rogers.

In the evening at 7.45 the opening exercises were led by the Rev. W. P. Rogers.

The following items were then put to a vote and it was decided to include them all in the Sunday School curriculum. The cradle roll, the Adult Bible class, the Home Department, evangelism, to culminate in a decision day, a teachers' training class, more care taken in the grading of the schools, and a regular promotion day observed, missions that is a systematic giving and study of them a regular meeting of the Board of Management, and lastly, an evergreen school. An extra clause was added by the secretary, Mr. R. F. Downey, which made provision to have laymen visit the Sunday school and preach to the classes, following out practically the policy of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

A debate then followed the subject, which was resolved—"That the forward movement for missions be introduced into our local Sunday schools and that a definite missionary policy for the district be formulated." For the negative side Mr. Hazard and Mr. Gamble were the debaters, while the affirmative was taken by Messrs. Cunningham and McLaren. The affirmative won.

Mr. F. L. Farewell gave a summary of the debate in a very conclusive manner.

This practically concluded the session of the Institute. Quite a large number were present at the evening meeting and many helpful points were gleaned by those present.

Altogether the sessions were a decided success and the committee in charge are to be congratulated.

LOOKS LIKE CLEAR SAILING FOR THE BELMONT MINSTRELS

Shaped Up to Great Advantage in Rehearsal—Review Reporter Watched Their First Theatre Practice Last Night and Was Agreeably Surprised With Their Clever and Well-Rounded Performance.

Smooth as silk and fast as lightning. That's the way the Belmont Minstrels work in their first part which should be one of the most entertaining and finished ever seen on the local stage.

Last night at the Opera House the minstrels held the first rehearsal with the orchestra. Their work was characterized by skill, dash and precision. Mr. Shephard certainly has the boys well in hand and everything moves like clockwork. In all the choruses and every number there is evidence of his intelligent and patient drilling and the performers respond to his direction in admirable fashion. The numbers are all written in rapid swinging tempo. There are no drags or bay songs.

Several pretty sentimental march songs are featured and the coon ditties are of the most humorous and fetching character.

The end men do many excruciatingly funny stunts and get away with some smart surprises in the way of novelty dancing, individually and in concert.

In the olio a series of vaudeville turns are introduced and the performers go through the acts with captivating ease and grace.

"Close that Eye," and "Lazy Moon" by Miss Geraldine King and "Baby Doll," by Miss Josephine Sproule, are sure to be applause winning features of the offering which promises to occupy a very prominent place in local amateur show history.

LECTURE ON CHURCH AND STATE AT KEENE

Before a large public meeting at Keene last night Mr. J. H. Burnham, of Peterborough, explained the new movement of the Roman Catholic church against civil liberty. He replied to the Rev. Father McColl, who a few weeks ago declared that the Church was fighting against a wrong democracy not a right democracy. This the speaker said was the essence of the struggle. Who was to say when democracy was right and when wrong. If the Church had the say, then democracy as such was at an end. The liberty of the people was a myth. It became what the Church of Rome made it. It was this war upon the freedom of the State that the Pope was directing from Rome by means of frequent decrees and his legates. The Pope's instructions were very explicit. The Pope thought the time was ripe, that Protestantism was a self-confessed failure and that the Church of Rome must come to the rescue and regain its old supremacy. The power of the Church in Canada over the State had increased enormously. Mr. Burnham had no fault to find with those statesmen who were loyal to their church and its claims and were doing all in their power to place it in control. That was natural. But he had great fault to find with those who allowed them to do it.

ANNIVERSARY CONCERT WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

The George street Methodist church anniversary was celebrated last evening by a sacred concert held in that edifice.

Miss Grace Merry, of Toronto, gave a number of recitations, her imitations of Irish, Scotch and young Canadian dialects being perfect. She was deservedly encored on each number by a large and appreciative audience.

The proceedings opened with a selection by the choir, "Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem" (Simper), Miss Simpson taking the solo with a voice of splendid clearness, in her usual capable manner.

The programme was as follows:—

Anthem—"Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem"... ....Simper
Miss Simpson and Choir.
Recitation—"A Telephone Conversation"
Miss Merry.
Solo—"Son of My Soul" (Jos. Adams
Mrs. J. E. Middleton.
Recitation—...... ..."Danny"... ....
Miss Merry.
Duet— ...."Eventide"... ... ...
Miss Simpson and Mr. Fred Miles.
Recitation—"Sunshine and Rain" (Blumenthal
Mrs. J. E. Middleton.
Duet, "When Thou Art Near"
Miss Simpson and Mr. Fred Miles.
Recitation— ..."The Red Canoe"......
Miss Merry.

Mrs. Middleton's solos were delightfully rendered and well received, her voice lending itself perfectly to fine expression. The duets by Miss Simpson and Mr. Miles, of the choir, were also a feature of the evening.

The proceedings closed with the singing of the doxology by the choir and the Rev. I. Couch, who officiated as chairman, pronounced the benediction.

Mr. Pottenheim presided at the organ with his usual ability.

ST. PAUL'S W.F.M.S. DISCUSS BIG TOPICS

At Annual Meeting — Urgent Demand for Consecrated Work — Secretary's Report a Paper of Interesting Information.

The 34th annual meeting of St. Paul's Women's Foreign Missionary Society was held on Friday afternoon, December 9th. In spite of rather unfavorable weather there was a good attendance. Miss Dickson, the president, occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the usual devotional exercises. The president, in her annual address, spoke of the wide-open doors of opportunity at the present time, such as ages have not known before, and as a consequence the growing demand for more consecrated service for the work is great, its needs are urgent.

Mrs. Mitchell, of Wei Hwei, Honan, China, addressed the meeting, giving a minute description of the evangelistic and educational work in her field of labor, which was listened to with marked attention. As a result of education the native Christians were enabled to give valuable assistance to the missionaries.

Miss Aleitha Davidson submitted the report of the Fraser Mission Band, showing an average attendance of 19 and a balance of $83.86.

The report of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band was read by Miss Mary Gibson, and showed an average attendance of 17, and a balance of $44.45.

Following is the secretary's report of the W. F. M. Auxiliary of St. Paul's Presbyterial church—

In submitting the 34th annual report of this Auxiliary, your officers are pleased to record a prosperous and successful year, and with reverent and grateful hearts we acknowledge the leading of the Divine Hand in sustaining and prospering us throughout another year of service.

Interesting and profitable meetings have been held regularly on the second Friday of the month, with the exception of August. The attendance is very good, but, we are sorry to state, is not in proportion to the membership, the average being 56, about the same as last year.

We are pleased to report the addition of one life member.

By arrangement of the Board of our General Society the January meeting was devoted to prayer. When our members meet to ask a blessing on the great mission needs of our church, with its increasing responsibilities, both at home and abroad. reports of the annual meeting of our General Society, held in Knox church, Toronto, were given by Miss M. Dickson and Mrs. Mowat, at our May meeting, and at our June meeting Mrs. Carmichael and Mrs. R. R. Hall, submitted reports of the Presbyterial meeting held at Norwood.

The Society last June accepted with much regret, the resignation of Mrs. McLean, our beloved secretary for the past two and a half years, and desire to express its appreciation of her faithful and efficient services.

During the winter a bale of warm clothing was sent to Ethilbert, Manitoba, and later in the year another bale, valued at $63.71, containing clothing for a boy 15 years of age and other supplies for the Boarding School, were sent to Mistawasis.

The systematic study of the Gospel in Latin Lands has been faithfully pursued throughout the year, two ladies having charge of the program each month. The many excellent papers prepared on the prescribed subjects have given a great amount of pleasure and profit to the members of the Auxiliary. This Text Book does not include our foreign fields, as we have no missions in Latin lands, but it touches on many subjects of vital and historic interest, including South America, our sister continent, of whose need and darkness we are sadly unfamiliar. The annual thank-offering meeting was held in October and was addressed by the Rev. D. J. Davidson of Dhar, Central India, who gave a graphic account of his work. The contribution was $700.85, the largest in the history of the Society.

Mrs. Shapleigh, of the China Inland Mission, addressed our November meeting. Coming in contact with our workers in the foreign field from time to time, and hearing the story of the sad and discouraging features of their work, as well as the bright side, is a great privilege, and serves to arouse fresh interest and stimulate us to renewed effort. We again subscribed for the "Interior," which is sent to our missionaries in India, also "The Missionary Review," which is for the use of the members of the Auxiliary. We again draw your attention to the necessity of each member being a subscriber to the "Foreign Missionary Tidings" our official magazine, in order to have a fuller knowledge regarding our missionaries; also a better appreciation of how our own work is carried on.

It is with sincere regret we record the removal by death of two of our esteemed members, Mrs. Coyle Brown and Miss Elizabeth Gow, who at all times manifested a deep interest in our Society. Miss Gow, by her will, donated $100 to this Auxiliary, this being the second bequest from a member of this family. We desire to record our deep appreciation of these gifts, and the spirit which prompted them.

These vacancies in our ranks should solemnly impress our minds, not only with the importance of the work, but with the undoubted value of time, and help us to use the golden opportunities at hand for "The Night Cometh When No Man Can Work."

In Reviewing the year's work, we find much cause for thankfulness at the progress made, but there is a note of regret that calls for earnest consideration, viz., that growth in our membership is practically at a standstill, and that so many of the women of the congregation have not yet identified themselves with this work. To Christian women no appeal for help can come with stronger claim than that of our heathen sisters, whose spiritual needs can only be ministered to by women.

May we realize our responsibilities and faithfully meet the obligations we have assumed, always keeping in mind God's great promises concerning prayer, and enter another year with fresh zeal and renewed courage in this great work of winning "The World for Christ."

A RELIGIOUS MOUSE AND THE HAVOC IT CAUSED

The congregation and the pastor of a local church were very much disturbed during the evening service on Sunday, as the result of the antics of an insignificant mouse.

This most detestable of creatures, in the opinion of most of the gentler sex, completely unnerved the congregation as it ran to and fro under pews and up and down the aisles, playing solitaire, and without the least idea of the amount of havoc it was causing to the feelings of those seated in the church.

Women gave subdued screams, while men made heroic, but sometimes futile attempts to display an indifference. Finally a member of the congregation, probably from a wide experience, located the monster during the latter part of the service and the suspense was over.

MANY PLAYERS OUT TO PRACTICE

Coach Lyons Was on Hand and Lined the Boys Up—Likely Looking Material—Another Practice To-night.

Junior and intermediate players to the number of thirty, were at the rink last night, for an initial work-out, and the railbirds had a look at some of the material, from which the two teams will be picked to represent Peterborough in the O.H.A. this season.

For the first half hour the players were introduced to the boards, etc., and teams were picked for the balance of the hour, all the youngsters getting in on the practice.

Mr. T. R. Lyons, who has consented to act as coach was in the thickest of the fray, and his services will help a whole lot. He knows all the fine points of the game and has played against the best of them. Mr. Lyons likes the material and is optimistic for the future.

Sam Thomas [illegible] around again, and will look after the boys in the dressing room. Sam is some worker and handles the liniment bottle like a veteran.

Another practice will be held this evening between seven and eight.

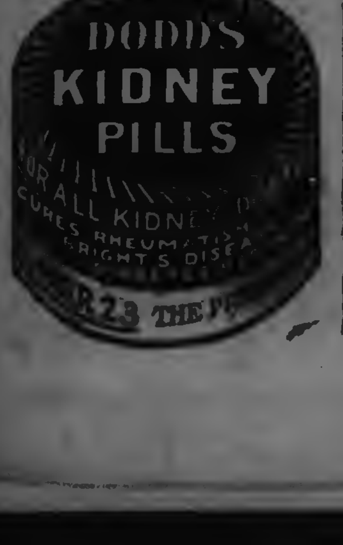
Derocher and Milan were in the nets last night. The latter is a Woodstock boy, and comes with a reputation that he looks good to uphold. There promises to be a lively fight for positions on both teams. The management this year couldn't be beaten and the Review can assure the supporters of the game in this city that the goods will be delivered in a most acceptable style.

CURLING COMMENCED FOR THE SEASON LAST NIGHT

Over Fifty Were Present, Getting Into Shape for the Winter Schedule—Ice in Splendid Condition.

The curlers were out at practice last evening in large numbers. Over fifty were present and a large crowd of interested on-lookers were present. At one time there were five rinks in operation while the old familiar cry of "whooper up" echoed around the rink. Mr. McIntosh, the king of ice-makers, had the ice in splendid condition and general satisfaction at its perfectness was expressed by many.

The games till New Years will mainly be for getting in shape for the schedule games which will commence at the beginning of the New Year. A large number of the veteran curlers were out, also quite a number of the younger players.



TO FORM NEW LEAGUE

Ottawa Journal.—Failing in their efforts to induce the National Hockey Association to raise their salary limit, the insurgent players of the Ottawa and Wanderer hockey clubs have started the second professional league under way, and with Brice Stuart and Sam Bilsky now in Montreal acting for the Ottawa seven, the outlaw league looks as if it may become a reality.

The split between the hockey magnates and the players looks to be one that will take considerable diplomacy to patch up, but according to Dr. D. H. Baird, who is at the head of the new Ontario club, the players are determined to go ahead with the "outlaw" hockey league, and a meeting will be held in Montreal to-day or to-morrow to organize.

REV. HENDERSON AT LINDSAY

Preached Anniversary Sermon at Cambridge Street Methodist Church

Lindsay Post.

The Rev. Geo. Henderson, of Peterborough, preached the anniversary sermons of the Cambridge street Methodist church on Sunday and was greeted by large congregations of his old parishioners at both services, who were pleased to have an opportunity of hearing their old pastor.

In the morning Mr. Henderson took his text from the 14th verse of the 14th chapter of John, "If a man die shall he live again ?" He said that it was a question that had engaged the finest minds, and had received the most honest investigation possible, and a question on which had hinged the highest criticism, and the learned investigators, were compelled to admit that there was yet a life to come. If existence were prescribed by four score years and ten, it would be well to eat, drink and be merry. But nature points to the future life. In plant life, the leaves fall and decay, but no one item of their composition escapes, but assists in making better strangers' trees. It was thus with man. His existence here was to better fit him for the better life of the hereafter. Cicero, in his day had proclaimed existence of a hereafter, and the modern scientists, had freely admitted the fact.

The reverend gentleman in a very earnest and convincing address fully established the immortality of man and the necessity of preparing for that future which every human being had to face.

In the evening his text was taken from the 12th verse of the 22nd of 2nd Kings.

The special music of the choir was most pleasing and the solos taken by Mrs. B. L. McLean, Mrs. W. R. Widdess and Mrs. H. Brimmell were well rendered.

"WHY, it doesn't seem more than a week ago since the Wrights were guarding their workshop like a diamond laboratory and every one else in the game was either sealing up keyholes or trying to peek through. And now look at them!" So spoke a man in the stands at the recent Boston aviation meeting as he stood staring up at the triumph of the event, when Messrs. Walter L. Brookins, Ralph Johnstone, Claude Grahame-White and C. F. Willard were sailing the air above the field in open exhibition.

The masters of the craft have abandoned, temporarily, the secret laboratory method in their work. Their machines are appearing daily under the guidance of their pupils at public gatherings, meets, fairs and celebrations in all parts of the country. They are no longer preparing models under lock and key and stealing away to make flights by night, but they are coming into the open and inviting the man in the stands and every one else to step up and watch their inventions. Moreover, they have abandoned the keen race for records, the breathless straining after fresh achievements that formed their chief interest a few years ago. Instead, they are resting on their laurels and satisfying public curiosity.

Aviation, so far as it means a nerve racking struggle for new flying marks, tense competition among bird men for premier honors of the air and constant study of new designs, has come to a halt, for the time being. If there is one apparent feature of present general conditions in the science it is that the contest for supremacy among American and foreign designers has paused and that aviators are grasping rather at tangible returns in money than at further fame in higher altitudes, longer journeys and faster flights.

Aviation, so far as it means public familiarization with the possibilities of the aeroplane, is enjoying its harvest moon. Flying is at its hour of novelty and prosperity. Its exponents are seizing the opportunity at the full. The time is ripe for the reaping of rewards and they are garnering the wealth that will carry them on in future important and serious work.

"We can scarcely be blamed," said one of the veteran aviators recently, in explanation, "if we turn aside from puzzling over theories and models to benefit by a fleeting stage of commercialism. We have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in experimentation. We shall spend many more hundreds of thousands. In the meantime we are improving public interest to replenish our purses."

The Financial View.

This is the explanation of the phenomenon observed by the man in the stands. The practical aeroplane has materialized from a dream to a fact. The early strivings after startling results, when each week brought forth its astonishing advance, have passed. Man has flown across the Channel, across the Alps, from London to Paris, from Albany to New York. The future can hold nothing that will seem as marvellous in comparison with the past as did these feats, all within seven years of the first fifty-nine second flight by Wilbur Wright. The public is satiated with wonders, crammed with records, and it demands most insistently that it be allowed a chance to see the strange machines itself. The aviators are quite content to humor it.

"I have been urged repeatedly to prepare a machine especially for a try at the speed mark," said the same aviator, who did not care to have his name used, "but why should I? There is no pension fund for impoverished air pilots that I ever heard of. Within the last year or so we have had our first returns. My machine will fly and my pupils can be well paid for flying it. That is what attracts me at present.

"After the present craze over the aeroplane has expended itself, as it must, after the edge has been taken off public curiosity and an exhibition of a meeting ceases to be the drawing card it is now, why, very well. I shall be glad then to go back to my work bench and my models. I shall be keen to construct a machine designed to capture the speed record. And I shall be the keener, mark this point, because I shall have the money to proceed with.

"Nearly all the flying men look upon it as I do. They have not gone money mad; they have not allowed a noble craft to fall foul of a hunger for riches, but, to mix the figure effectively, they are taking time by the forelock."

Incidental to this phase of the situation in aviation the man in the stands might have remarked another decided change. It was significant at the Boston meet, as at other recent meets, that of all the competitors on the ground, with the single exception of Mr. Glenn Curtiss, not one was flying a machine designed by himself, or, stating the reverse, none of the original inventors whose names are associated with a distinct type of machine was present except Mr. Curtiss. Mr. Wilbur Wright was a passenger in one of his machines in the bomb dropping contests, but beyond that was content to have members of his staff handle the Wright biplanes.

These facts signalized a tendency which is becoming more apparent among the pioneers of flying. The masters themselves are retiring from active competition and exhibition. Mr. Curtiss a few days ago emphasized his intention of abandoning public flights very soon. The Wrights no longer engage personally in competitive and demonstrative flying. Abroad the same holds true of Mons. Blériot and of Mr. Farman.

The actual manipulation of machines at meetings nowadays is being mostly carried on by a younger set who are followers and pupils of the original experts, instead of by the men who have borne such a close relation to the first tentative steps in aviation. The designers are leaving the greater risks to others and are turning their attention to construction and instruction.

Their Harvest Moon.

This condition runs parallel with the present prosperity enjoyed by aviators. There is no reason for the inventors to go aloft when they have pupils who can manage the machines for them. It is well that they refrain from continual flights, for the science could ill spare one of its pioneers. A representative displays the machine, sometimes on a percentage basis with the designer, and both profit by the public thirst for novelty. Meanwhile the master is free to impart his hardly gained wisdom and experience to those who must be looked to for the future to build machines and to improve his type.

Thus it comes about that the competitors and demonstrators of the day are chiefly graduates of the various schools founded by the pioneers, using the type of machine to which they have been trained. The Wrights, for instance, have such pupils as Messrs. Walter L. Brookins, Ralph Johnstone, "Arch" Hoxsey and A. L. Welsh. The best known pupils of Mr. Curtiss include Messrs. Charles Foster Willard, Eugene Ely, J. C. McCurdy, Augustus Post and J. C. Mars. Mons. Blériot has a great number of pupils, some of whom have in turn pupils of their own. Comte Jacques de Lesseps, Mr. J. Armstrong Drexel and Mons. Paulhan are prominent exponents of the Blériot type of monoplane, as are also Messieurs Alfred Le Blanc, J. B. Moisant and Emile Aubrum. Messrs. Clifford B. Harmon and Henry Weymann are pupils of the Farman school, as was Mr. Grahame-White, who has also learned to use a Blériot machine.

Some of these gentlemen approach flying in the spirit of the amateur and others are exhibiting on their own account. Still others are directly connected with the staffs of their instructors. These last are supplied with machines, with which they fill engagements at exhibitions and meetings. At present their time is fully occupied. No important State or county fair is considered complete without a real, sure enough bird man as the big attraction. Balloons, parachute jumpers and horse races are worn threadbare. Calls are made constantly upon the master aviators for the services of demonstrators. The bookings already made extend a year or more ahead. A staff pupil is assigned to fill a list of engagements like any other performer.

It is pointed out by aviators that the existing period of commercialization, necessarily temporary, is not without its value in the progress of the aeroplane. While the stress of competition has slackened, the great number of flights being made and the manufacture of machines demanded for exhibitors all contribute to the data of the science and the knowledge of its followers. Every time a flying man makes an ascent he learns something more about the control and manipulation of his aeroplane. Every time there is an accident or a breakdown the cause is carefully sought and an attempt made to correct the fault.

Flying for Money.

So it is that although the masters are no longer pitted against one another for records they are steadily studying and improving the existing types, building up from the experience of their pupils. The curious and generous public provides them with the wherewithal and the leisure.

Meanwhile there is one man who does not seem to have been able to dip his hands into the golden flood. Aviation meetings have been a vast success from the standpoint of the spectators and flyers, but the promoter, who usually looks out for a fat slice of the profits, has been sadly out of pocket. Up to the present time, it is said, not one such meeting has returned anything to those who backed it, and in most instances there has been a loss. Figures of the amounts lost at some recent aviation events are as follows:—

Lanark	$40,000
Bournemouth	50,000
Blackpool	75,000
Rheims	100,000
Nice	110,000
Boston	20,000

The promoter's plaint upon this state of affairs comes back upon the aviator. The bird man is playing up to the top of the market. He knows that the public wants to see him perform, is clamoring for an exhibition, and he promptly skies his price. The returns for those who are able to make practical flights nowadays are enormous and the promoter has to stand the strain. What the promoter has so far apparently failed to observe is that the public's curiosity is quickly satisfied. Counting upon the wide advertising that flying has had and the generally keen interest aroused he has planned for long engagements. The result too often has been that during the last days of a meeting he has been confronted with stands of empty seats. The public saw the aviators fly once and did not care to see them again. The Boston event was a success during its first week, but when the promoters extended the time, and with it their expenses, they suffered a loss.

So it is that the man who compiles those ubiquitous little books for the waistcoat pocket containing statistics on everything under the sun and a lot besides is now sitting with his pencil idly tucked behind his ear so far as the subject of aviation is concerned. World's champions in flying no longer succeed one another with the rapidity of clay rabbits on a shooting range. A record may go by the boards here and there. But the aviators are no longer pursuing marks with the fervor of former days. What touches them most nearly is the garnering of the sheaves against the day when means will be needed to resume active development.

WATER SUPPLY CUT OFF FOR A WHILE

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Dec. 13.—Toronto today faced for a time what promised to be a serious condition as regards her water supply. The supply of water coming through the tunnel under the bay to the main waterworks station suddenly dropped between 8 and 9 o'clock this morning from a rate of forty million gallons a day to less than ten millions and within an hour later the big six foot pipe had gone dry.

The five foot pipe through the city was supplied previous to building the tunnel, and which had been used to supply the high pressure fire service also went dry, leaving the city dependent upon the reservoir in the north end for its supply.

The water-works officials got to work promptly and succeeded in locating and removing the cause of the trouble, namely some huge chunks of ice, and this afternoon water was flowing again as usual.

PETITIONS FOR JAMES GORHAM

The majority of the citizens of Peterborough want to see a reprieve granted James Gorham, the young man under setence for the murder of his mother.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, his counsel, has circulated several petitions in the city asking for Gorham's pardon, and these are being generously signed.

The petitions will be presented to the Department of Justice, together with the jury's strong recommendation for clemency on behalf of the condemned youth.

GREETINGS EXTENDED TO PASTOR AND CONGREGATION

The pastor and congregation of Knox Presbyterian church combined in their rejoicings last night, and the occasion was a happy one in every particular.

From five till eight supper was served in the building formerly used as the church and Sunday school, and will now be the Sunday school. The ladies excelled themselves, and the large and choice array of edibles won for them many well merited compliments.

The attendance was very large, and this, the initial number of the program for the evening, was such that in future occasions of a similar nature, the first notice will be sufficient to guarantee a large gathering.

Shortly after eight o'clock the second part of the programme commenced in the new church. Addresses of congratulation and best wishes were given and Rev. Dr. Johnston was again heard, to the great pleasure of all present.

Rev H. J. Keith was the chairman, and with him on the platform were Rev. Dr. Johnston, Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. Robt. Pogue, Rev. J. G. Brown, Rev. Mr. Abraham of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Port Hope, and Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Rev. Mr. Abraham brought the greetings of the Presbytery.

Reference was made by the different speakers to the sacrifices made by the congregation and pastor, and which had finally been rewarded. Each extended hearty greetings, coupled with best wishes for the success of the work at Knox church.

Greetings were also received from former pastors and friends of the church.

Two violin selections contributed by Mr. Wm. Wilson, were given in a most acceptable manner, and each was heartily applauded.

Dr McCulloch moved a vote of thanks to Rev. Dr. Johnston, and this was seconded by Sheriff Hall, and tendered by Rev. Mr. Keith.

PRELIMINARY HEARING

No election or plea was made by Mr. F. D. Kerr, counsel for the two alleged bigamists, who appeared before Magistrate Edmison yesterday afternoon at three o'clock.

They were taken into custody in connection with the recent investigation by the Children's Aid Society, east of here.

His Worship decided as the date of a preliminary hearing Monday next, and it will be held in Havelock, in the vicinity of which the majority of the witnesses reside.

AN ELABORATE SPECTACLE

Grace Van Studdiford's New Opera Staged With an Artistic and Lavish Hand

Always justly noted for the completeness of the productions that he gives his stars, Manager Daniel V. Arthur is said to have outdone himself in the way he has staged and costumed the European comic opera, "A Bridal Trip," which will bring Miss Grace Van Studdiford to our city to-morrow evening, Dec. 14th, when she will appear at the "Grand." Nothing finer scenically or sartorially has been seen upon the American stage in years than the spectacle which will greet our theatregoers when they view this comic opera, in which Miss Van Studdiford is said to surpass her own vocal achievements of "Maid Marian."

CONCERT WAS A BIG SUCCESS

A Very Enjoyable Program at S. A. Temple—Proceeds for a Pioneer Member of Local Corps

It was a large and thoroughly pleased attendance that listened to the splendid concert given at the Salvation Army Temple last night and a handsome sum was realized. This will be presented to Mr. Mark Spencely, one of the now few pioneer members of the Army in this city.

Ensign Merritt was in the chair. Every member of the band was at his post and led by Bandmaster Peryer, contributed a number of selections which were highly enjoyable. The Songster Brigade too was out in force there being only one absentee and that through sickness. Each number on the programme was up to the usual standard of merit found at the Temple and the affair was in every detail a great success.

The receipts of the concert will total in the neighborhood of $30.

HOUSE VOTED ON PARTY LINES ON SPROULE'S RESOLUTION

The Advocacy of Cold Storage and Abattoir Facilities Under Direction of the Government Would Have Found Favor With Many Western Liberals.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—At 12.30 yesterday morning the House of Commons divided on the amendment to the motion to go into supply, moved by Dr. Sproule (East Grey) that the agricultural and animal industries of Canada would be much benefitted by the establishment of abattoirs and a efficient system of cold storage, under Government supervision, and in the opinion of the House the Government ought to give immediate and effective consideration to the subject.

It was farmers' day in the House yesterday, and had not the vote been one of want of confidence on going into supply, it would probably have received the support of western members on the Liberal side. W. H. White (Alberta) said, but for that consideration, he would have supported Dr. Sproule' amendment.

The vote stood: Liberals, nays, 111; Conservatives, yeas, 66—the Government majority being 45. Arthur Gilbert (Drummond and Arthabaska) voted with the Government.

Anticipating the arrival of a large number of western farmers the Conservative party has apparently taken this means of securing a tactical advantage over the Government.

On the motion to go into supply, Dr. Sproule (East Grey) brought up the question of the development of facilities for the export of agricultural products, with particular reference to the stock-raising industry, which, he said, was not keeping pace with the other farming industries.

Dr. Sproule reviewed the findings of the Manitoba and Alberta Beef Commission, the Alberta Pork Commission, and Dr. Rutherford's report to the Government regarding the animal the animal industry. He said the gist of these was that the cattle of the country were becoming less each year in Western Canada, for the simple reason that it was becoming unprofitable to raise them, because of lack of a steady market. All the reports agreed that this could be remedied by the Government taking up the question, establishing a system of abattoirs and cold storage, interesting themselves in the establishment of the dead meat trade.

The sheep trade of Canada, he noted, had been affected seriously by the preferential tariff with England, and the removal of the duty on woollen goods. He said there were far fewer sheep in the country to-day than there were a few years ago.

He condemned the Government for having undertaken nothing to develop this industry, which, he said, had been brought to the attention of the Minister of Agriculture for years.

Concluding, Dr. Sproule moved an amendment to the motion to go into supply, calling for the establishment of a system of cold storage facilities and abattoirs, under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture.

Hon. Sydney Fisher agreed with the general tenor of Dr. Sproule's remarks, but accused him of partisanship. Dr. Sproule, he said, had emphasized the question of our exports, but he had forgotten the ever-increasing home market. Canada's population was growing much more rapidly in the cities than in the country, while the western farmers were hardly producing enough food products for their own use. It was unfortunate, but true, he said, that sheep were becoming fewer. One of the reasons was, he thought, was Canadian were unpatriotic enough to wear foreign wool.

Wm. Thorburn (N. Lanark), W. H. Sharpe (Lisgar, Man.), Glen Campbell (Dauphin), E. W. Nesbitt (N. Oxford), John Perrin (Macleod), A. W. Smith (N. Middlesex), M. S. Schell (S. Oxford), were other speakers.

"If we can take it up this year. I hope we shall do so, and we shall have in that the support of every man in this audience."

With this sentence Sir Wilfrid Laurier concluded his remarks to a deputation of about 250 men, who crowded the Railway Commission room of the House yesterday morning, to urge upon the Government the immediate construction of a new Welland Canal, or the enlargement of the present canal to accommodate ships having a draught of 25 feet. The Welland Canal deputation has been a fixture of the session for a number of years past, but seldom has a more determined or more representative body of men met the Government to discuss any subject. Over a hundred members of Parliament accompanied them. Following closely upon a deputation from Montreal on Monday, who sought to have the Georgian Bay-Ottawa Canal project under way within the near future, the Government made it clear that it was sympathetic towards both schemes, and it was practically admitted that, of the two, the Welland was the greater necessity. It is doubtful if Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues would care to disregard the representations of a body of men who spoke, as Dr. Reid (Prescott) said, for the whole of Canada—from the foothills of Alberta to the St. Lawrence.

Fred. F. Pardee (Sarnia) introduced the deputation, and he was followed by Lloyd Harris (Brantford). Dr. Reid and W. J. Gage. Mr. Gage made it clear at the outset that the sentiment of the deputation was not antagonistic to the Georgian Bay-Ottawa scheme; that, by the time the Welland Canal had been completed, Canadian trade would have developed to the point that the other work should be commenced, and it would be ready none too soon to accommodate the traffic.

JUDGE FAVORS GIRL.

Charge Is Given to Jury In Leblanc Case at Cambridge.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 14.—The fate of Hattie Leblanc, who has been on trial since Nov. 28 for the murder of Clarence F. Glover, was almost in the hands of the jury, when the court suddenly adjourned yesterday afternoon until to-day.

The jurors listened to two earnest appeals. First M. M. Johnston, the senior counsel for the defendant, in an impassioned address, which lasted for hours, begged the jury to send Hattie Leblanc back to her home in the fishing hamlet of West Arichat for a joyous Christmas.

The district attorney, J. J. Higgins, declared that the girl, ripened into a woman by her life at the Glover home, had gone willingly to the laundry with Glover at night, and there shot him to death. A quarrel with Glover, he said, furnished the motive. He did not pose as Mrs. Glover's defender and he described Mrs. Glover as a woman who had been "bad from the beginning." The powder marks on Glover's coat showed that the muzzle of the revolver was within three inches of his body, indicating that he had been shot by someone whom he trusted.

Much of what Judge Bond had to say was distinctly favorable to the defendant, especially that bearing on the question of whether the girl had the courage and the ability to use for the first time a revolver that required the grasp of a good-sized hand and the knowledge how to release a safety attachment. He said that the Government had not shown that Hattie Leblanc had ever used such a weapon, while, on the other hand, Mrs. Glover, the widow, did know how to use one.

He pointed out conflicting statements made by witnesses concerning both Mrs. Glover and her attorney, and was urging the jury to give the girl the benefit of any reasonable doubt, when he decided to end his charge to-day.

No Immersion for Presbyterians.

Kingston, Dec. 14.—The Donnelly Wrecking Co. found that the steamer John Sharples, sunk at Stony Point, could not be floated and abandoned her.

LIVES WITH BULLET IN BRAIN.

Domestic Quarrel Near North Bay May Result Fatally.

North Bay, Dec. 14.—A settler's cabin on the south shore of Lake Nipissing was the scene of a shooting affray Sunday night, following a domestic quarrel, as the result of which the wife of James Fetterley lies dying. News of the tragedy reached North Bay yesterday in the form of a rumor of foul play, and Provincial Officer McRae and a press representative drove to the scene, forty miles across the lake. The woman was found to be still alive, but a revolver bullet had entered beneath the jaw and passed completely through her head and brain, inflicting injuries which ordinarily cause instant death.

Fetterly's story, which is corroborated by other inmates of the house, is to the effect that his wife quarrelled with a man who was helping him on the farm, causing him to leave, and later quarrelled with his step-son, and he remonstrated with her for driving people away. Words followed, and she picked up the revolver and ran into the yard, where she shot herself.

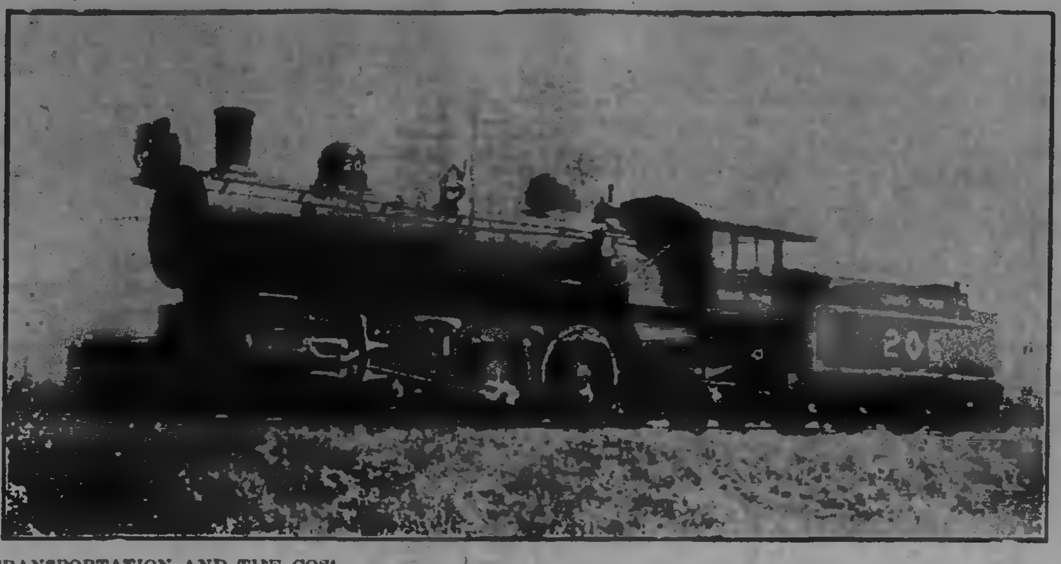
The woman is in a delicate condition, and has five little children. Domestic life has not been conducive to happiness, but there is no evidence that the tragedy means anything but suicide, despite rumors to the contrary, and the dying woman asserts that she shot herself, and exonerates her husband. Her condition late yesterday afternoon did not show any change, and she states that it is her intention to get better, notwithstanding her terrible injury. The woman is able to talk and sit up in bed, showing vitality of a most remarkable nature.

Escaped Five-year Term.

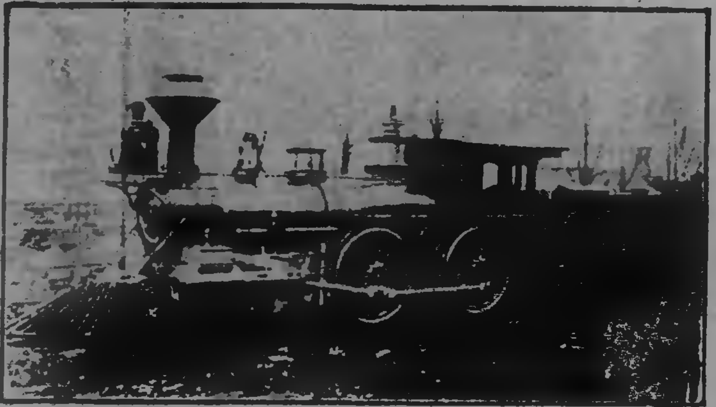
Toronto, Dec. 14.—"I am just as convinced as I am sitting here, and such I believe is the opinion of every man on the jury, that you are guilty of keeping a house of disrepute and of inducing and procuring young girls to frequent your house for immoral purposes," said Judge Morgan in addressing Mrs. Elizabeth Thurston in the sessions court yesterday, "but as there is no positive evidence of you having induced these girls to enter this life, I am taking the case out of the jury's hands, and allowing you your freedom. It is fortunate for you that the crown has failed to submit the necessary evidence, or I would have sentenced you to five years in the penitentiary."

The girls who were implicated, are Frances Burfield and Beulah Taylor, aged 14 and 15 respectively. R. J. Corbett, a painter, 39 years old, was charged with having seduced the younger girl, but the jury decided that there was not sufficient evidence.

THE OLD AND THE MODERN



TRANSPORTATION AND THE COST



That the price of transportation should continue downward while the cost of production increases from year to year is the most remarkable fact in connection with the operation of railways on the American Continent.

To illustrate the improvements that are being made and the cost of such improvements, a Grand Trunk locomotive of twenty years ago is shown here, and with it a modern locomotive designed to handle the 'International Limited.' The former work had a pressure of 135 lbs. to the inch, the latter up to 200 lbs. The little old eight-wheeled engine weighed in round numbers 80,000 lbs. The smaller engine cost to build from seven to nine thousand dollars; while to-day it costs from eighteen to twenty thousand dollars to produce a locomotive like the 206 shown in this picture.

Twenty years ago a first-class coach wheeled out and ready to couple into a train was charged up to six thousand dollars, while the coach of to-day costs twice as much. The old-style baggage car used to cost three thousand dollars; the baggage car of to-day costs five thousand dollars.

Still more remarkable, because it covers a period of only ten years is the controversy of the dining car of 1899 and the diners used to-day. The former cost fourteen thousand dollars each; the latter twenty thousand dollars each.

In any other business, industry, or enterprise, the producer would be expected to raise the price of his production so that it might in some way keep pace with the cost of production; but in the railway world the price of transportation has been going down considerably while the cost of production has increased.

These various improvements, these heavy cars and locomotives and various other additional expenses, all of which go into the cost of production of transportation, which is the one commodity the railway has to sell.

The rail over which we travelled twenty years ago weighed 56 lbs to the yard. To-day it runs 90 to 110.

Bridges are to be strengthened or rebuilt; proper terminal facilities have been provided. In fact, the railway as an industrial plant has been improved from the foundation up, and yet the public has not been asked to share in any measure these expenses. The cost has been to the railroads, the increase in speed and comfort has gone to the public. It is rather remarkable that these facts are seldom referred to in the newspapers of to-day.

"NOT GUILTY" IS JURY'S VERDICT

In Case of Hattie Le Blanc Charged With Murder of Clarence H. Glover--The End of a Murder Case That Has Attracted International Attention.

Special to The Review.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 14.—The jury in the case of Hattie LeBlanc the French-Canadian girl charged with the murder of her employer, Clarence H. Glover in whose home she was engaged as a domestic, returned a verdict of "not guilty" this morning. The jury retired at 9.45 and brought in its verdict at 11.20.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

Wants Certificate Cancelled.

Albany, N.Y., Dec. 14.—Attorney-General O'Malley yesterday received a communication from M. G. Bucky of New York, a lawyer, asking him to begin an action against the Knights of Pythias, one of the largest fraternal orders, to cancel their certificate to conduct a life insurance business in this state, and appoint a receiver of all assets and property in the state. He also asks that the order be enjoined from doing any further business in New York.

Mr. Bucky, acting for Thomas Barber of Brooklyn, alleges that information, furnished by the supreme lodge of the order, shows that at the present time it is carrying insurance of the fourth class, amounting to $20,667,500, with cash on hand to pay this, totalling $615,568.

Entertained by Earl Grey.

Ottawa, Dec. 14.—His Excellency Earl Grey, has invited the members of the farmers' delegation, now en route to Ottawa, to Rideau Hall on Friday afternoon, where they will be entertained. Hon. Sydney Fisher has arranged to have them visit the Central Experimental Farm, and various courtesies will be extended to them by other Ministers and members.

Evans Suits Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Dec. 14.—Nothing like the enthusiasm displayed last night has been seen in Winnipeg since Mafeking night, when it became certain that Mayor Sanford Evans was returned by a substantial majority over the social reform candidate in the mayoralty election.

Floods In Italy.

Rome, Dec. 14.—So serious have the floods become, particularly in northern Italy, through the increased rains, that the King has expressed his intention to visit the inundated districts, and thereby give encouragement to the inhabitants.

Grave damage is reported from all quarters. Many villages are practically isolated, and provisions are being carried to the people by boats. Hundreds of soldiers and private citizens are aiding the sufferers.

ELECTORS ARE TIRED

Interest in the Long Drawn Out Fight Has Almost Ceased.

London, Dec. 14.—The election continues to drag wearily along. The public has lost interest, and the newspapers have given up publishing late editions. Fleet street and other points where returns are shown, are deserted.

The standing of the parties last night was as follows:

Government coalition; Liberals, 109; Nationalists, 58; Independent Nationalists, 9; Laborites, 36. Total, 302.

Opposition: Unionists, 240.

There were 42 pollings yesterday, but the results in only six constituencies were announced last night. No change was recorded in these. The coalition has, therefore, one gain to the good in the election so far. In Monday's elections the results were announced yesterday afternoon. The Liberals won in Newmarket, and the Nationalists in Mid-Tyrone, both from the Unionists, while the latter equalized affairs by capturing Bodmin and Torquay.

Party feeling continues to run strong in Cork, where there are conflicts daily between the opposing factions. David Sheehy, member of the House, in a riot yesterday, was struck by a stone and so badly injured that he remained unconscious for some time. Not less than 100 persons have been surgically treated in the Cork infirmary since the elections began, and 80 were admitted in one night.

Philip Snowden, the Socialist member for Blackburn, announced last night that after the veto question had been disposed of, the Laborites would press for the passage of an electoral reform bill, to abolish plural voting, to which he ascribed the Unionist successes in many districts.

Saskatchewan Stays Wet.

Regina, Dec. 14.—The latest returns give no doubt but that local option has been defeated in Saskatchewan. Out of 26 places heard from the by-law was carried in seven and defeated in 16.

The only city to go dry was Moose Jaw, while Regina defeated the measure by 89 votes and Saskatoon by 20, while Prince Albert defeated it by 321 of a majority.

Generally speaking, the bylaw has been defeated in the cities and towns, only one town out of eleven going dry and one city.

In the rural districts the measure received the greatest support.

Both sides express satisfaction, the temperance people taking the vote as a sign that the movement has made great progress and will be successful next time.

In Saskatoon tenders are being called for the erection of the proposed new $250,000 hotel.

In this city the business men voted against the measure.

THE DOMINION GRANGE WILL DEMAND TARIFF REDUCTION

Resolution is Passed at Toronto Meeting of Farmers—Want a Greater Preference for England in Canadian Market and Free Trade or Reciprocity in Farm Implements.

Toronto, Dec. 14.—The Dominion Grange yesterday convened in Victoria Hall for its thirtieth annual convention, preparatory to the agricultural assault on the Ottawa Government on Friday on tariff matters.

The evening session was devoted mainly to discussion on a committee report of the articles which the western associations wanted put on the free trade or reciprocity list. The report was as follows: "That this committee is in favor of reciprocal tariff with the United States on agricultural products, agricultural implements, vehicles and parts thereof, and free trade in all articles in which it may be obtained, also that the British preferential tariff be raised from 33 per cent. to 50 per cent., thus cutting the tariff on British imports one-half."

"After some warm discussion the report was carried by a small vote, only to be rescinded again a few minutes later. Some of the delegates declared that to give the United States a preference over Great Britain in articles manufactured and exported from the latter place, was manifestly unfair. Finally it was moved to drop out the clause relating to free trade in other articles, and this motion was carried unanimously. As England exports no agricultural implements or products, the delegates were of the opinion that reciprocity or free trade in these would be beneficial.

"The tariff as it is now is extremely objectionable to farmers," said the report of the legislative committee. "Not only does it bear too heavily upon their industry, but it has created an avenue for the promotion of trusts combines, and kindred monopolies to rob agriculture of its honest earnings and detract from it the labor it so much requires to prevent a backward tendency in its productiveness. Our position has assumed a marked change since we last met. In the past we have been asserting our opinions and then lapsing into silence. Now we are before the citadel demanding that our desires receives recognition and that the pillage of our industry be at least curtailed.

As for reciprocity with the United States, the committee said: "We desire to urge that any step that the United States may take toward closer trade relations with our people may be cordially met by our Government, and that our delegates now about to proceed to Ottawa, especially promote this question and let no petty jealousies of national prejudices interfere with a question so vital to the interests of agriculture."

The report of the committee also very much regretted that our Government has undertaken the creation of a Canadian navy, notwithstanding the evident opposition of the public to such a policy, and we deem it even yet advisable to have the verdict of the people in a plebiscite before continuing such a scheme that is destined to bind an unwilling people to a system they abhor."

The delegates left for Ottawa last night, and, after convening with the delegates from the western associations, will join forces with them and march on Parliament, where they will demand tariff reduction. It is expected that over one thousand delegates will participate.

BOBBY LEACH LUCKY.

Boat Went Over the Falls Alone and Was Wrecked.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 14.—Diving on to a partly submerged rock midway between the upper and lower river in Horseshoe Falls, Mitchell's patented lifeboat, in which Bobby Leach intended to go over the Falls, was badly wrecked at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The trial trip proves that Leach would have lost his life if he had made the trip yesterday.

It was 1.14 o'clock when Richard Greenwood towed the boat out into Niagara River from Chippewa Creek, and the wind caught it and carried it ashore on Hog Island. Greenwood then towed it out nearly to midstream. James Mitchell, the 80-year-old inventor of the lifeboat, boarded a waiting trolley car and was rushed to Table Rock House, where several hundred persons were waiting to see the craft make its 158 feet drop over the cataract.

The lifeboat was carried toward the shore of Goat Island as it neared the falls. Riverman watching the boat's progress from Table Rock decided that the boat would be dashed to splinters when it went over the cataract, because of the many rocks at the foot of the Horseshoe Falls near the Goat Island side. Just before the craft reached the Three Sister Islands it arose out of the water for a few seconds and appeared to hang suspended in the air; then it seemed to drop out of sight.

Search revealed the craft held securely above the falls. When the boat was released, it was sent again on its journey towards the falls. It went over the cataract almost at the middle of the Horseshoe.

James Mitchell is disheartened. The boat is floating around near the Canadian landing of the Maid of the Mist.

Watching Americans.

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, Dec. 8 (via New Orleans, Dec. 14.)—A guard of soldiers is placed every night around the local hotel here where the foreign visitors and business men stay. Ostensibly this guard is for the protection, but the real object is to watch the Americans.

The Government fears a revolution, and suspects that American soldiers of fortune may be masked behind every Yankee passport presented. It is reliably reported that the hotel guard is under instructions to see not only that Americans are not permitted to join in any fighting which may start, but that they shall not be allowed to get out at night and start trouble on their own responsibility.

Disarm Dreadnoughts.

Rio Janeiro, Dec. 14.—Radical changes in the personnel of the Brazilian navy will be made as a consequence of the two recent mutinies. The Government has ordered the disarmament of the Dreadnoughts Sao Paulo and Minas Geraes, the battleship Deodora and the scoutship Bahia. The crews of these vessels have been already imprisoned in a fortress on the Island of Villegaignon, in the centre of the bay.

All of these warships will have new crews throughout.

Even yet there are many residents of the city who fear to venture within its limits for fear another bombardment will take place.

Friends Once More.

Buenos Ayres, Dec. 14.—Friendly relations were re-established yesterday between Argentina and Bolivia. The trouble between the two countries originated in Bolivia's resentment of the decision rendered by President Alcorta, the arbitrator of the Bolivia-Peru boundary dispute, it being alleged that he had favored Peru. Yesterday Gen. Pando and Senor Portalla signed a protocol resuming diplomatic intercourse.

Was Drouillard Murdered?

Sandwich, Dec. 14.—As a sequel to the disappearance of Dolphis Drouillard, the River Canard farmer, who has been missing since Sunday, Dec. 4, License Inspector Pacaud has laid complaint against the proprietor of the Brighton Beach Hotel with selling liquor during prohibited hours. It was at Reaume's Hotel that Drouillard is said to have spent some time the evening before he disappeared.

Friends of Drouillard are excited over the statement of a Detroit clairvoyant, who described a drinking bout, and told them he was murdered in a woodshed afterwards, adding that his murderers threw the body into the river.

Trial Postponed.

Goderich, Dec. 14.—Owing to the absence of two material witnesses for the crown in the case of the King v. J. [illegible] Armstrong, the Lucknow druggist charged with making a fatal mistake in filling an order, an adjournment of the case was granted when it was brought up in the court yesterday afternoon before His Honor Judge Doyle. One witness had gone south for two months, before he could be subpoenaed, and ill-health prevented another from appearing. The date of the trial has not been set, but it will probably be held some time in March.

Not a Rioter.

Brockville, Dec. 14.—It took a jury one hour yesterday afternoon to acquit William Kerr of a charge of participation in the riot at the Grand Trunk depot here on the night of July 22, during the trainmen's and conductors' strike.

It will be recalled that the doors of the offices of the agent and telegraph operators were forced by the mob to get at the "scab" and detectives who had taken shelter, a heavy truck being used as a battering ram. Two witnesses, who observed the truck in operation, and knew Kerr personally, swore he was not one of the guilty parties.

A Strike Meeting.

Winnipeg, Dec. 14.—The street railway employes will hold a mass meeting at midnight to-morrow to decide whether or not they shall strike.

Cross for Archbishop Gauthier.

Kingston, Dec. 14.—The priests of the archdiocese of Kingston will present Archbishop Gauthier, on the eve of his departure for Ottawa, after New Year's, with a beautiful pectoral cross, inlaid with the choicest amethysts and attached to a heavy gold chain.

Confesses to Shooting.

Philadelphia, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Marie Lakjer Clapp, wife of Herbert Mason Clapp, the wealthy clubman now in St. Joseph's Hospital with a bullet wound in his neck, yesterday confessed to the police that she deliberately shot her husband to protect herself. Her signed confession is now in the hands of Captain of Detectives Souder.

The statement sets aside the first story told by Mrs. Clapp, in which she is alleged to have declared that the shooting was accidental, and that Clapp was shot while the two were struggling for possession of the revolver.

At St. Joseph's Hospital it was stated yesterday that Clapp's condition was improved, and unless unlooked for complications set in, he would recover. He still intends pressing the charge of intent to kill against his wife, and is exceedingly bitter against her.

Association Justice Edward Douglas White of Louisiana, will be Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, vice Melville W. Fuller.

POWER ON THE FARM

Hon Adam Beck has announced that the Provincial Government, through the Hydro-Electric Commission, is preparing to extend the benefits of its power policy to the farmers. The plan, in its general outline, is to extend the power lines from centres somewhat on the same plan as telephone lines are carried through some agricultural districts, the farmers and the commission co-operating in their construction. By this the electric current will be conveyed for use on the farms at a voltage that can be used in operating machinery for much of the work, and can no doubt be used for lighting purposes as well.

It may be that the days of the traction engine, which supplanted the old horse power, are numbered, in many sections, and that the churn, the separator, the washing machine, the straw-cutter and all the other smaller machines will be run by the motor. Farm life has been greatly changed by the introduction of machinery within the life of men still engaged in agriculture, and further changes are coming. From the flail to the electrically driven threshing machine will be a long stride for one man to have seen, and the woman who has operated the churn dasher and who will skim her milk and churn her butter by turning a button will marvel at the advance. There are many uses to which electricity can be put in the country as well as in the city. Electric light will be a boon in both barn and house, and will be welcomed on account of its safety as well as its convenience, and when houses and barns are lighted roads may also be made more easily and comfortably travelled at night. Once the power is in use, its adaptability to further uses will be discovered and the time and labor saving will be increased.

ARMAMENT LIMITATION

President Taft informed Congress in his message that he had invited expressions from the other powers of the world on the proposition of limiting armaments by international agreement. Movements in this direction have before been made and have failed, but that is not sufficient reason why other efforts should not be made or that success should not be reached. If the United States is leading in a movement for limiting the suicidal expenditures on armaments succeeds in bringing about an agreement, it will do the world a very great service. Serious persons cannot but be appalled by the enormous sums that are expended to provide means and machines for the purpose of destruction, and the manner in which the nations prepare to attack each other, or to defend themselves from the attacks of others as each prefers to put it, is a disgrace and a menace to civilization. Even the maintenance of our own two small fighting vessels will cost one million dollars a year, to which will have to be added the cost and maintenance of the other vessels of the programme, and the naval college, docks, etc. But the aggregate sum diverted from other purposes and expended upon navies and armies is so immense that one wonders why industry has not staggered more perceptibly under the burden.

There are rifts in the cloud. The calling of the first peace conference at The Hague, little as it seemed then to have accomplished, was one of the great events of the century. Arbitration is taking the place of force in settling international differences, slowly no doubt, but we hope surely. Canada and the United States has just had a serious dispute settled by that means. At the time that the Russian gunboats in their panic attacked the British fishing boats in the North Sea the way had been opened for a reference to an international tribunal was all that prevented a war between Britain and Russia, a horror that would have led to further horrors, for other powers would have been embroiled.

An extension of the principle of international arbitration leading to an international court, regularly constituted and regularly resorted to, and an agreement to limit armaments, is what the world needs and hopes for. When the civilized powers have no need to fear each other, they will only need to maintain armaments that, co-operating, will be sufficient to protect them from the uncivilized—a condition approaching the English poet's dream of "the federation of the world and the Parliament of man." Yet it only requires the exercise of common sense and common good-will.

FEDERAL REPRESENTATION

It is not surprising that the provincial premiers and other members of Provincial Governments who assembled in Ottawa last week, did not reach a conclusion on the request from the Maritime Provinces that a change be made in the basis of Federal representation. The question is one of difficulty. By the British North America Act—our constitution—the Province of Quebec is entitled to sixty-five members in the House of Commons, which forms the ratio of representation on which a decennial readjustment is based. The Act provides, "There shall be assigned to the other provinces such a number of its population as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec." If the population of a province increases faster than that of Quebec it will be entitled to more members, but if the population does not increase as fast as that of Quebec it loses representation after each census, as their lands are filled up, but the maritime provinces are in a different situation. It was found after the last census that the number of their members had to be reduced, and they fear a further reduction after the census which will be taken next year. Their request was that they be permitted to retain the same representation. If this were done, and the other provinces were held to the terms of the British North America Act, the provinces by the sea would have larger representation, according to population, than the western provinces. This raises the question of representation by population, "rep by pop," as it was once familiarly called, which raised such a disturbance in Upper and Lower Canada in the old days before Confederation.

The plea of the maritime provinces was brought up in the Dominion Parliament, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier intimated that he would not interfere in the matter unless the provinces unanimously agreed on some arrangement. This led to the conference at Ottawa, by which all the Provincial Governments, except that of British Columbia, were represented, but after a discussion it was decided to postpone further consideration of the question until a date to be decided upon. This would seem to leave the matter with the Dominion Parliament, and there it will no doubt again be brought forward, when Sir Wilfrid will again be called upon to face a responsibility he wished to shift to other shoulders.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Will someone explain why the Dominion and Provincial Governments will not allow any of their officers to be members of a municipal council? Other employers do not make such a rule, and if they do not find it necessary is there any reason why the Government should?

Mr. James J. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway, advocates free trade relations between the United States and Canada and believes that it must come now or not at all. It would be likely to benefit some interest, those of Mr. Hill for instance, for his railways connect the two countries and increased traffic between them would bring grist to their mill.

Rev. Dr. Johnston, of Galt, told his congregation what he would do "if I were editor." Here's a chance for the editors to get back with what they would do "if I were preacher."

There's so much room for improvement on both sides, however, that it pretty nearly behooves both the "long face" and the "short pocket" to make the most of his respective sphere without either adopting a policy of butting in or limelight infringement.

A Helpful Suggestion.

The young man had married the rich man's daughter and wasn't killing himself with work to support her. One day the father called him up to talk to him.

"Look here," he said emphatically, "why don't you go to work?"

"I don't have to," the son-in-law replied, with brazen effrontery.

"Well, you will have to."

"Why will I?"

"Because, sir, I can't live always to support you."

"But you will leave us something?"

"Not much, I won't. There won't be anything to leave."

The son-in-law was alarmed.

"Great Jupiter!" he exclaimed. "You don't mean to tell me that you have nothing?"

"That's about it."

The son-in-law devoted himself to profound thought for several seconds.

"I have a suggestion to offer," he said in a businesslike manner.

"What is it?" asked the old gent.

"Well, I suggest that you take out, say, a £20,000 life insurance on yourself to save wear and tear on my mind."—London Answers.

ZAM-BUK CURES PILES

Maritime Magistrate's Case

Mr. C. E. Sinford of Weston King's Co., N. S., a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick says: "I have used Zam-Buk for piles and found it a splendid remedy. It cured me."

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask, writes: I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I had a fever, which left me with piles. I started to use Zam-Buk, and found it gave me relief, so I continued with it. After using three or four boxes, it effected a complete cure.

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, eczema, bloodpoison, varicose sores, scalp sores, ringworm, inflammed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful imitations and substitutes. See the registered name "Zam-Buk" on every package before buying.

Presenting Cullinan Jewels.

Sir Richard Solomon, High Commissioner of the Union of South Africa, had the honor the other week, on behalf of the Government and people of the Union of South Africa, of presenting to Her Majesty the Queen, in commemoration of the Union of the South African colonies, six diamonds mounted as ornaments and cut out of the well-known Cullinan stone, which was discovered early in 1905 in the Premier Diamond mine, near Pretoria. The two largest of these diamonds, which are considered by experts to be of matchless quality, one weighing 92 and the other 62 carats, have been mounted as a pendant. Three, averaging about 10 carats each, have been mounted as a small pendant, and the sixth diamond as a ring.

It Generally Is.

Greatly to the pride and pleasure of his father, Lord Rosebery's second son, the Hon. Neil Primrose, was elected to Parliament for a division in Cambridgeshire.

During the contest, however, reference was constantly made to Lord Rosebery's opposition to the budget, which his son supported.

On one occasion the candidate was asked whether this action on the part of his father did not amount to "hitting below the belt."

"Exactly," said Mr. Primrose, "But when one's father does hit one, it is generally below the belt."

AN INTERRUPTED LOVE STORY

The Final Happy Meeting at the Old Stone Fence.

By KEITH GORDON.

At the tender age of eleven years she used to station herself behind the stone fence that divided their grounds from the road to see the boy pass by. Regularly at 8 o'clock five days in the week she was at her post, peeping over the fence very cautiously lest the boy himself should discover her.

There was something about this particular boy that she liked. His eyes were as blue as those of Gladys Arabella, her favorite blood doll. That in itself was enough to draw her stormy gaze like a magnet. But there were other things besides. There was the easy way that he sat on his pony, there was the way he pulled his cloth cap rakishly to one side, there was—well, there was a daring, dashing, fascinating something about him even at fourteen that proclaimed him one of the conquerors.

For weeks she had paid him the silent homage of that trip to the fence each morning. Then one day, waxing careless from long security, her black head and big dark eyes appeared just above it. He slackened his pony and stared at her with open curiosity.

"Hello, there! What you staring at, sissy?" he called out with boyish roughness. The head disappeared.

He waited a moment, but as she failed to reappear he dashed off down the road laughing.

After that it was his delight to catch her watching him. He would turn at the most unexpected moments to see if he could surprise her. But when, once in awhile, he succeeded in getting a glimpse of the gypsy-like head and the fiery dark eyes his brusque "Hi there, sissy! See anything green?" always had the same effect. She dropped out of sight.

* * * * * * *

It was a private school for boys kept by an old friend of the family. So her parents sought a place for her there when it was necessary for them to sail without their small daughter.

For her the excitement of being placed in the school where the boy went each day was delicious. They had known each other for a year—that is, she had watched him and he had known that she was there.

"My eye! It's the girl who's always peeking over the fence," he remarked to his chum at his first glimpse of the new pupil. "Isn't she a regular Indian, though!" and he gazed curiously at the straight, shining black hair and the black eyes. He did not mention to his chum that he liked shiny black hair and eyes like big dark stars.

After awhile he looked toward her and smiled, a foolish friendly smile. Instead of meeting this overture with the ladylike graciousness that her training had taught, she made up a face at him. Guess he wouldn't think now that she liked him—that horrid boy!

For some time after this he ignored her, but at last he impulsively proffered her a stick of horehound when they met in the corridor one day.

With a stamp of her foot she threw it to the ground. "If your mother makes you eat horehound, eat it yourself. I'm not going to eat it!" she flashed out with spirit. Then, in a tumult of happiness, she fled, leaving the astonished boy gazing after her with an open mouth.

"Spitfire!" was his greeting when next they met.

Thus the ice was broken. Morning after morning now he came to school with some offering for the girl. Often it was a bunch of roses begged from the gardener. "The prettiest ones you have," he would command importantly, never guessing that their fresh beauty was instantly quenched in the darkness of the girl's small trunk. Each time that she lifted the lid to put in a fresh bunch the exquisite scent of the withered ones floated out into the room. Years afterward the drifting scent of roses would bring before her the laughing face of the boy.

Once, indeed, it did more. It was a moonlit night in California. Propped up by pillows of mystical, Japanese design, she lounged in the oriental chair that was her special delight.

Her companion leaned toward her and began to speak in a low, eager voice. His words of love seemed natural—a part of the breathless enchantment of the time and place. Why not decide her fate now and have it done?

Borne on the light breeze that ruffled the leaves of the toyon tree at her side, a breath from the rose garden brushed across her face. A subtle change came over her.

"No, no, Hugh. Please stop, dear, please!" she pleaded. "I'm so sorry, but I can't say yes to you. I can't!"

She could not tell why, but it was the scent of the roses that had decided her.

The old boy and girl affair had died the usual death of such attachments. He had gone to college and she to a finishing school. They had sworn never to forget and to write twice a week. And for six months they kept their vow.

Later a certain society belle whose "dark beauty" was much exploited by the newspapers occasionally found herself wondering, in off moments, what had become of the boy. And he—one must not be hard on him. The world is so full of pretty girls, and his eyes were blue and daring, his shoulders broad, and he was gay and debonair.

* * * * * * *

She had reached the mature age of twenty-five on a gray day in November, and the girl and her companion paced aimlessly up and down the platform of the little Scottish railway station, waiting for the southbound train.

A handsome young man who had been taking a turn up and down the opposite platform, waiting apparently for a train to the north, glanced across at the people who, like himself, paced back and forth impatiently. As his eyes fell upon the tall, graceful girl with a face like a brilliant flower, he paused in astonishment. Then a wave of warmth and excitement surged over him and he dashed across the tracks and advanced with boyish eagerness toward her.

It was a pretty bit of comedy sparkling with pleasure, surprise, eagerness. Then the big black engine swept down upon them with a wild, triumphant shriek as much as to say: "No more of this nonsense. Come with me to London, young lady." And in the midst of their excited greetings they were obliged to part.

"Not married?" she laughed as he stood at the door of the compartment.

"No; I'm waiting for the lady fair," he answered gayly. "And you?"

"Waiting for the gentleman dark," she replied archly.

Then the guard called "All aboard," and as she waved her hand in gay farewell the train pulled out of the station.

The world seemed suddenly flat to him. "And I didn't get her London address!" he exclaimed aloud as his stupidity dawned upon him. "Well, I'll be banged!"

* * * * * * *

Two years later the servants at Fairacre received notice from their young mistress of her intention of opening the house for a few weeks. The old place had been closed since her early childhood.

She had traveled far and wide, been courted and admired. But after awhile one got tired—so tired. In the very midst of the season, when gayety was at its height, thoughts of the dear old days haunted her mind. They were gone forever, those wonderful childish days, but at least she would go back and have a bit of "make believe" all to herself.

Tears rose in her eyes as she was driven up to her own door. How well she remembered the quaint supporting pillars and the broad veranda! The sun was just dropping out of sight, but its faint golden glow lingered lovingly on the place. In the darkness of her old room that night she thought with wet eyes of the little girl of other days.

At 8 o'clock the next morning she stole down to the stone fence once more, smiling foolishly to herself as she did so. There was no need to hide; the boy would not go by. And so she leaned upon the wall, thinking pensively of the past.

A weird buzzing aroused her, and she looked up to see a big red touring car spinning down the road toward her. For a moment she watched it indifferently. Then as it drew nearer and the outlines of its occupant became clear her heart jumped with delight.

"It's he; it really is!" she exclaimed excitedly.

At the same moment the automobile slackened speed, and the man inside lifted his hat with a flourish and sang out joyously: "Hello, little girl! What you staring at?" As of yore, she dropped suddenly down out of sight.

"But isn't it strange that you should happen along this very first morning that I'm home?" she queried when, their nonsense over, they stood talking across the wall.

"Well, not so odd as it would have been if I had not known you were coming," he admitted laughingly. Then a queer look came into his eyes.

"Why haven't you married?" he demanded abruptly. She opened her lips to reply, but something in his face arrested her. She flushed furiously. He laid his hand on hers.

"Haven't we been a pair of idiots?" he asked, with a happy laugh.

The Gladiolus.

I believe if I were limited to just one flower for my own growing I would choose the gladiolus in preference to anything else. It has absolutely no insect enemies and no diseases. It has every color in the rainbow. It is beautiful either growing or picked. It blooms for three months steady. And, best of all, it will grow and bloom in any soil, any weather and for any one. I have never known any one to fail with it if he had good bulbs to start with. Another thing, it is a case where you can "have your cake and eat it, too," for, besides the beautiful blooms, the bulbs increase about threefold, and your supply keeps on increasing from year to year. Most people when you speak of gladiolus think of the old fashioned red and yellow flower common a generation ago and have no idea of the immense improvement that has taken place in it. Every color of the rainbow is now represented, and in form and color and size no lily or canna can equal it. Some of mine are six inches across and of the most wonderful and beautiful coloring imaginable.—Henry Field.

A Strenuous Life.

A remarkable career has been that of Captain Pentecost, commander of the Cunard liner Saxonia, who has retired from the company's service. He was born in Sydney, N.S.W., joined the Cunard in 1896, being appointed commander in 1904. While in Burma he was attached to the Irrawaddi flotilla. He holds the Brazilian captain's certificate, also a first master's certificate for the inland waters of Bermuda. Captain Pentecost's escapes from death have been as varied as his nautical career. On three occasions he fell from aloft while at sea, was washed overboard twice during gales, and once, off the Cape of Good Hope, he had a narrow escape from drowning. The damage to his body in these accidents included the breaking of all the lower ribs on his left side and the fracture of one of his arms three times. Notwithstanding these experiences, the captain, who is now in the prime of life, looks robust and fit for many more strenuous years.

DISTINQUISHED CANADIAN AUTHORESS DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Mrs. McClung, Gave a Series of Enjoyable Readings Last Evening at Charlotte Street Lecture Hall, From Her Two Popular Books.

A rare literary treat indeed was enjoyed by those who grasped the opportunity of hearing Mrs. Nellie McClung, the distinguished Canadian authoress, give a series of readings at a concert last evening in Charlotte street lecture hall.

Mrs. McClung's reputation as a peer among contemporary women writers is too widely known to need any additional comment, and last evening she established a warm place for herself in the hearts of an intelligent and interested local audience.

Her selections from her popular work, "Sowing Seeds in Danny" and its sequel, "The Second Chance," were were undeniably excellent from every standpoint of her powers of description are second to none. She in addition, possesses a very pleasing personality and a clear and expressive articulation which enables her to be easily understood by all. She seemed to impress her hearers with what was uppermost in her mind at the time her books were written, and her recitations were given with a meaning which only the author of such productions can give.

Her description of "How Pearl Reported the meeting of the Ladies' Aid," was very humorous and she was enthusiastically encored.

Her other selections proved to be in similar high class and she possesses the faculty of mingling humor and pathos in her work, to a singular degree.

Judge Huycke presided in very acceptable manner and made a timely and eulogistic speech of welcome to the entertainer of the evening.

Several musical numbers of a very high order, contributed to make the entertainment more enjoyable and they were each heartily applauded.

The artists were Miss Helen Davies, Miss Olive Howell, who contributed vocal selections, and a piano duet by the Misses Clarry and Campbell.

Altogether the concert was a delightful affair and the Young Ladies' Mission Circle, under whose auspices it was held are deserving of the most praiseworthy comment for providing such a pleasant and instructive evening.

FINE IN ONE CHARGE; TWO OTHERS DISMISSED

Frank Arkles Objected to Being Called Names and Assaulted.

Frank Arkles neglected to act on the advice of Magistrate Dumble and have witnesses subpoenaed to bear him out in a charge of assault at the police court this morning, and the young man against whom he took action, was discharged by his Worship.

The defendant, however, was found guilty of having used abusive language towards Arkles and a $1.00 fine was registered with five days' grace.

Mr. Basel Hall appeared for Arkles.

The trouble took place on Hunter street east, yesterday, Arkles claimed he was called a "sucker," "a hot air shooter" and a "vag." An invitation to a fistic argument be declined.

In the evening the two met again, and Arkels' face was battered up like a lemon prize fighter. The beautiful blue, encircled his left eye and the same color was prominent on his left cheek, as he took the box this morning. He bore other battle marks.

A witness picked up from the court attendance by the chief, gave the Magistrate the necessary information to warrant the dismissal there being evidence that Arkles had called the other a vile name and talked fight.

Another charge for November 30th, the Magistrate would not consent to go ahead with.

Until you have actually tried PURITY FLOUR you may demur at the trifle more it costs you than lower grade flours cost——but your first sack will show you why that seemingly higher price is a real economy for you

PURITY FLOUR

That trial sack (which you ought to order this very day) will teach you what Purity Flour is worth to you, as contrasted with an ordinary flour.

PURITY FLOUR is milled from only the kernels of the choicest Manitoba hard wheat—the world's wheat standard.

From the 84 grain elevators which we own and operate, we select the finest wheat of the year's crop. This, at our mills, is so treated that only the most richly-nourishing part of the wheat berry gets into a PURITY sack or a PURITY barrel.

The result is a flour so strong that it produces more bread for the quantity used than ordinary flour

But bulk of product is not all you are to expect of PURITY FLOUR. You are to expect lighter, snowier bread; bread that has the nutlike, sweet, wholesome taste every housewife tries to put into the bread she bakes.

PURITY FLOUR, moreover, is not merely a bread flour. It is an every-purpose flour. It makes the kind of pastry you can be proud of—cake that invites praise—biscuits that suggest an encore.

Not only is PURITY the flour for economy's sake, you see, but the flour for quality baking. Thus, the few extra cents which it may cost you actually insures you against baking disappointments. PURITY FLOUR is the flour you will never be without, once you fully test its unusual merits.

Begin with a small trial sack, if you are dubious. Your grocer can supply you.

LAW HAS ITS DUE WEEDMARK HANGED

Executed at Smith Falls This Morning for Murder of His Wife—Maintained His Self Control—Was Repentant

Special to the Review.

Perth, Dec. 14.—Rufus Weedmark, who brutally murdered his wife at Smith's Falls, April 30th last, by choking the woman to death, was hanged here this morning.

Weedmark rose about 5 o'clock and dressed himself with care, afterwards eating a hearty breakfast.

The two clergymen who have been attending him, arrived at 7 o'clock, and spoke a short time with him. Weedmark walked to the scaffold with a firm step.

The trap was sprung by hangman Ellis at 7.26, with a drop of seven feet, and death was instantaneous.

The only persons present at the execution were the officials, the executioner, the two guards, the doctor and the two ministers. The clergymen say Weedmark had become penitent.

FOUR LONG WEEKS BEHIND PRISON BARS IS SENTENCE

Special to the Review.

Lindsay, Dec. 14.—George Roxy Walker, who escaped from the local police August 19th, after being tried for the theft of jewellery, was to-day sentenced by F. E. Moore, K.C., County Magistrate, to four weeks in the county jail, two weeks for theft and two for escaping from the custody of the law. Walker was arrested last week by a Toronto detective while working in that city.

JUDGMENT OF $175 AND COSTS FOR PLAINTIFF

Judgment for $175.00 and costs of action was given for the plaintiff by His Honor Judge Huycke this morning in the W. R. Morris vs Frost & Wood Co., Limited. Mr. E. L. Goodwill acted for plaintiff.

Yesterday afternoon the grand jury returned a true bill against Joseph Wilson, of Apsley, charged with arson, and the case is being heard to-day, having commenced after his Honor gave judgment in the civil action.

One witness for the prosecution was heard this morning before adjournment was made to two o'clock

CONSTRUCTION VS DESTRUCTION

Now that the British elections are almost over, and practically the same government is returned to power as before we shall no doubt, soon have an illustration of the value of a policy of destruction as against the practical policy of the Unionist party. The Liberal programme, as we have before stated, to quote Mr. Balfour, is totally opposed to the fundamental principles of the constructive policy of the British Empire. The two policies may be outlined as follows;

UNIONIST POLICY.
Construction.

A supreme navy.

Poor law reform.

Insurance against broken health and unemployment.

Housing reform.

Tariff reform, which means:—More industries, more employment, better wages, taxing the foreigner as he taxes Britain. Colonial preferment, Protection of British workers against sweated foreign labor and unfair competition.

Land reform.—State aid to purchase home or holding.

Licensing reform:—Fair and equitable treatment of the licensed trades.

Constitutional reform:—Reform of the House of Lords, abolition of the hereditary principle. Construction of a strong, efficient second chamber on a democratic basis, the people to arbitrate in case of deadlock.

LIBERAL POLICY.

Destruction.

Home Rule.

Destruction and disruption of Union.

Destruction fo all guarantees for civil and religious liberties and for peace and prosperity in Ireland.

No Colonial preference.

The Veto Bill:—

Destruction, not reform of the Constitution.

Destruction of a legislative system, adopted by every great civilized power.

Destruction of all guarantees against predatory, socialism and faddist legislation.

Disestablishment of Welsh Church—

Destruction of an ancient religious foundation, a great power for good cherished by a very large proportion of Welsh people.

The British people are usually accounted a far-seeing race, but it seems to us that to return the Asquith Government again to power is no tribute to their vaunted clear-headedness.

THE TIME, THE PLACE, THE SHOW

The time: Thursday and Friday December 15th and 16th.

The place: Grand Opera House.

The show: The Belmont Minstrels.

The talent: The best in the city.

The director: Holly Shepard, "the man who makes minstrels."

The style: Clear cut and entertaining.

The sale of tickets: Immense.

The minstrels and opera house orchestra held another rehearsal last night and everything is in apple pie order for the rise of the curtain. The boys went through the first part with as much confidence and certainty as a college professor would go through a Part I reader and the olio features were given with the true art of refined vaudeville.

Mr. Shepard is more than pleased with the way the orchestra is handing the music. On account of the many intricate movements and quick departures it is not easy to pick up but the orchestra fell right in line last night and are playing the accompaniments and incidental music to splendid advantage.

THREATS MADE BEFORE THE BURNING OF BARN

Evidence in Charge of Arson Against Joseph Wilson of Apsley — Complainant's Wife Tells of Actions of the Accused

Joseph Wilson of Apsley, was placed on trial before Judge Huycke this morning, and to the charge that on June 4th he set fire to the barn of Edward McFadden, also of Apsley, pleaded not guilty.

Mr. D. O'Connell is defending the accused and County Crown Attorney Wood is conducting the prosecution.

The first and only witness heard this morning was Ezra McFadden, the complainant in the case, who told of threats being made by Wilson and the subsequent burning of the barn.

The first witness this afternoon was Mrs. Jane McFadden, the wife of the complainant, who said that Wilson was at her home on the evening of June 4th. He was with another man, and both drank from a bottle of whiskey. She was offered a drink but refused.

MADE THREATS.

A pig came up from one of the fields and witness asked both men if they knew who owned it. Wilson claimed it as his property. Later Wilson's companion went away. Witness told Wilson to go away. He replied "if you don't tell me where that pig went you'll suffer this night. Wilson then abused her, catching her by the neck. Some time after this she heard Wilson say to another man that he would burn the barn; and witness said he also said he would have her life or that of John's, her son. This would be eight o'clock at night.

Witness went and milked the cows, some distance away and returned to the house again. Looking out towards the barn witness saw that it was ablaze. Both the horse stable and mow were burning.

She saw Wilson going down a hill walking away from the direction of the barn and about fifteen yards distant.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that her relations with Mrs. Wilson had been most friendly. There had been no quarrels.

THE SIGN OF THE PUCK

Brock street rink saw another good turnout of players for the second practice, last night. Naturally the majority endeavored to play a LONE HAND. Team work will be commenced right away.

Ben DUSTY has decided to locate in Picton for the winter, and take his pay envelope from the pro. team promoters of that place. He will have some good ones to travel with, and here's that the ghost walks regularly, Ben.

The hockey club of Marmora is in line again and ready to take a hand in the Trent Valley League.

The attendance and enthusiasm of the players, both junior and intermediate, makes it look as though the sacrifice made by the city league will not be in vain.

Will someone tip off the management of the ice works, that the Mercantile League would lend an ear, if a fair proposition was offered.

Like the youngster in the cradle, with his rubber five cent toy, the youth who peddles massives, is beside himself with joy, For the fight is on in earnest and the scrap for jobs is tight; these are times when games are captured, neath the quilts, in (DREAMS) at night.

Among the players turning out at (BELLEVILLE) for the intermediate seven are;—Edmunds, formerly of Stratford; Billy Allan, Toronto A.A, C.; Cummings and Armstrong, of Trenton's last year team; Bedford, Dr. Gilbert, of Varsity fame; Whalen, of Port Arthur; Pepper, C. R. Burrows and several others.

Mr George Mackie, of Seymour, was stricken by heart disease on Monday morning while in bed. Mr. Mackie, who was over 70 years of age, was well known throughout this part of the country. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon to the Norwood cemetery.

BLIND PIG IN TOWN.

Walter Robinson, who resides at the west end of the town, was brought before the Magistrate on Friday afternoon, charged with conducting a blind pig in the village. The evidence against him was very convincing and he pleaded guilty to the charge. He was given the option of a fine of $100 or three months in jail, and the required amount not being produced he was escorted to Peterborough on the afternoon train where he will be a guest at Castle Nesbitt during the winter months.

A Court of Appeal against the Voters' List for the village will be held by Judge Huycke in the town hall on Tuesday Dec. 20th.

SCOTT VS. GRIFFITH.

The amount of the judgment awarded to Mr. Scott, of Belmont, against Wm. Griffith, of town, at the County Court of Peterborough on June 20th, and which the defendant appealed, was reduced to $100 by the divisional court at Toronto on Thursday.

This was an action claiming $500 damages for refusal of defendant to permit him to enter into possession of certain lands, etc., which he alleged he had leased from defendant. At the trial judgment was awarded plaintiff for $400 and costs. Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough, represented Mr. Griffith.

LITERARY SOCIETY.

The High School Literary Society held a meeting in the school on Friday evening with Mr. Clayton Bohan as chairman. It was decided to purchase class pins. The colors will be blue and white, and the pins will bear the letters (H.C.S.) Havelock Continuation School.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

On Monday last Mr. W. A. Gunton, Provincial Inspector, and George Cochrane, of the Children's Aid Society, visited a house in Northern Belmont and found matters in a bad state. The mother with six little children, who are said to have been deserted by the father, were found living in an old log house with very little clothing to keep off the winter's cold. Five children were taken from this house, and committed to the Shelter in Peterborough. Four children were taken from a home in the west end, but upon the parents giving satisfactory assurances of reform, three of them were given back.

The following address was read to Mr. and Mrs. Webb on Friday last, when the W.A. of St. John's church said farewell at the residence of Mrs. (Rev.) Holdsworth:

The members of our Woman's Auxiliary owe it to themselves, the pleasure of expressing their appreciation of your valued membership of our society. We have in you one who has been constant in your sympathy, assistance and attendance, not only in the Auxiliary, but in other important branches of the parish work. Would you accept this present for yourself and this for Mr. Webb, in token of our good-will for you both, and our prayers that the constraining love of Christ may ever draw you in that service which shall in no wise lose its reward.

We trust that in your new home you both, with your family, whose departure also we regret, will enjoy health and happiness. With every kind wish.

E. S. HOLDSWORTH,
Hon.-President.

JENNET BARLOW,

AGNES WILLIAMS,

The Havelock auxiliary was called to Tweed to-day, where an engine left the rails while doing some shunting at that station.

The Famous Rayo

Gives the Best Light at Any Price

When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the least effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, or $20 for some other lamp, and although you get a more costly lamp, you can't get a better light than the white, mellow, diffused, unflickering light of the low-priced Rayo.

Has a strong, durable shade-holder. This season's burner adds to the strength and appearance. Made of solid brass, nickeled, and easily polished.

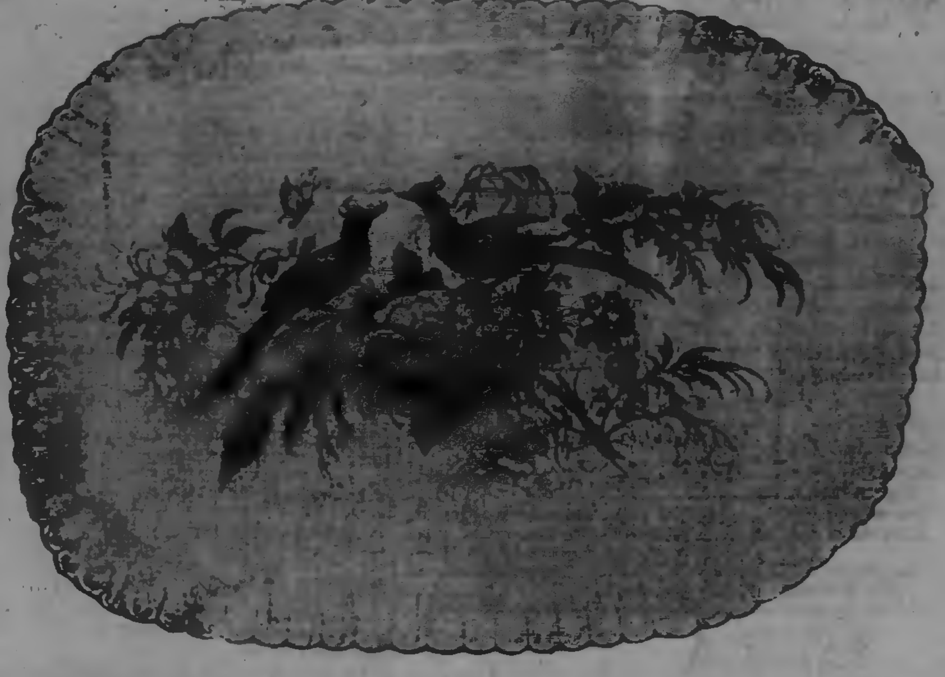
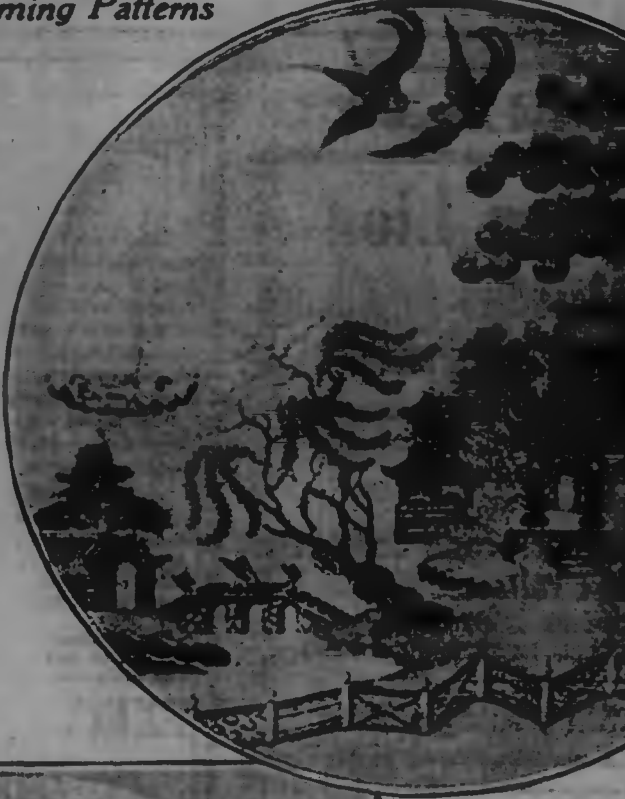
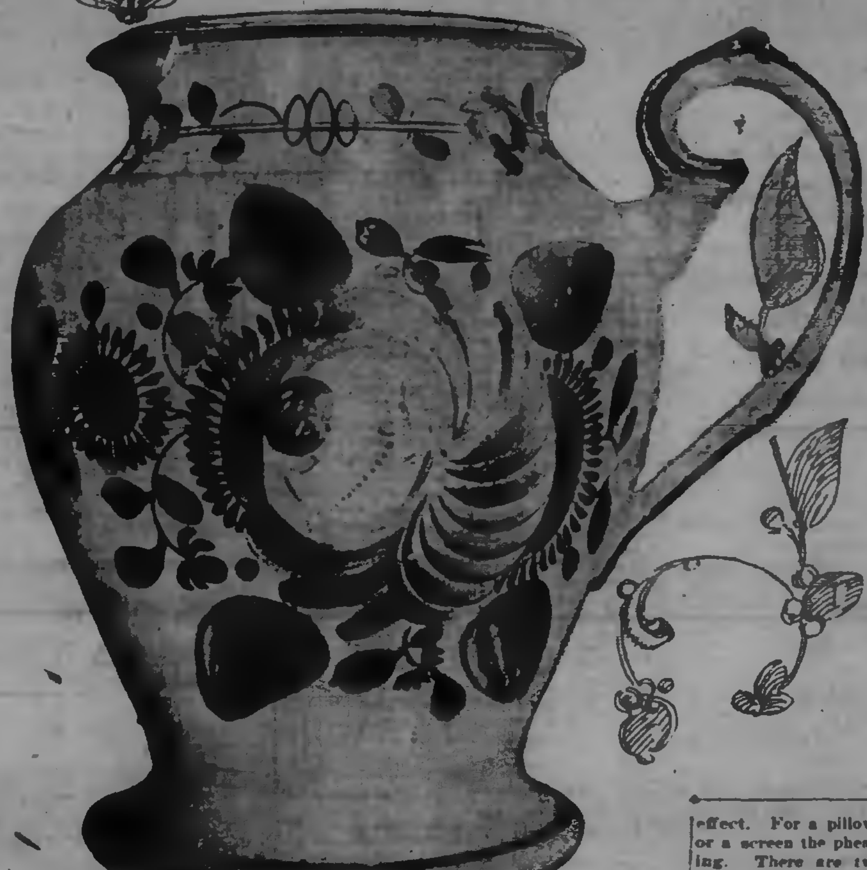
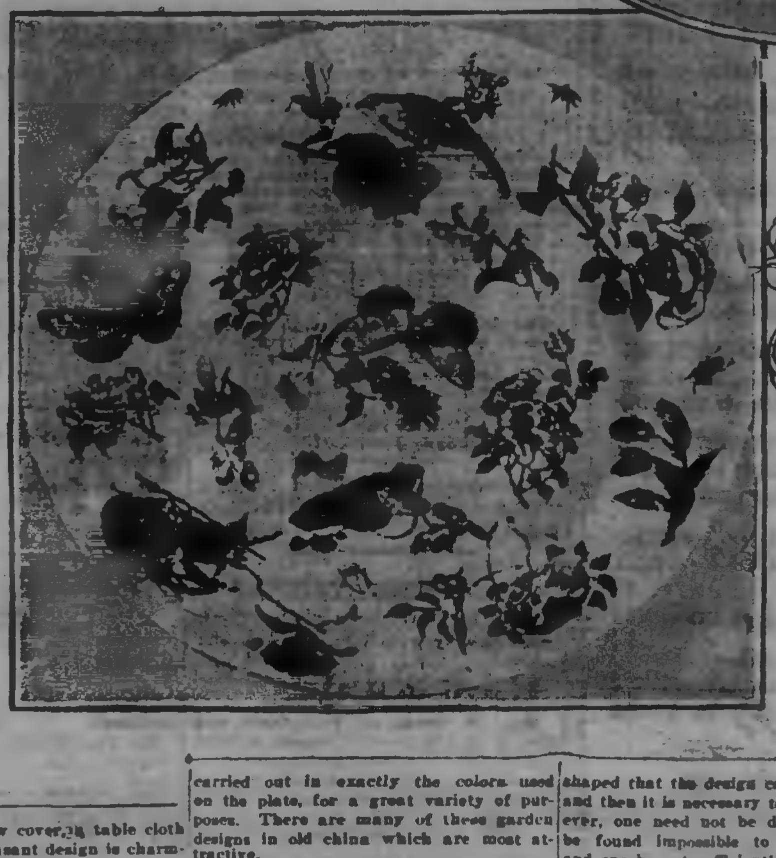
INDIVIDUAL Designs Worked Out from Quaint and Charming Patterns









GIRLS who are fond of embroidery and are in search of original ideas for designs will be able to find a great many interesting and quaint patterns suitable to different sorts of embroidery upon the old china pieces which are decorated in the beautiful old colors that have long been fashionable for cross stitch and all other forms of embroidery. A number of embroiderers who accomplish really remarkable pieces of work and who look upon embroidery as one of the fine arts have secured charming results by copying the old china patterns and are enthusiastic over the idea which offers opportunities for such a wide variety in designs and coloring.

One of the most interesting features of this copying from old china is the individual quality that may be had by using the old family pieces of distinction and beauty for this purpose. Those who are skilled in making the stamped or drawn patterns upon the material to be embroidered may do the transferring of the pattern themselves, while for the less skilful the services of a professional embroidery designer can be had. The pattern may be traced or copied, according to whether it is exactly fitted to the purpose for which it is to be used.

Many designs, no matter whether they are taken from old china, tapestry or brocade, although charming in parts, may be unsuited as a whole to the new purpose for which it is desired to use them, or they may be either too large or too small. Then it is necessary to copy them instead. This is not at all difficult for persons who possess some rudimentary knowledge of drawing, as naturally most of those who are in the habit of making designs do. If a girl is able to do this for herself so much the more interesting will the use of the old designs be, but even if she is not she will be able to simplify or modify the pattern to her taste and have some professional designer do the actual work for her. This will be a matter of small expense unless the piece of work is an unusually elaborate one.

There is no comparison between this sort of work when it is done after one's own designs or after old designs which one has had adapted, and the mere working of a slavish copy of a design which has been used a number of times and sold to any one who comes along, together with instructions as to what colors shall be used, &c. The one style of needlework is original and a true test of taste and skill, while the other at the best can be only a well done imitation of some one else's original. Consequently girls who wish their handiwork to count for something are more and more inclined to work out their own designs.

JUST at present there is in all needlework a tendency to revive old designs that makes the use of the old china particularly opportune. Those who have in the family—as who does not to some extent—very beautiful pieces of china will find it particularly pleasant to reproduce the designs.

On linen, white, cream or colored, the designs are very attractive wrought with colored thread in the same tones as those used on the china. The old willow pattern has been used most effectively on white linen for sash curtains in a girl's sitting room and also for pillows. If a large platter having the willow pattern be taken the embroiderer will find no difficult in tracing the design. Part of the design may be chosen and other parts left out completely if one desires, and this single design may be repeated as often as the shape of the article to be embroidered demands.

The dim design in the upper corner of the willow pattern is better omitted in the embroidery, as the other part of the design is quite sufficient, and the additional pattern would make the work much more difficult without adding to its effectiveness. For a blue and white room one or two pieces worked in the willow pattern are charming. At the same time the design is, of course, one of those which have been most widely copied in modern ware and it lacks the distinction of the more rare pieces.

Most attractive pheasant designs are to be found on some of the old china. One of these, when the outer border decoration of the platter is removed, is a complete design for embroidery, even to the scalloped and embroidered edge. Although in the original platter this design was in blue and white, it will be found possible to introduce a variety of colors with great effect. For a pillow cover, a table cloth or a screen the pheasant design is charming. There are two pheasants resting upon a branch of flowers, and both birds and flowers may be wrought in the natural colors. Linen with colored thread may be used for this design, but it is such a dainty one that it is also highly suitable for an embroidery in silk and gold wrought upon silk, satin or velvet.

Charming for an elaborate design is that to be found upon a beautiful old green plate in which, in dull shades of every hue, are represented flowers and birds, fruit and insects, fruit and leaf branches. Plump birds poised on branches interview bright insects, gay butterflies hover over cabbage roses and other old time blossoms, and queer beetles meander among flowering vines. Each object is interesting in itself, and the whole forms a delightful medley of color, suggestive of a garden. From this plate designs may be taken for the embroidered bed hangings which are so very beautiful and which many persons who have no need to be economical have made to order after designs made by artists of importance. For a pillow also this design may be used either wholly or in part, and indeed any one of the many designs to be found on it is suitable, without any modification, carried out in exactly the colors used on the plate, for a great variety of purposes. There are many of these garden designs in old china which are most attractive.

AMONG the very beautiful designs in old English china one plate shows a cluster of garden flowers from the centre of which two long stemmed blossoms extend across the plate. On one of the stems an exquisite humming bird rests, and above the bouquet flutter several butterflies. The coloring is closely copied from nature except that it is less vivid.

Not alone the platters, but pitchers, bowls and other pieces of china may be used for designs in embroidery, but of course the designs on the flat pieces are more easy to copy usually. A large flower design, which makes a very satisfactory design either for linen or silk embroidery, is shown on a pitcher. There is a large rose in deep pink and a supplementary design in white and yellow daisies and green leaves. If difficulty be experienced in tracing the design from a pitcher or any other piece of china which is not flat the tracing paper may be stuck fast to the object with wax or adhesive plaster, and this may afterward be removed with warm water, or, in the case of adhesive plaster, with alcohol. Sometimes, of course, a piece of china is so shaped that the design cannot be traced, and then it is necessary to copy it. However, one need not be discouraged if it be found impossible to trace a design and one be not sufficiently skilled to copy it without tracing. The field of design in old china is such a large one that if one pattern is not to be had there are plenty of others to take its place.

Not all old china is suitable in design to this purpose. Much of the old Chinese ware, for instance, is much too complicated in design to be of any use to the embroiderer. Where there is a mass of intricate geometrical designs or where there are pictorial designs so intertwined with the background as to be indistinguishable at some points the case is hopeless, so far as the embroiderer is concerned, and no matter how beautiful or cherished the piece of china the embroiderer will do well to abandon it as a source of inspiration for her needlework. Then there are other china designs which are far too simple and which depend entirely in the original on the quality of the china itself rather than the quaintness or beauty of the design. The daintily sprigged china belongs to this class, and no matter how beautiful it is in the original there is absolutely nothing worth while from the embroiderer's point of view. A fairly distinct design which possesses intrinsic charm apart from the effect given by the glaze or other quality of the china is the only sort which is worth copying.

WHERE an article is being made which requires corner pieces and borders as well as a central design the exercise of taste is very necessary, because a jumbled effect may easily be produced if the designs are not carefully adjusted to each other. It is always dangerous to add anything to a design or to take anything away, and so when there is any modifying to be done the entire plan should be most carefully considered. There are some patterns also which look well used singly and which are not at all suited to repetition. Others, on the contrary, are most effective when used in repetitive designs. The willow pattern looks well in repetition, and so do almost all designs which have a decidedly formal or conventional quality, whereas some of the garden designs look their best when used singly on a piece that requires only a central decoration. Some of the patterns, those with a quaint old fashioned effect, look specially well when done in cross-stitch.

Another point which the embroiderer who is using a new kind of designs which she has herself adapted must take into serious consideration is the use of borders, edges or finishes of any kind, for these naturally are not shown upon the original pieces as a usual thing. When it is necessary to use decoration in addition to the main design which has been copied from the china it is sometimes possible to adapt it from the border of the plate or other piece which has been copied. On other pieces a plain hemstitching will look best, or a cording, and again bits of the central design may be repeated for a border. These are all problems which must be solved anew for each design and for each fabric, and it is part of the pleasure of embroidering to work out these details successfully.

The New Combination Sweaters

THE sweater has come to be a recognised portion of every girl's wardrobe and one of the garments which is purchased as regularly as autumn succeeds summer.

For a quite young girl there is no model quite so smart as the middy coat of plain white with light blue or cardinal band borderings, and for hard service of navy with dark red stripes about the wrists, hip pockets and the nautical collar.

Similar color combinations are used for the thirty-six inch coats designed primarily for skating, but employed for a variety of purposes. These are double breasted from the tops of the shoulders, so that extra warmth is afforded to that portion of the body which most needs protection when a person is skating.

Also double breasted is the military sweater, which has strap fastened cuffs and collar which effectively prevent the wind from chilling the throat and arms, the full length coat which has a turndown collar, one in fancifully woven wool with a shawl collar and side pockets, trimmed with a contrasting color, and an absolutely new model having wide double panels which may be buttoned back when not needed or be drawn across the front when extra warmth is required and has a knitted belt which disappears through slits beneath the arms and fastens under the coat at the back.

Many of the single breasted utility sweaters of coat shape have the collarless or V neck, patch pockets and turned over cuffs, and the favorite colors are Oxford gray, dull green or pure white, but a model which is having immense vogue this autumn is precisely like the garment worn by football players and is drawn over the head, sadly to the discomfiture of the coiffure it must be admitted.

Next in favor is the Russian sweater, which is prettiest in white with dark blue or red bandings, the nautical coat woven in a heavy plain stitch and relieved with navy banded collar, cuffs, pocket flaps and right front opening; the one of angora wool which makes a girl look like a huge pussy cat if with it she wears a matching cap and the very closely woven and fitted affairs with narrow tight sleeves which were primarily designed to be worn beneath suit jackets.

Automobile sweaters, always in a class by themselves, are in most instances single breasted and fit the figure closely. Many of them are of fancy weave and the majority have high necks with closely fitted collars, long sleeves with tight wristlets and breast pockets for the purse and handkerchief. The chief thing to remember when buying a motoring sweater is to see that it is sufficiently large about the hips, as otherwise the figure will have an awkward, ungainly appearance. It should also be of precisely the right waist length and there should be no strain upon the sleeves between elbow and shoulder or wrist. Because of its elasticity, the size of a sweater may seem an unimportant detail, but it is one which should be accorded as much consideration as color or style if the wearer of the garment wishes to look smart.

What may be termed motor sweater accessories, since they should precisely match the color of whatever woven worsted wrap is selected, are the Shetland wool spencers to be worn directly over the blouse, the wool tights which terminate at the ankles and the veils of crocheted zephyr.

There are also several sorts of mufflers. One of hand knitted wool or silk is shaped to the throat and has a clasp closing and another is very wide at its centre, has a deep point at either side which covers the front and back of the head like a hood and has ends which are wound about the throat and drawn across the chest. With such a protection a motorist can defy any outburst of nature short of a cyclone.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY THE APRIL GRANDMOTHER

"THE girl who neglects her chin until its beauty has vanished is as little deserving of sympathy as the man whose motor is stolen because there is no lock on his garage," remarked the April Grandmother, who had been watching her eldest granddaughter try on one hat after another and then discard all because they emphasized the ugliness of her chin.

"When most hats were of a shape which exposed the brow and the ears no single feature attracted especial attention and a girl of average good looks easily passed muster, but now that only the lower part of the face is distinctly seen beneath the overshadowing hat brims the chin has become vastly important. And if it is not pretty the fact is deeply impressed upon the mind of the observer.

"Comparatively few people are born with a positively ugly chin," continued the April Grandmother, "but a large majority of them contrive to spoil the appearance of that feature by their manner of holding it. The very tall girl who is apt to be self-conscious, nearly always stretches her chin forward after the manner of a thirsty goose, and the fat one, serenely satisfied with herself, lazily snuggles her chin into her neck so that its lower outline is wholly buried. But neither one of these habits creates as ugly a chin as the one made by fingering its base until there is a wrinkled little bag beneath it or of keeping the teeth so firmly locked that the jaw becomes as square as that of a professional prize fighter.

"So difficult has it always been to convince girls of the evil effect of these habits that I regard the present modes in hats as a positive blessing, and while striving to undo the mischief of years the offending feature may be rendered less conspicuous by improving the coloring of the cuticle.

"Sometimes there are freckles on the chin, and if this is the case they should promptly be removed with peroxide, if possible, and if that harmless liquid does not prove efficacious, then with some lotion obtained from a reputable physician.

"The infinitesimal creases and lines to be found in all chins are the favorite nestling places for blackheads, and since motoring has become so general many girls have a complexion which appears to be dull and dark, whereas it is merely grimy because the portion of the face not protected by the goggle frames, and especially the chin, is so continuously showered with dust particles. Holding the chin over a pitcher of boiling water will force all of this dust to the surface of the skin and a thick application of cold cream will remove most of it immediately. After that the chin should be bathed for ten minutes or more with icy water in order to close the pores and prevent them from enlarging.

"A dimple is a most adorable addition to the chin," admitted the April Grandmother in response to a remark of her second oldest granddaughter, who possesses one of those indentations, "but it loses much of its charm when the flesh about it is not snow white.

"A girl who recklessly exposes her face to the winter winds will be certain to have a chin so red and rough that people will notice only those blemishes, and if she feeds on candy in and out of season her jaw will probably become heavy with fat.

"I did not intend to be personal, my dear," she apologized, turning to her eldest descendant, "but if your chin were single instead of nearly double any of those hat shapes which you found impossible would become you. They require a clearly defined lower jaw, and that you may soon acquire if, at night and morning, you will take the trouble to rinse a small towel in cold water and with it slap the under portion of your chin for ten minutes at a time.

"At present the lower portion of your face is merely over-plump, but if you long delay the day of reformation it will reach the stage where the line between cheek, chin and throat will be utterly lost. A clearly defined facial outline is an important requisite of a youthful appearance, and to retain it indefinitely one need only be careful, aided by diet and cold compresses, to keep the chin delicately round."

Furs Fashionable for Young Girls

THIS is a year when the least expensive furs are the most fashionable. At least the furs that are most in vogue are those which have formerly been among the least costly grades, although, of course, their widespread popularity has inevitably raised all prices. Soft gray opossum, pretty brown beaver, mink, French seal and then white fox—these are the kinds of furs that are fashionable for young girls this winter.

Collar and cuff pieces instead of long boa or wide stole are extremely smart, and a round shaped collar is bound to be lower in cost than a long boa or wide cape which has to be of considerable size to appear like anything at all. These collar pieces are shaped and finished in such a way that the one piece of fur can be worn with every separate jacket. The fur is lined with satin and then either pinned to the coat or attached by small hooks and eyes or clasps which will not show if the suit is worn at any time without the fur.

Some few of the new collar pieces are shaped square like sailor collars or else cut in pointed revers in front, but a plain rounded shawl collar is sure to be in good taste and is more likely to be suitable with many different jackets than is the collar cut in the less ordinary model. A long haired skin, as fox or lynx, is sometimes seen with the head of the animal left at one end, this piece fastened over the other where the coat fastens across at the top button. The tail of the animal is not left on and is seen only on the large flat muff.

The shape of the fur cuffs must depend largely upon the sort of fur. Long haired skins, as skunk, lynx, fox, &c., are generally round and anywhere from about three to six inches in width. The short haired skins, on the other hand, are sometimes pointed in the centre so as to be quite a little wider on the outside of the sleeve than on the inside. Beaver, French seal and mink are often shaped, but these skins, as well as the long haired furs, are just as often made in the plain round cuffs.

A muff should be as large as possible and flat. Schoolgirls do not, of course, carry muffs of so large size as their elder sisters, but the muff which a few years back was of apparently enormous dimensions will now look only a small affair. The envelope muff, with the skins open and laid over a tiny inner muff of satin, is still a favorite model, but a plain, flat muff ornamented with head and tails of the animal is equally in vogue. With the return of short sleeves has come again the long extension muff, as it might be called, with wide end pieces that can either be rolled back on the muff itself or pulled up over the kid glove almost to the elbow.

This muff is especially pretty in soft beaver, with boat collar, of course, to correspond. As short sleeve gowns are not worn in the street by young girls this muff is not necessary, but the same rounded shape, narrow at the cuffs, is a favorite one, as it fits up so snug and warm over the wrists.

Light gray baby lamb trimming a suit of corduroy or cheviot of corresponding color is extremely smart. The coat may be bordered all around with a narrow band of the fur, which with collar and cuffs attached and a muff to complete the whole makes a delightfully smart little costume.

Black fur is certainly not in the first rank of favor this year, and when a dark fur is desired beaver is the favorite. There are numerous different kinds of brown and yellowish furs that are fashionable, from leopard to muskrat. In the long haired skins brown fox is much in demand, and, of course, the pointed fox is always smart, although not so much in favor for young girls as the silver or gray fox or [illegible] the darker shades of brown fox are [illegible], but the lighter dyes are more youthful and are more attractive with a light colored costume.

White furs are as popular as ever for young girls. There is nothing so charming with youthful coloring as [illegible] white lynx and a wide white collar and large lynx muff will make a set that any girl can be proud of owning.

A fur collar is now always lined with satin or plaited chiffon, a double thickness of fur being seldom seen in any style of boa or stole whatsoever. A fur neckpiece which is not cut in the shape of a coat collar is generally shaped to give somewhat of a cape effect, with the double heads or string of tails at the back often caught down at each end on the front pieces of the cape, with an opening for the arms to slip through. This makes one of the warmest styles of fur collar there is.

In the short haired skins, as beaver, opossum, mink, &c., small flat collars are good for school wear, as they fasten close about the throat so as to be delightfully warm, and still they will look equally well with trim tailored coat or heavy ulster.

HE HAS RISEN

(By J. R. McCrea.)

Come, see the place where the Saviour lay,
Wake, view with us at the break of day,
Look, see, the stone has been rolled away,
And the Lord has gone.

Turn, and in sorrow our steps retrace,
Mourn, for no more we shall see His face,
Woe in our hearts as we slowly pace
From the tomb away.

List, 'tis a song that the angels sing,
Stop, as they pass on their pinioned wing,
Hark, they proclaim Him as Lord and King,
Of Heaven above.

Trust, and the promise to you and me,
Hope, for our sins He has set us free,
Joy, with our Saviour we'll ever be,
He has paid the price.

OLD FURNACE FIRE

The Stove Man Montreal Herald

How dear to my heart is the old furnace fire,
The old furnace fire we start up each year;
The tin pipes that hang suspended by wire
And coat up with soot each time we go near
The red, glowing grate we always admire,
Likewise the oak logs that the poets hold dear.
But there's naught that can equal the old furnace fire,
The old furnace fire we start up each year.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

(To The Editor of The Review)

Dear Sir,—The following quotation is taken from a report of my speech at a meeting of our Ladies' Literary Society, December 2nd—

"There was a very forcible sentence in Miss Holland's address. She told them the voice of the people was not always the voice of God. This was undoubtedly true, and otherwise lay the danger of unrestrained democracy. There is a right democracy and a wrong democracy, and when they were told the Catholic Church was opposed to democracy let them understand it was the false democracy she combatted—the democracy that made men omnipotent, and that set human law above divine, the democracy that was without God and without any reference to God or eternal justice; such democracy was a tyranny. There was a something superior to the will of the people—a something that was superior to all rulers and all law. That was the law of Eternal Right and Justice. The temporal power is not excused from the observance of this law, and a Christian state should be governed by religion, that is, it should be guided and influenced by the Divine Ideal Right and Wrong."

When referring to the right kind of democracy I had in mind the democracy of Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States, in all of which we have governments influenced by Christian principles, or the divine ideal of right and wrong. By the wrong kind of democracy, I meant anarchists and the red republicans of some European countries who are atheists.

Mr Burnham disagrees with my statements, and must, therefore, claim that the temporal order is independent of the law of God, and hence of God Himself. According to him, God has no dominion over temporal rulers, be they kings or the sovereign people, no right to sit in judgment on them. Their sovereign will and pleasure is the only rule of right and wrong. What the prince or the sovereign people will is right, what they forbid is wrong. Here is absolute political atheism. Mr. Burnham's principles are atheistic. Is he then an atheist? Let the public judge. This, no doubt, explains why he heaps such abuse upon Christians, why he makes statements calumniating Catholics; why he makes false assertions attributing to people things they did not say, why he claims the right "to think as he pleases and to do as he sees fit," as he must conclude, irrespective of the laws of God or Christian governments. Such principles are a menace to law and order, to the lives, property and reputation of citizens. Any person influenced by him is to be pitied.

OPENS DOOR TO FRAUD SO SAY OPPONENTS OF CREDIT SOCIETIES BILL

E. B. Osler, H. H. Miller and Major Beattie and George H. Perley, and Martin Burrill Speak In Its Favor—Success In Other Countries, Says Monk—Standard Barrel for Potatoes Is Advocated by Carvell.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—In the House yesterday Mr. Monk's bill to provide for control of co-operative credit societies was given a second reading. When clause 5, authorizing the credit societies, was reached, E. B. Osler (West Toronto) took exception, on the score that societies with practically no capital at their back would be able to take an unlimited amount on deposit, and lend it to themselves.

Mr. Monk contended that the bankers had withdrawn their objection to the bill when it was agreed that loans be limited to members, while Mr. Osler objected that a large sum be loaned to a member of the society, who might skip out before it was necessary to make a first report to the Government.

H. H. Miller, chairman of the banking and commerce committee, thought the proposed legislation was dangerous. Sheldon had taken millions out of the people of Montreal, and it should not be made easy for others to play the Sheldon game.

George H. Perley (Argenteuil) said it was his understanding that Mr. Fielding had agreed to the bill becoming law. It was in the power of the Secretary of State to confine the operation of any one society to a restricted area. He would be opposed to the bill, if a society could operate all over the Dominion.

Major Beattie (London) thought the bill would interfere with the operations of existing loan societies, which are properly capitalized, and which lend money at reasonable rates.

Mr. Osler explained that, while he was in sympathy with the principle of the bill, the necessity of putting a check on schemes of designing persons had been overlooked. He believed that if the bill were to become law, fifty societies would be formed within three weeks with objects of fraud.

Martin Burrill (Yale-Cariboo) objected to the attitude taken by Mr. Miller, that the banking and commerce committee of last session allowed the bill to be reported to the House out of sympathy for Mr. Monk. The House was dependent upon the standing [illegible] for approval of the bills referred to them.

Mr. Osler wanted to have the share capital of any one society restricted to $20,000, irrespective of any action by the Minister.

"Why should we limit poor people to any sum, if they are able to operate successfully?" asked Mr. Monk.

When the committee rose at six o'clock only half the clauses in the bill had been dealt with, and the remainder will probably be discussed on Thursday. The main provisions of the measure stand.

The bill of F. B. Carvell to have a standard barrel for potatoes, was given its second reading and reported. In addition to the 180-pound barrel, he desires a standard 160 pound barrel, because in Cuba, to which many Canadian potatoes are exported, that is the standard, and the Canadian farmer gets no more for his big barrel of potatoes in Cuba, than the American farmer for the smaller one.

A Big Merger.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—A cable from London, Eng., yesterday morning announced the formation of the Montreal Tramways & Power Co., with a capital stock equivalent to $2,000,000, for the purpose of acquiring all traction railways and power supply concerns in Canada.

In Montreal this is said to be the device at last resorted to by the financiers now in control of the Montreal Street Railway and of the Canadian Light & Power Co. for effecting a practical merger of the two concerns.

Falling Off In Wheat.

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—The preliminary estimate of the total wheat output of Canada for the year 1910, as communicated to the Parliamentary Agricultural Commission by Dr. Saunders, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Farms, is 122,785,000 bushels, a falling off from actual figures of last year.

The combined yield of wheat, oats and barley is estimated at 445,420,000 bushels. While the grain output has fallen off, that of hay and other fodder has increased.

Position of the Parties.

London, Dec. 15.—The results in the general elections announced yesterday leave the position of the rival parties unchanged. This is as follows:

Government Coalition—Liberals 223, Nationalists 26, Independent Nationalists 9, Laborites 38; total 381.

Coalition majority 80.

WEEDMARK IS HANGED.

Smith's Falls Wife-Murderer Dies on Gallows at Perth.

Perth, Dec. 15.—The last chapter in the tragedy enacted in Smith's Falls in the early hours of April 30, when Rufus Weedmark choked his wife to death, was closed in Perth Jail early yesterday morning, when the murderer gave up his life.

The execution took place very quietly. Only the officials were present, other than two clergymen, Sheriff MacMartin, Jailor Grant, Turnkey Lee, Guards Kerr and Graham, and Jail Surgeon Hanna. The newspaper men were refused admittance. In this respect Sheriff MacMartin, who was appointed early in the year, has established a precedent, and the execution was in marked contrast to two other executions here. Local newspaper men had sought permission from the Government in Toronto, but they refused to interfere.

Hangman Ellis and the assistant jail surgeon and ministers reached the jail shortly after seven o'clock. Weedmark was hanged at 7.30 o'clock, and the body was cut down eleven minutes after. Death was instantaneous, the neck being broken.

Weedmark walked to the gallows unassisted, and was accompanied by Canon Muckleston and Rev. R. G. Blundell, Baptist minister. He met his end without flinching.

He retired Tuesday evening about the usual hour, slept well, woke himself at five, said prayers, and ate a good breakfast.

The black flag was hoisted on the jail immediately after the hanging.

Weedmark was steadily visited by local clergymen during the time he was confined in jail. At first he bitterly resented any reference to his dead wife, but the clergy's visits bore fruit. He had been visited by his sister and some of his children. One of his daughters some weeks ago spent a few days in jail on a charge of theft, but they did not see each other.

Weedmark was visited on Tuesday for the last time by his counsel, C. J. Foy, who made three visits to Ottawa since the sentence of death was passed, endeavoring to have the sentence commuted. He went down on Monday for the last time, but the Department of Justice would not interfere.

DESERVES AN APOLOGY.

Picture of John A. McIntosh of Hamilton Published by Error.

The fact has been brought to the notice of the editor that a picture of Mr. John A. McIntosh, commercial traveler of Hamilton, was printed in these columns on Nov. 30, in connection with the issue of a circular seeking the apprehension of Edward Elmer McIntosh on a charge involving the disappearance of four thousand five-dollar bills of the Traders' Bank, and $1,800 in cash belonging to the Dominion Express Co.

The picture that is now discovered to be a portarait of Mr. John A. McIntosh was furnished papers as part of an official circular seeking the apprehension of Edward Elmer McIntosh. The accidental substitution of the picture of Mr. John A. McIntosh for the portrait of Edward Elmer McIntosh was a mischance for which this journal was in no way to blame. The circular, including the portrait, was an official document. That document was printed in the public interest without malice and without negligence.

This paper deeply regrets that the blunder of the officials who are responsible for the substitution of the picture of Mr John A McIntosh for that of Edward E. McIntosh should have been reproduced in these columns. This journal unreservedly apologizes to Mr. John A. McIntosh for the publicity given to his portrait, and while without any means of protecting itself against an official error this journal deeply regrets the annoyance that has been caused to Mr. John A. McIntosh, and trusts that this explanation, retraction and apology will make it clear that the portrait in question was published in these columns in the ordinary course of news without malice, without negligence and in absolute freedom from the slightest wish to question the high standing and thorough [illegible] of Mr. John A. McIntosh.

LINDSAY BANK CASE OPENS WITH OFFICIAL'S EVIDENCE

In Trial of A. B. McGill, J. J. Fleury and J. L. Coulter on a Charge of Conspiracy M. K. Cowan, For the Prisoners, Makes a Lengthy Examination Into Bank's Affairs, Seeking to Justify Actions.

Lindsay, Dec. 15.—Charged with conspiracy to defraud and injure the Farmers' Bank of Canada, A. B. McGill, former manager, and J. L. Coulter and J. J. Fleury, ex-employes, were brought to trial yesterday before Judge Harding in the sessions court. M. K. Cowan, K.C., is counsel for the defence, and N. F. Davidson, K.C., assisting. It is alleged that the defendants conspired to have funds withdrawn by depositors of the Farmers' Bank for redeposit in another bank.

J. G. Fitzgibbon, chief inspector and chief accountant of the Farmers' Bank, was the only witness yesterday. McGill went to work with the bank in April, 1907. Fleury started with the bank in March, 1908, while Coulter began in July, 1907. Their resignations had come as a surprise. He also told of the 15-day rule as to the withdrawal of deposits.

To Mr. Cowan, witness corrected a statement he had made at the previous enquiry, that a writ for $150,000 had been issued against the bank by New York State parties. It had only been threatened.

To Mr. Cowan, witness stated that $500,000 Farmers' Bank stock had been taken up at $125 a share. All the stock was subscribed for at $125 at the end of 1908.

Everything in connection with the resignations of McGill, Coulter and Fleury was done in an orderly manner. Fleury was to get $580 for the year, but he was not wanted for the whole year, and was let go. McGill got a salary of $1,200 a year. Coulter left on July 4. Witness could find no fault for them seeking positions elsewhere.

In the cross-examination Mr. Cowan made an effort to show that the action of the accused was justified and asked many questions regarding the bank's transactions.

Woodstock, Dec. 15.—An agreement was signed yesterday between the industrial commission and a number of promoters from Logansport, Indiana, which provides for the establishment of an automobile factory in this city. The company is capitalized at $200,00 and the bulk of the capital will come from Logansport. One hundred and seventy-five hands will be employed ten months in the year, and the city will guarantee the company bonds and give other concessions in the way of site, etc.

This is the fifth new manufacturing concern to be secured for Woodstock since the "boost Woodstock" campaign was opened a few months ago.

Apologized for Libel.

Sherbrooke, Que., Dec. 15.—The last has been heard of the suit brought by Sir Frederick Borden against W. W. Cotton, publisher, Cowansville, for $10,000 damages for alleged libel and slander. The case arose out of certain statements, published during the last general elections, reflecting on the character of Sir Frederick. It is understood that Cotton sent a letter containing a full retraction of the charges.

The Alberta Legislature will institute an inquiry into the conditions of mines in that province, owing to the Bellevue disaster.

Western Farmers Arriving.

Ottawa, Dec. 15—When all the members of the huge delegation of farmers have reached the city, nearly 1,000 representatives of the agricultural strength of the Dominion of Canada will be here to discuss with one and another grave problems that effect the welfare of the staple industry of this country. They will lay their views before the Premier and his colleagues to-morrow.

The first special train arrived from the west at 11.30 last night, bearing [illegible] delegates. The chief feature of the trip was a series of meetings held on board the cars each day, to discuss the matters which affect the farmers. The party was accompanied by [illegible] Davis of Prince Albert, and a number of members of Parliament traveled from Ottawa to meet them at Renfrew.

Smallpox In Quebec.

Montreal, Dec. 15.—The provincial health authorities admit that smallpox is prevalent in several districts throughout the Province of Quebec. In the Lake St. John region it is stated to be epidemic. There is one case at the Levis College and several in St. Rochs, a thickly-populated ward of Quebec City.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

GRANGE AND SHEARER HAVE HEATED DISCUSSION

HATTIE LEBLANC FREE.

Jury Finds Her Not Guilty of Murder of Glover.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 15.—The jury in the trial of Hattie Leblanc, the seventeen-year-old French-Canadian girl, youngest woman ever to face execution on the charge of murder in a New England court, yesterday returned a verdict of not guilty, after being out one hour and thirty-five minutes.

Whereas crowds have besieged the court house on the previous days of the now famous trial, yesterday only 47 persons came into the court-room when the doors were opened.

When court was resumed at nine o'clock Judge Bond at once continued his charge to the jury.

In his address he referred to a sore on the finger of the defendant, which, he said, the prosecution claimed was made by the backfire on the revolver.

The district attorney then corrected the judge, saying that the Government claimed that the sore was made by the flash from the muzzle.

"Do you mean that she shot herself?" asked Judge Bond.

District Attorney Higgins did not reply.

The court called attention to the fact that no experiments had been made with the revolver to show that such a sore as has been described on the defendant's finger could be made with the revolver, although the police have held the weapon for more than a year.

Judge Bond said that the jury had the right to infer what interests influenced testimony on either side. He referred to Attorney Samuel D. Elmore's receiving $4,153 from Mrs. Glover, and said that if Elmore was interested in collecting evidence to use in the case to make it clear that Mrs. Glover was not implicated, then both witnesses were interested.

When Judge Bond ended his charge, Clerk William C. Dillingham turned towards the diminutive prisoner and said:

"Hattie Leblanc, you now have the opportunity of saying anything that you desire."

Pale and frightened, the girl rose, folded her arms across her breast, and turned towards the jury. Her voice was so faint that her words could be heard only a short distance. She spoke with a pronounced French accent as she said:

"I did not do it. I want to go home with my father."

The jury was unable to hear her because she spoke so faintly, and her chief counsel, Melvin M. Johnson, repeated her statement for the benefit of the jurymen.

The jury then retired.

Don't Want Fortune-Tellers.

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 15.—The police are making war on the fortune-tellers of the city. Three women who had been forecasting lives at so much per life were placed under arrest. Others doing business in town will be driven out as rapidly as cases can be made out against them.

Rev. Dr. Burke Is President.

Rome, Dec. 15.—The Holy Father, having the terna of names presented to him yesterday by His Eminence Sebastian Cardinal Martinelli, protector of the Catholic Church Extension of Canada, nominated Rev. Dr. Burke of Toronto, president of the society, last June.

Filed Bankruptcy Petition.

Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 15.—John A. Howard, a Wheeling capitalist, and organizer of the Continental Telephone & Telegraph Co., the $2,000,000 corporation that was formed of independent companies to fight the Bell interests, Tuesday night filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The following statement was issued by his attorneys: "His assets are far in excess of his liabilities, but he is accommodation endorser of notes of the telephone companies aggregating $1,000,000. The step that Mr. Howard has taken will not in anyway retard the reorganization of the companies."

Misreported Facts?

New York, Dec. 15.—The paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has sent a letter to the Government Tariff Board asserting that the United States consul at Quebec, in reporting upon the available pulpwood supply for American paper mills from private forests in Quebec, "has suppressed data that had been furnished to the consul by the highest official authority in that province, and that the consul has misrepresented the situation."

Seventeen-Year-Old Girl an Heiress.

Philadelphia, Dec. 15—Roberta Buist de Janon, the seventeen-year-old girl who caused a country-wide sensation a year ago by running off with a hotel waiter, is to-day an heiress to millions through the death of her grandfather, Robert Buist, the millionaire seedman. Buist's fortune is believed to reach $10,000,000 and Miss de Janon, it is said, will receive most of the estate under the will.

Lost Heiress Found.

Kingston, Dec. 15.—Marie McCluskey, wanted as heir to a million dollar estate, left by James McCluskey, a New York manufacturer, has been located here. She is now Mrs. W. R. Ackley, and did not know of her good luck until she read it in a newspaper.

Died From Burning.

Elmvale, Dec. 15.—After his father had gone to work, Herbert French, who is about five years of age, tried to rekindle the fire with coal oil. An explosion followed, which burst the can and set fire to the child's clothing, fatally burning him.

Members Take Exception to a Remark—Moral Reform Resolutions Pass—Delegates to Gathering In Ottawa Are Instructed—Will Support Direct Taxation In Case of Drop In Revenue Because of Tariff.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—At the closing session of the Dominion Grange convention in Victoria Hall, there was some hot discussion when Rev. J. G. Shearer read a resolution which the Moral and Social Reform Council wished the grangers to adopt. The resolution regretted the action of Parliament in legalizing professional race track gambling, repudiating the contention that this is necessary in the interests of horse breeding, and expressed gratification at the action of the Provincial Government in suppressing demoralising pictures in cheap shops, especially fight pictures. This was unanimously approved, the dissention arising when reference was made to the suppression of social evils, by expressing the conviction that the criminal code ought to be amended so as "to make its enforcement more easy and effective, by providing for search of suspected premises with or without warrant, and by providing for a prima facie case, as is the case now with gambling houses and opium joints."

Some of the delegates expressed the opinion that this would give dangerous power to officials, and that houses might be searched because of a spite against the tenant. Dr. Shearer became somewhat nettled, saying he didn't think a body of farmers would find so many objections.

"Don't you think we know anything about law?" one asked.

"Why, yes," replied Dr. Shearer, "You seem to know more about it than the lawyers themselves."

Instantly some of the delegates took exception, and he added, "I mean that for a compliment." The members refused to accept the compliment, however, and the remark was withdrawn after repeated demands. Finally it was decided to amend the clause, making a warrant necessary. Then the reform resolutions were adopted bodily.

The Ontario delegates to the Ottawa tariff deputation were instructed to press for joint action for: (1) Reciprocal free trade between the United States and Canada in all agricultural products, fish and lumber. (2) Reciprocal free trade between the two countries in agricultural implements, vehicles and parts of same. (3) For an immediate lowering of the duties on all British imports to one-half the rates charged under the general tariff. (4) For a further gradual reduction of duties on British goods until complete free trade is established between Canada and the Mother Country.

The mayor told the session that the Canadian Textile Co. two years ago cut the wages of their employes by ten per cent., complaining that they were compelled to do it by lack of protection. "In that year," said the master, "the company cleaned up a profit of one million. It was a case of deliberate lying. There are no more persistent beggars than the cotton manufacturers."

A motion was passed endorsing suggestion that the grange should support the principle of direct taxation in the event of a drop in the country's revenue following the adoption of a lower tariff.

In the morning session the report of the education committee was read by James McKeown, M.P.P. It expressed grave apprehension at the increase of military training in the public schools, and said: "However harmless or beneficial this drill may be in itself, we fear that there is behind it a well-matured plan to make Canada a recruiting ground for the Imperial army and navy. Already we have essentially sacrificed control over our own forces both on land and sea, and, unless there is strong opposition to those who now have this matter in hand, we shall soon awake to find a worse condition than conscription, namely, our young men ordered abroad to fight the battles of the Empire," without our having any say in the matter. There is no need to adopt military drill to teach neatness, punctuality, obedience, alertness, and impress the value of unity of action and co-operation in effort."

The following officers were elected: Master, Neil Burton, Middlemarch; overseer, E. C. Drury, Crow Hill; secretary-treasurer, J. J. Morrison, Arthur; lecturer, J. G. Lethbridge, Alliance; chaplain, W. Waldron, North Walton; steward, R. A. Sutherland, Stroud; assistant steward, H. McMillan, Beaverton; gatekeeper, Jas. Fallis, Newbridge; Ceres, Miss McKay, Beaverton; Flora, Miss Wardell, St. Thomas; Pomona, Miss Philp, Whitby; lady assistant, Miss Robinson, St. Thomas.

Strikers Starving.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—Settlement of the garment workers' strike was put off yesterday when strikers in several places refused to cast ballots on the proposition offered by the employers. Union leaders are attempting to force a settlement of the trouble before any persons die of starvation.

The Strike Over.

London, Dec. 15.—The boilermakers' lockout, affecting 50,000 men, in the yards of the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation, ended yesterday with the acceptance by the men of the terms made by the employers. The yards will reopen to-day.

Seattle, Wash., Dec. 15.—Six men were drowned in the Snohomich River late Tuesday, when a cabin launch, containing 17 passengers, capsized.

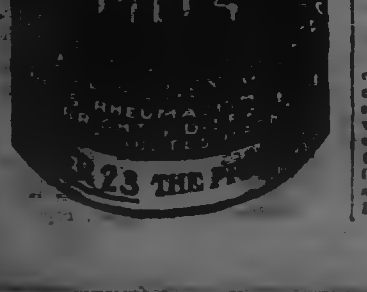
MR. ASQUITH'S MAJORITY

Language used by Mr. Asquith in Fife, as well as statements of his of this colleagues, indicate that the Government will accept a House of Commons made up as it was before the election, as an endorsement of their policy as a whole, and will proceed to put it into effect. This is to be expected, for any other course would disrupt the coalition upon which it will depend for support. The Laborites will look for further legislation on Socialistic lines, such as the promised insurance against unemployment, and if it should not be forthcoming and pressed forward they would withhold their support. The Nationalists will expect Home Rule to be on the programme, and to be put in the front rank of legislation, otherwise they will have no special reason to vote with the Liberals, or to support features of the Liberal financial legislation that is obnoxious in Ireland. And the various sections will unite in the demand for the abolition of the veto of the House of Lords, so that there will be a free course for the legislation they desire.

The majority behind the Government will still be made up of three parties, and they must be held together to retain control of the House, but so long as the Government adheres to the course it outlined, there appears to be no reason why it would not have the support of that majority.

THE ELECTION DATE

A Chatham contemporary suggests that the municipal elections should be changed to some other time in the year when the people have more time on their hands than they have about Christmas. This proposal has been made before, but it could only be satisfactorily carried out by changing the municipal year and not having it correspond with the calendar year. It would scarcely be acceptable to have members of the council elected earlier and yet not take office until the end of the year, for in that case there would be members carrying on business after they had been displaced, a system that seems acceptable in the United States Congress, but which has been discontinued in Ontario municipal councils. Until a comparatively few years ago the new councils in Ontario did not meet until two weeks after they were elected, and these bodies, as constituted in the previous year, continued with full power up to that date. Important contracts could be, and were, made between the time of the election and the meeting of the council for the new year. Now, however, the old council loses its power with the 31st of December, and the new council meets on the first Monday after election. If the date of election should be changed to an earlier one, either the old council would have to be permitted to carry on the business or there would be a considerable time when there would be no municipal authority. Otherwise, the transactions of each year would be controlled by two sets of members, which would confuse the responsibility to such an extent as would be unwise. It is possible that more attention would be given to the elections at some other time in the year, but we have never noticed a crush at the polls when by-laws were voted on in the summer months.



NAVAL FORCES ON STRIKE

Recent events in Brazil have shown a new danger to a country from the possession of war vessels. Not long ago the marines of Brazil went on strike, assumed complete possession of the men-of-war, and insisted that conditions of which they complained should be remedied, or they would bombard Rio de Janeiro. A strike, backed by such a formidable argument, even if it had not public sympathy on its side, was difficult to cope with, and it was successful. The Government acceded to the demands of the men with alacrity, and the navy once more was loyal and ready to defend instead of to demolish the city.

This was not an end to the trouble, however, for the naval forces that garrisoned a fortress have since revolted, and were assisted by at least one armored vessel. This revolt did not end in such a comedy as the first one, for the despatches tell of two hundred citizens and a like number of the rebellious garrison having been killed or wounded, and of a number of Government buildings in the city having been damaged before the revolt was subdued. South America has furnished strange spectacles in connection with its government, but the attacking of the capital and the killing of its citizens by its own navy is one of the strangest.

UNITED STATES INVADED

A Canadian company entering the United States to carry on manufacturing on a large scale is a new departure, and one that has been made by the Massey-Harris Company, which has purchased a large agricultural implement factory in New York state. We have become accustomed to United States companies entering Canada and establishing branches to supply the Canadian market, and some of them to manufacture for export, but to have this reversed, as it has been this case, is a new thing. Senator Jones, the head of the company, states that the company purposes manufacturing in their New York factory both for the United States market and for export.

What effect this new departure will have on the Canadian factories of the company is an important question to the cities in which they are located, and to the country as a whole. On this point Senator Jones is not as reassuring as we might wish him to be, for he told an interviewer that it was impossible to say in the meantime what effect it would have on the Canadian factories, although he "hoped it will have no adverse effect." Another statement by Mr. Jones to the 'Globe' is somewhat disquieting, and that is that there their "goods can be manufactured and delivered in the various foreign countries for less money than is possible here." Perhaps, however, this may not be taken too seriously, as Mr. Jones gave two other reasons for the step, one being that in the United States there were possibilities for immense business, and the other that their Canadian factories had been increased to the fullest possible extent, they being unable to secure more land for the enlargement of their industry in Toronto.

When asked if the company were influenced in the purchase of the works in the United States by reciprocity being much talked of, Mr. Jones replied that he did not think he had better try to answer the question.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is reported that the manager of one of Welland's largest industries says the works will be closed if local option is carried there. Senator Jones cites the fact that there is not a licensed liquor store or saloon in Batavia, N.Y., as one of its attractions. CANNOT BE ARRESTED.

Ambassadors and Their Servants Are Immune.

Except on felony charges peers of the realm are immune from arrest. If they are arrested for treason or felony they can demand to be tried by their fellow nobles, and, should they have the misfortune to be sentenced to death they can exact the use of a silken cord instead of the hempen rope commonly used by the public hangman.

The members and servants of every one of the foreign embassies to the Court of St. James's cannot be touched by British laws, even if they commit murder. The official headquarters of the representatives of foreign powers in London are the territory of the particular country or state which the embassy in question represents. This being so, the laws passed by Parliament and the judges, being operative only in the dominions of the King, have no effect upon the persons residing in the little foreign "countries."

The reason why ambassadors and their servants have this advantage over the average Britisher is that during the reign of Queen Anne a statute was passed by the law makers owing to an imbroglio arising from the seizure of a Russian envoy's effects for debt. This law, which was passed for "the preserving of the privileges of Ambassadors and other public Ministers of foreign Princes and States," has it that any person "presuming to prosecute any writ or process for the arrest or imprisonment of an Ambassador or his domestics shall be deemed a violator of the law of nations."

Though exemption from criminal courts is granted to foreign diplomats and their servants, there is no written law declaring the fact. It is merely a privilege of international law. Immunity from criminal jurisdiction was not always granted to these persons, for it is on record that a secretary of the Portuguese Legation, who was arrested for killing a man in the Royal Exchange, was tried by jury, found guilty, and sentenced to death.

Although it is generally known that the laws of Britain cannot affect in any way the King or any member of his family, most people are not aware that no civil action can possibly lie against the servants of His Majesty, including lords of the bedchamber and other officers of the household. The employes of the King while being immune from arrest, cannot go free if they commit a crime, however. All misdeeds committed within the precincts of the royal palaces and residences are tried by special courts presided over by the Lord Steward, Treasurer, Comptroller, and Master of the Household.

Any crimes committed by the servants at Buckingham Palace are adjudicated on by the Board of Green Cloth, whose powers are limited to a circuit of twelve miles from Whitehall; while the Court of Marshalsea, which dates from the reign of Henry VIII., administers justice between the King's servants at Windsor and elsewhere. Both courts are ruled over by the high officials stated.

Members of Parliament cannot be arrested while actually within the precincts of the Commons, and they are immune while Parliament is in session and for forty days before and after. It will be remembered that in 1888 a Metropolitan police officer made an attempt to arrest a member of the Irish Parliamentary party in Palace Yard. His colleagues were greatly upset at the incident, and the adjournment of the House was moved, a committee being appointed to consider the alleged breach of privilege. The breach was finally affirmed, and the unfortunate officer was severely censured by Parliament.

Barristers on circuit, solicitors engaged on a case, and witnesses in any case are temporarily protected from arrest, and clergymen enjoy the same privilege while actually conducting divine service.

Indian Sedition Trials.

The activity of the Calcutta police in the search for arms continues. One night recently the authorities raided a house in Northern Calcutta, and found two revolvers, some gun barrels, and a quantity of cartridges. The occupants of the house are two Bengali youths, who, however, succeeded in effecting their escape. Information received by the police pointed to this house being the centre of a new conspiracy. Meanwhile the special tribunal is engaged upon the trial of thirteen respectable Bengalis from Khulna, whom the Government charge with conspiracy to wage war against the King. When these proceedings are over, the tribunal will try the sensational Howrah conspiracy case. There are forty-five accused, some of whom are men of wealth and position. All the preliminary hearings will be held in camera. The nature of the charges and also the evidence is unknown.

Dr. Johnson's Fruit Appetite.

No man ever welcomed the return of the fruit season more heartily than did Dr. Johnson. Of strawberries and cream he declared that he could never have enough, though in his later years he devoured enormous quantities of them. A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruits was limitless. Mrs. Thrale says that he used to eat seven or eight peaches before he began his breakfast. Lucy Porter, at Litchfield, used always to keep the best gooseberries on the bushes in her garden until Johnson came down to pick them.

Using Left-Over Apples.

There is money even in poor quality apples, and Australian growers are deriving considerable profit from apples formerly thrown away. An apple-evaporating plant has been introduced, and a new industry started, which last year yielded profit of over $5,000,000. The machines pare and core the apples, which are then sliced into chips and dried. Even the cores and skin peelings are utilized, being exported to France for the manufacture of vinegar, sauces, etc.

Work has begun on the laying up of both United States and Canadian locks at Sault Ste. Marie.

HOW IT WAS DONE

A Story of the Safe Removal of Gold Dust.

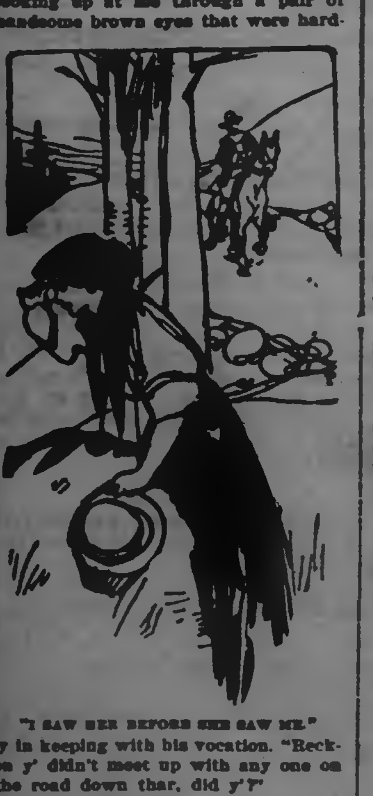
By WINFIELD R. GARRISON.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Having been sent out to examine and report on some new gold mines that had been discovered in the west, I went as far as I could by rail, then took a stage to Punkerville, a little town from which I must proceed on horse or mule back. I reached Punkerville in the evening and the next morning, hiring a horse, started to follow a stony road up to the mines.

I had been climbing—or rather my horse had—for a couple of hours when I met a young man descending with a load of wood, drawn by a pair of oxen. He was cracking a large whip about the steers' heads, shouting gee and haw, with sufficient persistency to drive a human animal crazy. But the brutes either had no nerves or, if they had, kept them under control, wending their way downward without the slightest change of gait.

"Mornin', stranger," said the man, looking up at me through a pair of handsome brown eyes that were hardly in keeping with his vocation. "Reckon y' didn't meet up with any one on the road down thar, did y'?"



"I SAW HER BEFORE SHE SAW ME."

"I don't remember having met a single person. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothin' particular. My wife's with me. She made a short cut a spell ago, thinkin' she'd come out ahead o' me. Reckon she got fooled. Ef y' meet up with her y' moight tell her whar I am."

"I shall certainly do so."

With that I continued on my way, while the young man recommenced cracking his whip and yelling at his oxen.

I had not gone far before I met a young woman coming down. She wore clothes corresponding to those of the ox driver, and I presumed she was the wife he had spoken of. I saw her before she saw me. She was leaning over a rock, looking intently down on the zigzag road below, shading her eyes with her hand. When she discovered me she started. Coming up with her, I spoke to her politely, which seemed to reassure her.

"Are you the woodcutter's wife?" I asked.

"Sartin."

"You'll find him just around the next turn."

"Much obleeged. Hev y' met up with any one?"

"Only your husband. You both seem to be on the lookout. Are you afraid of being robbed?"

"Robbed! Who'd want to rob us? We're nothin' but poor woodcutters."

At that moment I looked up on a rise beside me and espied three men coming down. As soon as they reached us they asked where we hailed from. I told them I was a mining engineer going up to inspect the new mines, which seemed to satisfy them. The young woman told them that she was going down to the town to buy some things at the store. I noticed she made no mention of her husband. The men debated whether they should go up or down and finally agreed that they would separate, a part going one way and a part the other. As soon as they had gone the woman showed greater anxiety than before. Turning to me, she said, dropping the lingo of a countrywoman:

"They're road agents. They're looking for a shipment of gold dust that they have been informed is going down to Punkerville. I wish you would wait a bit. We might require your help. You are armed, I see."

"Yes, I'm well armed, but what has a poor woodcutter to fear from road agents?"

"They'll think we're carrying the dust."

"What will they do?"

"They'll find my husband below and search him and the wood, thinking to find gold dust concealed. They would have gone for me, but they saw that I couldn't carry enough of it to pay them to bother with me."

"Well, I don't understand why their searching your load should trouble you or how I can serve you."

"I wish you'd go back with me. I know a cut by which we can reach my husband as soon as they. It is only a short distance."

She looked at me so beseechingly that I consented. I dismounted and led my horse. She hurried on before me, reaching her husband when I was still some distance away, and I saw her talking to him excitedly. I determined to conceal myself behind a rock and observe what might take place.

The wife had not been with her husband five minutes before I heard a shot. Not seeing any one hurt, I concluded that it was a signal. Then I saw a man moving down on the woodcutter. Taking a position above him, he called on the woodman to stop. The latter halted his oxen and sat down on a bowlder beside the road. His wife walked nervously about. Within ten minutes the other two men came down, and all three moved on the woodcutter.

I had a short rifle slung to my saddle and a revolver at each hip. I resolved to keep the men covered and if I saw any attempt to kill would be in a position to render assistance. The woman kept looking up my way, as if she wished I would join them. I feared she would call their attention to me, but fortunately she failed to do so.

The men made a search of the load on the cart, throwing off every stick of wood and ripping up the floor. But not a sack of dust was to be found. They withdrew for consultation, then returned, and one of the men put a revolver to the head of the woodman, and I could hear him threaten to shoot him if he didn't tell where the dust was. Suddenly the woman drew a revolver and shot the robber dead. Each of the other two men drew their weapons to finish the woodman and his wife.

I now thought it high time to interfere. I fired at one of the men and dropped him. This startled his companion, who looked about wildly for the unseen enemy. While he was doing so the woodcutter, whom the robbers had not disarmed, put a bullet in his brain.

The road agents now all being disposed of, I descended. The woman had fainted in her husband's arms. The wood was scattered on the road beside the cart. The dumb brutes were standing patiently waiting for the crack of the whip to move on. Hearing steps above him, the woodman looked up and saw me descending. At that moment his wife regained consciousness, and by the time I joined them both had recovered something of their equanimity.

Talk of gratitude! There was gratitude enough in that young woman's eyes to thank an army for the relief of a beleaguered city.

"I thought you had deserted us," she said.

"If I had come on you would both have been dead by this time, and I as well probably."

"That's true," said the man. "We're only here by a miracle."

As soon as the pair had recovered from the shock the man began to replace the wood on his cart. I turned in and helped him. As soon as we had finished the job and the couple were ready to proceed on their journey he said to me:

"I don't think we'll have any more trouble, but I don't know."

"If you're not certain I shall go back with you. I don't like leaving a man and I won't leave a woman in danger."

The wife gave me a look that settled me. I turned back with them, intending to take a fresh start the next day.

"Now, if you don't mind," I said, "I would like an explanation as to why the robbers suspected you of carrying gold or of knowing who was carrying it."

"It is better," said the man, "that you shouldn't know till we're out of danger. Not knowing, no one can force you to tell. Wait till we get to Punkerville, then I'll tell you all about it."

To this I assented, and we continued our journey to within a few miles of the town, when, unable to keep the slow pace of the oxen, I showed signs of impatience.

"If you don't mind," said the woodman, who since the fracas had dropped his lingo, "you might ride ahead and send out a wagon."

I did so after having accepted an invitation from the man to call that evening at his house.

When I stood before the door of his dwelling I looked upon the best house in the town. I found the woodman dressed like a gentleman and his wife dressed like a lady.

"Permit me to introduce myself," he said, "as the owner of a newly discovered mine up in the canyon. Last night I got wind of a proposed attack by road agents to carry off our stock of accumulated ore. We are defenseless up there, and I determined to bring it down here, my wife, who was with me, agreeing to act as vedette. Had we not met you"—

"Pardon me. I think I have curbed my curiosity sufficiently as to where this gold dust was. Will you kindly tell me in what shape you have brought it?"

"I will show you."

Going out of the room, he returned with a log of wood and with his knife pried up a small part of the bark. Having exposed the wood under it, he loosened a round wooden plug that stopped a hole and removed it. Then from the hole he poured into his hand a small quantity of gold dust.

"That will do," I said. "I understand perfectly."

The next day I renewed my journey to the mines, made my examination and returned.

A Previous Question.

She—Papa asked what your intentions were last evening, George. He—Didn't say anything about his own, did he?—Boston Transcript.

If you get angry with a man or woman make up your mind what you are going to say and then don't say it.

Good Form

Women who are polite in practically all other places sometimes are positively rude at card tables. It would perhaps help them to be self controlled and civil when the game is going against them to remember that, after all, it is only a game and, though they lose, their defeat is only temporary.

However different one may be in fact when one is losing, and few persons are as interested when the cards are against them, it is a matter of good breeding to pretend as much enjoyment as when success is on her side. It is not politic to be snappy and dull just because one is losing. Such conduct makes the winning couple extremely uncomfortable.

Courtesy, at all times desirable, at cards should be regarded as imperative. To comment unfavorably upon the playing of a hand is the height of ill manners and need not be excused on the ground of instructing the ignorant. A woman who might sincerely wish to play a better game does not care to be criticised and drilled in public, and the one giving information is a self appointed teacher who is not desired.

At a bridge luncheon recently the players at one table were amused to hear at the completion of every hand a lecture by one of the guests. The woman who talked played well—all admitted that—but the afternoon was not a class in card playing. It was a social meeting where each woman was supposed to stand upon the merits of her game. The woman who did the talking was not disagreeable, nor did she select one person for her victim. Impartially she instructed the whole table, with the result that when she had gone at the end of the afternoon those remaining later declared that she had almost spoiled their game.

The correct thing for her to have done was to remain quiet, no matter how poor the playing of others might be. If she were asked any questions as to what to do she might have answered briefly and courteously, but she should have remembered that the afternoon was one of relaxation and amusement, not of instruction.

The woman who loses her temper with her partner commits an unpardonable breach of good manners. No is it enough to control the tongue alone at such times. Manner as well must be courteous, and one who cannot regard these dictates of good breeding should never play cards.

Automobile Etiquette.

It looks unconventional for a young girl to go automobiling with several young men unless they are relatives, for somehow it is suggestive of a "sporty" tendency on her part, and so the one girl in a group of men is never quite as delicately treated by the world as is the maid who has somebody of her own sex in her company. Therefore, all things considered, the chaperon is a useful personage, and if she is a good deal older than the rest of the party everybody is likely to behave in the best possible manner.

Proper dress for motoring depends upon the excursion itself, whether taken in town or in the country or if the trip is to be long or short. For wear in town the coquettish little bonnets with wide strings and side rosettes or flowers sometimes accompany the daintiest dinner frocks, for the spin may come after dinner in a restaurant, but over the gown must go a rajah or pongee coat cut with kimono sleeves and fastened smartly at the waist with two huge buttons of gilt or white embroidery. The long chiffon veil is a necessity for a smart look, and of course there are all sorts of gimcracks designed especially for motor wear—bracelets, watches, brooches, hatpins, etc. The country getup, especially if there is to be a long spin, is less elegant, coats, hoods, gloves and veils all looking to a great extent as if designed purely for usefulness.

Invitations to Children's Parties.

Good form requires that all invitations of both girls and boys shall be issued in the names of their parents or of one of the guardians with whom they live. The very obvious reason for this is that did one of the minors give invitations it might be done without the knowledge of elders.

Rarely do birthday parties need invitations other than formal notes to be written by the mother. It is not to parents of the others that the communications are addressed, but to the young people themselves, in notes something after this fashion:

My Dear Mary—Will you not give Anna and me the pleasure of your presence at a birthday party we are giving for her on Thursday, the 25th? We are asking some of her young friends to be here about 8 o'clock and hope you will be among them.

A Social Duty.

To send a box of candy, a book or a box of flowers after having made a short visit is a tactful act which costs little either in time or money. Only a visiting card bearing no writing may be inclosed.

The Presbytery of Montreal deferred the vote on Church Union to January next.

A BRIDAL TRIP

Grace Van Studdiford at Grand Opera House Last Night—An Elaborate Production—Catchy Music.

One of the best attractions that has been secured for Peterborough theatre going audiences was that which was at the Grand last evening. "A Bridal Trip" in which Grace Van Studdiford plays the principal role was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present. The music of the opera is light and catchy, and several numbers were very heartily applauded and encores demanded. Some of the prettiest of the selections were: "Those Eyes," "You're So Different From the Rest," "Can You Forget." Miss Van Studdiford in the role of Bengaline, is most attractive and her songs were given with truly artistic effect. The other roles of Clonsse, the aunt of Bengaline Prince Cassin, and the chauffeur, afterwards the supposed shadow of Alfonse, were well taken.

The opera was beautifully staged staged and some very elaborate costumes were worn by the chorus. The management of the Grand Opera House are to be commended for securing such a high-class attraction for their appreciative patrons.

George Corlin was instantly killed by a falling tree near Morgan, Que.

WILSON WAS VERY DRUNK WHEN MAKING THREAT

So Witness Testified at Hearing of Arson Charge—People in House Could Not Have Heard Him—Was Seen Running Away From Barn.

When the name of Louis Coons was called yesterday afternoon during the taking of the evidence for the prosecution in the charge against Joseph Wilson, one of arson, Mr. D. O'Connell, for the defence, made an objection on the grounds that the witness' name did not appear on the indictment. His Honor Judge Huycke decided on the evidence being taken.

Witness told of his visit to the McFadden home with a companion who had a bottle. He heard the trouble about the pig. It had got into McFadden's grain, and Mrs. McFadden asked who owned it. Wilson claimed it as his property, and was told to take it away. The pig went out onto the road. At the house Wilson called Mrs McFadden a vile name. She slapped him on the face. Witness was sitting in the house at the time. Wilson left and was not seen by witness again that night.

"Did you hear Wilson make any threats?" asked Mr. Wood.

"No, he made none that I heard."

"Is that all the bad language you heard?"

"Yes, I think so."

WOULD BURN BARN.

Zadok Hales said he lived about one mile and a half from McFadden's and was at the house on the evening of June 4th. After walking out of the house with witness Wilson said he would burn the barn. He used the words "I'll burn the barn tonight," and then started to walk to his own home.

"Did you see him take his coat off?"

"Only one arm. He was then past the barn."

To Mr. O'Connell witness said Wilson was drunk, very drunk. The conversation took place about thirty feet north of the house.

"Nobody in the house could have heard it?"

"No?"

This did not agree with Mrs. McFadden's statements during cross-examination, when she stated that she heard Wilson make the threat while in the house, and standing by a window.

John McFadden, son of the complainant, told of how his mother had requested Wilson to leave the house, and that he replied he would when he got ready.

Hales and Wilson later went out. Witness saw Wilson meet Frank McFadden near the barn, the former taking off his coat.

Witness attended to some chores, and when he put the horses in the barn everything was all right.

It was as his mother opened a door for him to go out with some grain that she called out that the barn was on fire, and while he was on his way to the barn he saw Wilson running away.

"Any doubt about it being Joseph Wilson?"

"No."

Percy McFadden was the last witness to be called.

EVIDENCE TO-DAY.

Frank McFadden, cousin of the complainant, was the first witness called this morning. He testified to having been at the house and heard Wilson call Hales to the outside of the home, but he had not heard any conversation between the two.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that Mrs. McFadden had used abusive language towards Wilson near the barn.

Mrs. McFadden, after the fire was over, had said that she had seen somebody running away, but could not tell whether it was a man or woman.

"Did Wilson ask you to go home with him?"

"Yes?"

"You did go?"

"No."

"You saw him going home?"

"Yes?"

Witness explained that the night was cloudy.

"Would it be possible for one to stand on the knoll and distinguish a person at the barn some 250 or 300 feet distant?"

"No."

This concluded the evidence for the prosecution.

THE DEFENCE.

Mrs. Norman Wilson, whose husband is a brother of the accused, testified to having been at the fire. Johnny McFadden had cried fire. It was a dark night with no wind. The roof of the barn had fallen in when she arrived. Mrs. McFadden was there, and Mr. McFadden was talking about having Wilson arrested. Mrs. McFadden said she saw some one running, but didn't know who it was, and thought it was a women because the person was holding skirts. Mrs. McFadden also said she thought she saw two persons.

Johnny McFadden said he saw some one running, and thought it was a man. Percy said he didn't know whether it was a man or woman.

SMELLED LIQUOR.

Witness said she smelled liquor off Mrs. McFadden.

Mrs. Louisa Brown was at the fire. She heard Mrs. McFadden say that the person whom she saw looked more like a woman. Witness could not recollect any further conversation.

Later Percy said he saw some one but couldn't tell whether it was a man or a woman.

The boys were speaking about the fire at the time. Johnny said he couldn't tell whether the person was a man or woman. Witness did not hear any remarks to the effect that the barn was set on fire.

Mr. McFadden was under the influence of liquor and witness smelled liquor when she went to the house to bid Mrs. McFadden good-night.

Thomas Hales said that Percy and John McFadden had been drinking, so he was told. He did not see any liquor, but smelled some one. Percy had a bottle, but witness could not say what it contained. McFadden acted as though he had been drinking.

Mrs. McFadden and the boys said she thought Joseph Wilson had set fire to the barns, and that they had seen somebody running away, but could not tell whether it was a man or woman.

To Mr. Wood.

"Do you know who said that Wilson set it on fire?"

"Yes, Percy said so."

"Who said that Wilson was there?"

"Percy and John."

A DARK NIGHT.

Norman Wilson, brother of the accused, was at the fire. The night was dark. Johnny McFadden had told him of the fire.

Mrs. McFadden said she thought it was his brother who burned it, and that she could not tell who the person was who ran away. There was nothing said about two persons.

Mrs. Catherine Lane saw Percy McFadden Monday morning in a boundary house in Apsley. He said that he noticed a man thirty feet from the barn and could have caught him. He did not know who it was.

Mrs. Joseph Wilson, wife of the accused, testified that her husband was doing government work on the road, and was at work on June 4th. They had lived there for twenty-four years and had nine children. Her husband came home in the evening before dark. He was at the end of the table when witness came in from milking the cows. He kept his seat till about 9.45, and then went to bed. He was not outside the door once after he came home.

Witness did not know anything about a fire that night. The doors were closed, the rooms having been smudged out on account of mosquitoes.

To Mr. Wood witness said it could be noticed that her husband had been drinking, but not very much. He spoke of the row at McFadden's about the pig.

Jennie Wilson, daughter of the accused, remembered her father coming home about eight o'clock. She had looked at the clock as he came in. He sat down to the table. Witness was minding a baby. After talking for a couple of hours he went to bed.

Lottie Wilson, twelve years of age, and daughter of the accused, was questioned by his Honor as to her knowledge of the meaning of taking the oath. She gave satisfactory answers, stating that she attended church and Sunday school and could read, being in the third book.

She said it was five o'clock when she got home from school, and about eight when her father arrived. It was not quite dark.

Witness told of her father eating his supper, and remaining afterwards at the table. At 9.30 she went to bed and heard of the fire the following morning.

REPUTATION EVIDENCE.

Rev. Christopher Lord, Anglican pastor at Apsley parish for sixteen years, testified as to the reputation of the accused. His general reputation was good, with the exception of his drinking. Witness understood Mrs. McFadden to be unreliable as to her veracity.

Rev. Henry Garbutt said he was a Methodist minister of Apsley for three years.

"What is his reputation?"

"He is an honest man, hard worker, but subject to drink."

"From what you know of him is he a man likely to commit an offence of arson?"

"Not if he was sober."

Wm. Tucker, reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, knew Wilson since boyhood.

"What is his reputation?"

"Good."

"Would he burn down a barn?"

"I couldn't possibly think so."

A BANQUET AND CONCERT IN SONS OF ENGLAND HALL

The Twenty-seventh Anniversary of Lansdowne Lodge Celebrated Last Evening—A Good Turnout.

The twenty-seventh anniversary of Lansdowne Lodge, No. 25, was celebrated last evening in the Sons of England Hall, in a very pretentious and enjoyable way.

At seven o'clock an appetizing and bountiful supper was laid, to which about one hundred of the members and their wives did full justice. The fare cannot be praised too highly, consisting of fowl, plum pudding, ice cream, etc., provided by Messrs. Colemen Bros. in their usual acceptable manner.

When all appetites were satisfied the toast to the King was proposed by Mr. Boxall, Supreme Past President, which was heartily responded to.

During the progress of the supper the George street orchestra discoursed splendid music in a very liberal and pleasing manner.

The programme of the evening was then proceeded with without further delay. Mr. Boxall, in the chair, could not have been improved upon, and in a very neat and telling chairman's address summed up the object of the lodge. Its foremost principle was the promoting of usefulness and to encourage men to make provision for those dependent upon them, when they, the husbands, were called upon to join the "great silent majority." Work to that end, said the speaker, for the mothers and sisters are interested in the society as much as you are. The reason that he, the speaker, put such large life insurance on his own life, was because his wife should be benefitted by it, and every man should do similarly. No man should be selfish. God pity the man who lives for himself. The most good comes to us when we are trying to help somebody else. Mr. Boxall, in concluding his address, said that he was very glad to have the opportunity of being again present at a meeting of the lodge with which so many pleasant memories were associated.

Rev. Charles Carpenter gave a very timely and suitable address of rather a patriotic nature, which was well received by all present. He urged all Englishmen who come to this country to become loyal to Canada as well as the Old Land.

The program in full was as follows:—

LABOR SCARCE

Says Local Furniture Dealer—Cabinet Makers Hard to Get

While in conversation with a leading furniture dealer to-day, it was learned by the Review that there is a scarcity of labor among the manufacturers, cabinet makers being particularly scarce, and this is often the cause of shipments being delayed. Some orders which were sent in away back in December, are only beginning to arrive now. The same trouble is encountered both in Canada and the States.

THAT NEW HOUSE OF REFUGE FOR PROTESTANT POOR

Will Save Persistent Recommendations bp Grand Juries—Presentment Returned at Conntv Court Sittings

The grand jury at the December sittings of the county court returned the following presentment this morning.

Peterborough, Dec. 15, 1910.

We, the undersigned, grand jurors by direction of the presiding judge, have inspected the following institutions—

Court House, House of Providence, Protestant Home, all in the city of Peterborough, and the county House of Refuge at Lakefield. We recommend that a new floor be laid in a portion of the lower hall of the court house, and also that suitable matting be purchased and put down in the aisles of the court room.

In the jail we found everything in first-class condition, clean and tidy. There are several prisoners confined in the cells, all of whom appear to be in good health.

In one department there is an inmate, an elderly woman, who is insane, and we recommend that she be removed to a suitable institution, where she can be taken care of. In another department there there are a number of elderly men who are confined there, not because they are criminals, but on account of their age, and have nowhere else to go, and we strongly recommend that these inmates be removed to the House of Refuge or some other poorhouse, where they can be taken care of as they should be.

At the House of Providence we found everything in excellent condition, and must congratulate the Roman Catholics of the city and county on the manner in which they take care of their poor. At the Protestant Home we found the inmates all very comfortable and well fed and dressed, and although the building is very much out of date, it is well managed and taken care of. At the County House of Refuge we found about thirty inmates, most of whom are old and infirm, while some work with the farm work.

The inmates are well taken care of and treated kindly, and the building is in good repair. The stock kept on the farm is in first class condition, and it is a credit to the manager, Mr. Beavis.

Signed on behalf of the Grand Jury.

Foreman

THE 500th PERFORMANCE

At the Local Theater Will be Celebrated by the Belmont Minstrels To-night—Everything in Readiness For the Curtain.

You'll notice your ticket for the Belmont Minstrel show to-night bears the mark 500.

This means that the performance will be the 500th one to be given in the theatre. And it seems appropriate that an attraction with such a big sale and one in which so much local interest is shown should be the one to celebrate the important occasion.

The stage at the Grand was dressed for the show this morning under the supervision of Mr. Holly Shepard and everything is in readiness for the opening chorus.

SEVERELY BURNED BY ELECTRIC WIRE CLIMBING POLE

Mr. George Binnie, a lineman for the Peterborough Light & Power Company, met with a very serious accident on Monday afternoon while at work near the Cereal dam. He was ascending a pole and had reached the lower wires, when in some manner he encountered a live wire, giving him a severe shock. Fortunately he was wearing a strap wound around his body and holding him to the pole.

The shock, however, was sufficient to burn him pretty severely and he was conveyed to the Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance. He is doing nicely and no serious results are anticipated. He resides at 500 College street.

A PROFITABLE SERVICE ON SUNDAY FOR BOY SCOUTS

A very interesting and profitable service will take place next Sunday morning at the Park St. Baptist church, when the Y.M.C.A. Boy Scouts will hold their first annual parade.

The chaplain of the Y.M.C.A. Scouts, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, will deliver a suitable message for the occasion.

All parents who wish to understand this wonderful organization, so dear to the boys, will be informed next Sunday morning, as the subject will be "The Boy Scout Movement; Its Place, Purpose and Power in a Boy's Life." The text will be I. Peter, 2:17, "Fear God. Honor the king. Honor all men. Love the brotherhood."

Scoutmaster Hodges and Mr Tait, boys' secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., will assist in the service.

At the evening service the Rev. Walter Daniels, secretary of Northwest missions, will deliver an address upon "The Needs of the West." He will also tell if those great and growing provinces need one language or two, and which one they need in the national schools.

AN ATTRACTIVE WINDOW SCENE

Richard Hall and Sons display windows are attracting a great deal of favorable comment these days from passers-by on their artistic and harmonious appearance.

The centre of the window is arranged to represent a fireplace, in the middle of which is a very striking effigy of Santa Claus. On either side of it are large white pillars and the top of the mantle is studded with red and green lights with the inscription in gold, "Season's Greetings." The scene at night is very brilliant. Two Christmas stockings enhance the reality of the scene. In front of the pillars are circles in each of which is written, "A Happy New Year," and "Merry Christmas." The background setting is of green velour with a panel effect.

Gordian Knot

(Kingston Standard.)
ROGERS—CADOGAN.

A church wedding is always an interesting event, and when the bride is a charmingly pretty and popular girl, and the groom well known and well liked, it is doubly so. This morning St. George's Cathedral was filled with friends and acquaintances, besides the many beautifully gowned guests, to witness the marriage of Miss Evelyn Amy Rogers, second daughter of the late [illegible] J. Rogers, manager of the Bank of Montreal, Peterborough, and formerly of this city, to Professor Percy Gerald Cadogan Campbell, of Queen's University, only son of the Rev. C. C. Campbell, of Fledborough rectory, Newark, England. The service was fully choral and the wedding marches were played by Mr. Robert Harvey in masterly style. The altar and chancel were tastefully decorated with white flowers, ferns and palms by the girl friends of the bride, and the wedding was without doubt one of the prettiest ever seen in the church of many noted marriages.

Promptly at eleven o'clock the bridal party entered the sacred edifice. The bridesmaid, Miss Gwendolyn Hall, of Peterborough, dressed in pale blue silk trimmed with delicate lace, and wearing a becoming picture hat of black beaver, with plumes, and carrying pink roses, preceded the bride. She also wore the groom's gift, a pearl star. The dainty bride, looking a picture of girlish grace and beauty, followed with her uncle, Mr. Charles Reade, of Lachine, who gave her away. The lovely bridal gown was an imported embroidered lace, made princess, over chiffon and white taffeta. She carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses, lilies-of-the-valley and maiden-hair fern, and upon the soft brown hair rested the bridal veil and orange blossoms, lent by her godmother, Mrs. Harry Tandy.

The Dean of Ontario performed the ceremony. Mr. E. [illegible], of the Royal Military College, was best man. Mr. Van Leeslie, Professor Ferguson, of Queen's; Captain Beak and Captain Elkins, both of the R.M.C., were the ushers. The groom's gift to the best man, organist and ushers were sets of gold vest [illegible].

Mrs. W. F. B. Henry, of Lachine, aunt of the bride, wore a handsome princess gown of grey voile with white lace yoke and black velvet hat with black and white feathers.

Miss Aileen Rogers looked very charming in a dainty gown of sweet pea net over taffeta with wide band of pink satin on the skirt. Her hat was of black velvet with ostrich feathers.

Miss May Rogers was very sweet in a frock of pale blue silk with point d'esprit yoke, the short sleeves also edged with point d'esprit, and her hat of black velvet was adorned with pale blue plumes.

Miss Rose Rogers wore a girlish dress of white silk with Dresden trimming. Her black beaver hat was trimmed with wide bows of ribbon.

Holly and Wreathing. Three cases arrived. MASON'S FLORAL EMPORIUM, Water St

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION

Mr. M. O. Hammond, a member of the Globe staff, has been investigating the working of the commission method of municipal government in Des Moines where the system has been in force for three years. Under this system ward lines are abolished and party politics eliminated. The government of the city is placed in the hands of the mayor, elected as such, and four associates each acting as the head of a department. The mayor is superintendent of the department of public affairs; one commissioner supervises the parks and public property, another streets and public improvements, the third public safety, and the fourth accounts and finances. "The commissioners are thus in greater degree administrative officers than under any previous system, and as every thing is done in open light, their acts are subject to inspection and criticism from day to day." Formerly the councillors in Des Moines were paid $250 each per year, and left the work to others to perform; now they are paid $3,000 each, with the mayor $3,500, "and they do the work, they they know it is done, and the people know where to lay the blame if it not done right."

The new system, according to Mr. Hammond, has been a success. One sees its fruits on every hand. Especially significant is the new civic spirit that has been aroused. Mayor Hanna is quoted as saying that the system has led to greater efficiency. The city now gets one hundred cents for every dollar spent, whereas it used to get only about sixty cents, owing to incompetence and waste, if not actual dishonesty. "The old form of city government," said Mayor Hanna, "was founded on the theory that the councillors' duty was merely to pass legislation. The new theory is that it is largely administrative, just as you would run a railroad or any other large enterprise."

Mr. Hammond's testimony with regard to the success of the commission system is borne out by evidence from from other quarters. Keokuk, Iowa, has just published a statement covering the first six months of its experiment. According to this statement there has been improvement all along the line. Bonded indebtedness has been reduced; a surplus has taken the place of a deficit; the city is now drawing interest instead of paying it; more and better work is done on the streets, and the work is costing less money. And so on.

So far as we are aware, there is no evidence that the commission system has yet proved a failure in any place where it has been fairly tried. Of course, it's not to be expected that there will not be complaints. It would be a strange thing if only the most competent men were always chosen to serve as commissioners, and equally strange if even competent men always escaped the making of mistakes; but so far the reports appear to be entirely favorable.—Woodstock "Sentinel-Review."

REMINISCENCES OF THE EARLY GROWTH OF THE NORTHWEST

Rev. Newton Williams, of Waverly, Iowa, and Formerly o Hiawatha, Gives Interview to the Review—Development of Peterborough Was Great Surprise to Him.

The Rev. Newton Williams, of Waverley, Iowa, is in town on a visit. He is a son of the late Rev. Thos. Williams, formerly Anglican rector at Hiawatha. Mr. Williams was for years engaged in active missionary work in the Northwest, mainly in Saskatchewan under Bishop Pinkham, now of Calgary. In an interview last evening Mr. Williams gave the Review some interesting reminiscences of early development in our vast prairie provinces, one of them being a recollection of the time he witnessed the election in Calgary of the first civic council in the summer of 1884. For the last seven years Mr. Williams has been engaged in church work in the middle Western States. Asked whether he preferred to work in the States or Canada Mr. Williams replied with the oft-repeated and ever remembered quotation;

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said.
This is my own, my native land.

Speaking of the scenes of his boyhood, Mr. Williams said that Hiawatha was the same as ever, while the growth of Peterborough was astonishing. It was impossible, he said, to lose oneself in Peterborough when he was a boy, but things have changed since then and Peterborough's development was remarkable. Last Sunday Mr. Williams visited Hiawatha and preached in the pulpit of his late reverend father. A large and appreciative congregation was present. The older members said they were carried back to the old days when Rev. T. Williams was their pastor, voice, figure and delivery making them feel they had their old and much-loved pastor back again.

Visiting the scenes of his boyhood's days, Mr. Williams said, made him realize what he had never realized before, namely, no w old he had grown. The development of industries which could not all have been built in a day still further impressed this upon his mind.

Mr. Williams hopes to ultimately return to Canada to resume the work of the preaching of the Gospel in Ontario—his home of old.

From Peterborough, Mr. William will go to Brighton to visit his sister, Mrs T. J. Edmison.

SPORTING NEWS

INTERMEDIATES MAKE FAVORABLE IMPRESSION

There was nothing slow or gentle about that intermediate practice last night. The fans were out strong and must have been favorably impressed with the showing of the talent.

True, there was evidence that the majority of the players were rather raw, but much is to be expected. A few more practices will help a whole lot.

The executive will have a contract when it comes to pick a team, but the players and public alike may be assured that that body will act with the best interests of the city and the team receiving first consideration.

The full list who were asked to turn out were on hand in good time, and by their work on the ice displayed an inclination to dig in and do their prettiest.

Many of the fans liked the work of Kelly at left wing. The ex-Ingersoll boy can handle his stick, play the boards and shoot at all angles. Sorrel on the other wing, too, handles himself well. It is a little too early, however, to size up the players but it is quite reasonable to expect a creditable representation for Peterborough in the intermediate series.

LOCAL INTERMEDIATE AND JUNIOR TEAM GROUPED

At the O.H.A. executive meeting last night Peterborough was grouped with Belleville, Trenton and Cobourg in the intermediate series. The meeting for the drawing up of the schedule will be held at Trenton.

In the junior series the local team was placed with Lindsay and Cobourg, with the schedule meeting to be held here.

Mr. R. M. Glover represented the Peterborough Club.

PETERBOROUGH ICE RACES

January 16th and 17th are the dates fixed for the Peterborough ice races at the driving park.

There will be two days' racing and $800 will be offered in prizes. As the committee will be under a heavy expense in connection with the races it is to be hoped that the response to solicitations for subscriptions will be generous.

MERCANTILE LEAGUERS

A meeting to organize the Mercantile Hockey league will be called in the course of a few days and those wishing to enter teams, are asked to take notice and act accordingly.

The Review has received several inquiries as to this league, and the officers of the teams will have a chance to show just how much they are in earnest.

JUNIOR PRACTICE

Junior players are requested to attend practice to-night at the rink between seven and eight o'clock.

The Intermediates will work out on Friday night.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of The Review:

Sir,—The Rev. Father McColl writes a very acceptable letter in your issue of yesterday. He says, "When referring to the right kind of democracy I had in mind the democracy of Great Britain, Canada . . ." Of course I could not tell that this was the "idea in his mind." If I had thought for one moment that this was "the idea in his mind" I would certainly have agreed with him, and then he would not have felt called upon to say that I was an atheist, an almost unpardonable charge. But I cannot let mere names or persons interfere with the argument, and on looking at it carefully I find that the present situation now agreed upon by both of us is that the church is not in any sense in control of or superior to the State, but that the people rule all things as in Great Britain, Canada, etc. This establishes, with Father McColl's warm approval, the "sovereignty of the will of the people" (something expressly condemned less than two months ago by the Pope in his decree). The State is, of course, bound to proceed as nearly as possible in conformity with the principles of justice (called by some "eternal justice") and in accordance with the will or law of God, manifested through humanity to humanity, and not, of course, under any pretence to be disregarded. The democracy of Britain and Canada, as a whole or State, takes no thought of the Pope, but of the principles of religion in general, and this Father McColl agrees with. There is no getting away from what he said. The democracy which he admits to be a right democracy does not, as a democracy, recognize any human determining power but itself. To it God is God, with no vicar on earth but the people. All this leaves to humanity, otherwise known as the people, the right and privilege of interpreting and following the commands of God the Father, as revealed to every human soul, regardless of the Pope. I confess that I did not know that this was sound Catholic doctrine before, but I am exceedingly pleased to find Father McColl say that it is instead, then, of the people's being in any way beholden to the Pope or under his rule and guidance, they are beholden only to the principles of eternal law and justice, the divine ideal. With this I agree, and while it is not what the Pope says in his recent decrees, it leaves one free to say in future that Father McColl is with the people, whatever the Pope may say. That my conclusion from his letter is a fair estimate of Father McColl's position is established by the fact that a large number of people called it "a complete capitulation," "throwing up the sponge," "abandoning papal claims," etc., etc. But I do not wish to use any word of a triumphant nature. I am satisfied that he believes in the right of the people to rule themselves. The "sovereignty of the will of the people" though condemned in the "Le Sillon" decree of the Pope of a few months ago is admitted by Father McColl to be the correct principle. If Father McColl will repeat his letter from the public platform he will be cheered to the echo by every Protestant in the city, including

Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress.

Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off.

The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off.

The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER
Absolutely smokeless and odorless

is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. Apply a match and it is immediately at work. It will burn for nine hours without refilling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. It has a damper top and a cool handle. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font.

It has an automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be quickly unscrewed for rewicking. Finished in japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

What the Wax Angel Saw

A Christmas Sermonette

THERE was once a little wax angel with golden hair and a blue silk sash, who was taken gently from her bed of cotton in the attic every year for many, many years and poised on the green spire of the great fir tree in the library. Her outstretched arms seemed always to be scattering blessings on the happy circle in the glow of the Christmas candles.

She had looked down on the first Christmas of the wide-eyed first born; she had smiled her waxen smile at the boisterous joys of ten, the sentiments of sixteen and the worldliness of forty. Indeed, her blue glass eyes had beheld the seven stages of Yuletide rejoicing.

Now, one day it was noticed that the beautiful blue sash of the little wax angel was faded and grimy, that her pink cheeks were pale, her nose quite flattened and her left foot gone.

"We'll have to use something else for the tree this year," said Mother. "The little wax angel is all worn out."

And the next day her flattened nose was buried in the rubbage heap.

Nobody would have believed it, but the wax angel was glad her tree-top days were over. Her arms were very tired scattering blessings that were reckoned by dollars and cents: she had often wished to close her eyes on the pretenses and petty calculations of Christmas giving; she had grown pale because of her long vigil over the mockery of the Christmas spirit.

She had seen greediness planted in young hearts by the thoughtless generosity of their doting elders. She had seen quick eyes search for hidden price marks, and, when found, she had beheld their owner's look of chagrin or satisfaction in reflecting upon the exchange of baubles that had been made. She had heard wives and daughters and sons accept complacently enthusiastic thanks for lavish gifts—thanks which the wax angel knew were due only to the Father over there with the weary eyes and the limp purse.

She knew, too, that the frenzied purchasing, at the last minute, of that piece of real lace for the Rich Aunt had cost not only more than could be afforded, but it had cost also all the Christmas joy—meager enough—of the salesgirl who sold it. Its fussy, irritable selection had been the last straw at the end of many tired days. After the last sale the girl at the lace counter just crumpled up and lay on her bed all of that Christmas day and other days besides.

You see, it is given to little wax angels to see many things, hidden or unheeded by the best of us.

Suppose you resurrect the one that may have topped the Christmas tree of your youth—or perhaps only of your fancy. Let her unblinking eyes peer into your secret soul, and note if she finds there the real Christmas spirit, or the mockery thereof, that has paled her cheek and dimmed her blue glass eyes. Or perhaps it may have been a silvery star that glistened on your tree-top. Look if it has not been tarnished by your growing indifference to the good-will and kindness and other things for which it stands.

With a shining star, and all that it symbolizes, or an all-seeing little wax angel as your mentor, you will need no other Christmas sermon.

A CHRISTMAS DRYAD.

By ADDISON HOWARD GIBSON.

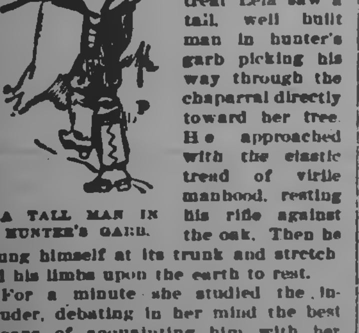
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

IT was Christmas day, and the sun shed a golden radiance over the Arizona desert, brown breasted and splotched with mesquite and cactus. As the cow pony bore Lela Warren over the indistinct trail she took deep breaths of the ozone of the foothills.

"This is living!" she cried, stretching her arms toward the trees which bordered the canyon. "It's grand to spend Christmas all alone by oneself out on this great desert.

"To see me now no one would think me thirty-five years old," she laughed, swinging lightly to a seat on a favoring branch of a live oak. "The west has given me back strength, youth and—well, in a degree forgetfulness of the past. The change has taught me a wonderful philosophy—not to keep trouble."

She took an apple from her lunch bag and ate it. Suddenly a stir in the manzanita bushes behind her attracted her attention. Peering through the leaves of her retreat Lela saw a tall, well built man in hunter's garb picking his way through the chaparral directly toward her tree. He approached with the elastic tread of virile manhood, resting his rifle against the oak. Then he flung himself at its trunk and stretched his limbs upon the earth to rest.



A TALL MAN IN HUNTER'S GARB.

For a minute she studied the intruder, debating in her mind the best means of acquainting him with her prior occupancy of that retreat. Suddenly a spirit of mischief overcame her, and she let fall an oak ball she had plucked from a nearby twig. The small green globe struck the man squarely on the head.

Instantly he sprang to his feet, caught up his rifle and began peering up through the live oak's branches.

"You can't challenge me that way, Mr. Squirrel," he said, pointing the rifle upward; "not with impunity."

Lela gave a little cough. "Don't shoot me, please," she called down. "I plead guilty."

She encountered a pair of surprised brown eyes looking up at her. Dropping his rifle to his side, the man lifted his hat politely.

"I never shoot dryads," he answered.

"I suppose," she said, a smile hovering on the lips, "that you are perfectly familiar with dryads."

"Hardly," he answered, smiling up at her. "I know very little except they are said to live in trees. Are the other live oaks in this canyon inhabited by your cousins?"

A twinkle came into the dryad's blue eyes. "Possibly," she returned; "you know we have family trees."

"Do they all have turquoise eyes like this one?" he asked.

A frown crossed the dryad's face, but the man's good natured playing quickly banished it, and she said: "Oh, yes, and their color is beryl," looking at her sage-green sweater.

"I don't believe," he pursued, "that the woods would reveal another just like you if one looked all day."

"Not likely," she replied, continuing the play, "I think all my kind turned into topaz when the forest became petrified."

The dryad, thinking the play had progressed quite far enough, made no answer. The man started toward the spring, whistling. Suddenly he wheeled about and called back:

"Miss Dryad, not being familiar with your code of etiquette, I hope you will pardon me if I have seemed overpresumptuous. Having no cards with me, I'll introduce myself by telling you I am the mining engineer from the Copper Knight property. I came over to the mines to do some construction work, but the men deserted me for a holiday, so in self defense I turned nimrod and found a dryad."

From her leafy perch the dryad watched the man as he went whistling away over to the spring. There was something in his half playful speech and the easy swing of his gait that seemed strangely familiar to her.

He was building a fire between some rocks when he called to her.

"If the dryad will look I'll show her how to cook game without pot or pan. An Indian guide showed me," he explained.

Over a fire of dry bark and twigs he fixed some green mesquite sticks to which the game was carefully suspended. The aroma of the broiling rabbits was sufficient to cause the dryad to descend, for the ride across the foothills had given her a vigorous appetite.

"I will spread the table," she announced, spreading paper napkins over a smooth rock. "Here are beef sandwiches, olives, cheese, crackers, fig wafers and one large apple," she continued, taking the various articles from her lunch bag and arranging them on the improvised table.

"A feast for—a dryad," said the man.

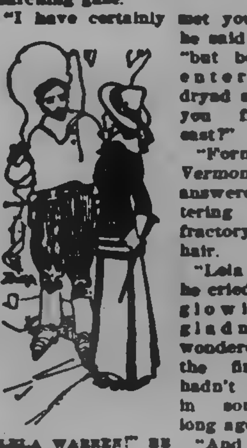
"And a nimrod," she added, meeting the boyish smile on his face with confidence. "It will be a unique Christmas dinner."

"It will be the most delightful one ever eaten," recklessly declared the man, deftly turning the broiling game.

When the game was done the two sat down and ate together with no constraint and with real congeniality.

As she stood under the live oak fastening up her abundant light brown hair, which had provokingly tumbled down, the man gave her a peculiar searching gaze.

"I have certainly met you before," he said abruptly, "but before you entered the dryad state. Are you from the east?"



"LELA WARREN!" HE CRIED.

"Formerly from Vermont," she answered, mastering the refractory mass of hair.

"Lela Warren!" he cried, his face glowing with gladness. "I wondered from the first if I hadn't met you in some aeon long ago."

"And you are John Fletcher," she returned, shaking hands. Then her eyes fell under the radiant light in his. "Your beard prevented my recognizing you before," she added.

"I was a mere stripling in those days and you a girl just through high school," he said. Then he asked with gentle reproof: "Why did you sell the old home, Lela, and go away without leaving one word for me? When I returned from Europe I searched everywhere for you, but no one knew where you had gone."

A shadow from the past crossed the woman's face.

"Of course you heard that my brother defaulted. Mother and I sold the old home to settle up for him," she explained. "Then we went to Chicago where I taught school. After mother's death I came west. I am governess for the Evans family at Circl T ranch."

"Lela," he said tenderly, "I have never forgotten you. We are both still unmarried, thank God! Look!" he commanded, his boyish spirit returning, as he pointed to a cluster of mistletoe that clung to a branch of the oak just above her head. As she looked upward he kissed her, murmuring with endearing accents:

"My Christmas dryad!"

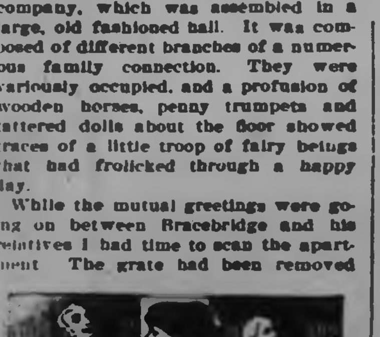
The Christmas Party

Christmas Eve In Rural England

It was a brilliant moonlight night, but extremely cold. Our chaise whirled rapidly over the frozen ground. The postboy smacked his whip incessantly, and a part of the time his horses were on a gallop. "He knows where he is going," said my companion, laughing, "and is eager to arrive in time for some of the merriment and good cheer of the servants' hall. My father is a devotee of the old school and prides himself on keeping up something of old English hospitality. He was always scrupulous in exacting our holidays and having us around him on family festivals. It was the policy of the good old gentleman to make his children feel that home was the happiest place in the world, and I value this delicious home feeling as one of the choicest gifts a parent can bestow."

The squire ushered us at once to the company, which was assembled in a large, old fashioned hall. It was composed of different branches of a numerous family connection. They were variously occupied, and a profusion of wooden horses, penny trumpets and tattered dolls about the floor showed traces of a little troop of fairy beings that had frolicked through a happy day.

While the mutual greetings were going on between Bracebridge and his relatives I had time to scan the apartment. The grate had been removed from the wide, overhanging fireplace to make way for a fire of wood, in the midst of which was an enormous log, glowing and blazing and sending forth a vast volume of light and heat. This, I understood, was the Yule log, which the squire was particular in having brought in and illumined on Christmas eve, according to ancient custom.



THE DANCE WAS A MERRY ONE.

It was really delightful to see the old squire seated in his hereditary elbow chair by the hospitable fireside of his ancestors and looking around him like the sun of a system, beaming warmth and gladness to every heart. Even the very dog that lay stretched at his feet, as he lazily shifted his position and yawned, would look fondly up in his master's face, wag his tail against the floor and stretch himself again to sleep, sure of kindness and protection.

Supper was announced shortly after our arrival. It was served up in a spacious oaken chamber, the panels of which shone with wax and around which were several family portraits, decorated with holly and ivy. Besides the accustomed lights, two great wax tapers, called Christmas candles, wreathed with greens, were placed on a highly polished buffet among the family plate. The table was abundantly spread with substantial fare, but the squire made his supper of frumenty, a dish made of wheat cakes boiled in milk, with rich spices, being a standing dish in old times for Christmas eve. I was happy to find my old friend, minced pie, in the retinue of the feast.

The supper had disposed every one to gayety, and an old harper was summoned from the servants' hall. * * * The dance, like most dances after supper, was a merry one. Some of the older folk joined in it, and the squire himself figured down several couples with a partner with whom he affirmed he had danced at every Christmas for nearly half a century.

The party broke up for the night with the kind hearted old custom of shaking hands. As I passed through the hall on the way to my chamber the dying embers of the Yule log still sent forth a dusky glow, and had it not been the season when "no spirit dares stir abroad" I should have been half tempted to steal from my room at midnight and peep whether the fairies might not be at their revels about the hearth.

I had scarcely got into bed when a strain of music seemed to break forth in the air just below the window. I listened and found it proceeded from a band which I concluded to be the waits from some neighboring village. I drew aside the curtains to hear them more distinctly. The moonbeams fell through the upper part of the casement, partially lighting up the antiquated apartment. The sounds as they receded became more soft and aerial and seemed to accord with quiet and moonlight. I listened and listened. They became more and more tender and remote, and as they gradually died away my head sank upon the pillow, and I fell asleep.—Washington Irving.

A Unique Bell.

A pretty bell may be made by wrapping a large sized hoop with holly or pine, connecting this with a smaller sized hoop above by four wires or stout cord. Hang strands of popcorn from upper hoop to lower one. Use a large red apple for a clapper.

Stuck to His Bargain.

Exasperated Purchaser—Didn't you guarantee that this parrot would repeat every word he heard?

Bird Dealer—Certainly I did.

"But he doesn't repeat a single word."

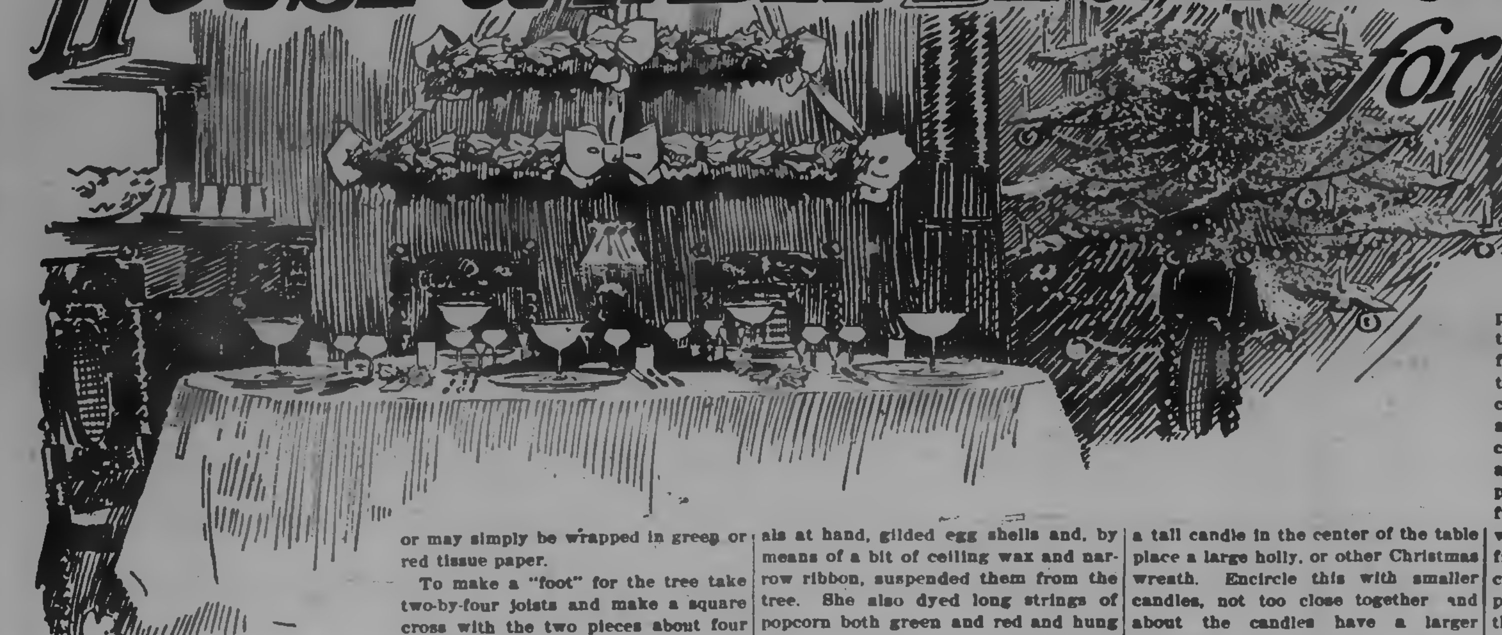
"He repeats every word he hears, but he never hears any. He is as deaf as a post."

Detected.

It was at a Fourth of July meeting in a little city. The mayor, William Smith, rose and at dignified length read the Declaration of Independence.

There was a pause; then from one of the mayor's old schoolmates came the loud whisper: "Bill never writ that. He ain't smart enough."—New York Times.

HOUSE & TABLE DECORATIONS for the HOLIDAYS



IT is doubtful if St. Nick in all his travels ever beholds a dwelling in which no effort has been made to make festive the Yule-tide with the green of the leaf or the scarlet of the berry. Sometimes, when it is but a bit of faded ribbon or a tiny sprig of holly the tender hearted old fellow must be greatly touched.

In the household where there are big eyes to peer into the mysterious darkness and small ears to listen for the old saint's coming, the Christmas tree, of course, is the universal decoration. The home carpenter may have some difficulty in making a device to support the tree properly. One way is to use a stout packing box, and turning it on its side, nail cleats to hold the tree in place. On the opposite side of the box directly over the cleat inclosures a hole is then cut which is large enough to admit the butt of the tree. The box may be covered with cotton, sprinkled with mica, or may simply be wrapped in green or red tissue paper.

To make a "foot" for the tree take two-by-four joists and make a square cross with the two pieces about four feet long. From the center of each cut out a block the width of the board and an inch deep, so that the two pieces when put together will be perfectly flat on the floor. Lay the tree across saw-horses or a couple of chairs and fasten it in the exact center with long nails. Then stand the tree up and nail braces from the ends of the cross to the trunk of the tree at a distance of about two feet from the floor. Appropriate trees, in the order of their popularity, are the fir, spruce, hemlock and pine. The end of the tree should be painted over to keep the sap from running.

Besides the tinseled decorations for the tree that may be bought in the shops, one may add to its attractiveness by many little home-made trifles. Walnuts may be gilded and hung from the tree by bright ribbons. Cranberries strung on thread may be festooned from the branches, and figures cut from crepe paper may be pasted to tiny clothespins and placed on the tree. One woman who was obliged to make her decorations from the materials at hand, gilded egg shells and, by means of a bit of ceiling wax and narrow ribbon, suspended them from the tree. She also dyed long strings of popcorn both green and red and hung them in festoons. From the butterfly crepe paper she cut the butterflies of various sizes and poised them on the branches with wire.

The Christmas Dinner Table.

The miniature Christmas tree for the center of the table is probably the most popular decoration because it lends itself so well to attractive lighting and the distribution of small gifts or favors. If one does not care for the artificial trees sold in the shops, any nurseryman, usually to be found out of town a ways, should be able to furnish at very small cost a little Norway spruce about a foot and a half high. This may be tacked to a thin board and trimmed as elaborately as one wishes, and the base covered with a mound of holly. A small log—symbolizing the old Yule logs—which has been hollowed out and filled with holly or mistletoe is also attractive and inexpensive. A gilded holly tree when lighted with many tiny candles is most effective.

The wreath idea in table decorating may be carried out in detail. About a tall candle in the center of the table place a large holly, or other Christmas wreath. Encircle this with smaller candles, not too close together and about the candles have a larger wreath. Each plate may be encircled by a wreath and each dish that is served may be garnished in a way to carry out the same idea,—parsley about the bluepoints, and smilax twined about the sherbet glass, for instance.

A decoration more elaborate in appearance but simple in construction is the use of two hoops, one perhaps a foot and a half in diameter, the other two feet. These should be wound closely with Christmas greens or smilax and hung by wires from the ceiling, the smaller one about a foot above the larger. In the center suspend a huge red Christmas bell, and from the hoops hang smaller bells which may be those already made from tissue paper, or may easily be cut from red cardboard. A scarlet poinsettia would be appropriate for the center of the table, or candles with shades made from white or green watercolor paper upon which have been pasted red bells. Place cards may be double bells cut from red paper with the name on the outer sheet and the menu written on the inner one.

A decorative scheme suggested by the Christmas eve celebration of the Russians, called "The Festival of the Evening Star," requires several sheets of gilded or silvered paper. Cut a large star to lie flat in the center of the table and about its edges make a border of holly or mistletoe. Tiny candles may follow the lines of the star, or a wooden manger be constructed in which are piled small gifts tied with ribbons that are carried to each place. The candle shades may be studded with little stars, and the place cards be cut in star shape.

For the small dining room with perhaps a dome swung from a single chain from the ceiling, ropes of cedar festooned from the molding to the center of the ceiling give a gala effect. The chain of the light should be wound with the cedar, and the glass covered with thin paper upon which fir trees cut from dark green paper have been pasted. Candles with shades fashioned in the same way add to the effect. For a center piece a great mound of snowballs, made from cotton sprinkled with diamond dust and containing some small gift, would be fitting.

A toy aeroplane, painted red or green, with the venerable Santa at the wheel, and the planes covered with drifted cotton snow which has formed irregular icicles depending from the edges, may seem a violation of the reindeer tradition, but it has the advantage of being quite new.

A Few Suggestions for the Children's Table.

Cover the table to within about a foot of the edge with white cotton sprinkled with mica dust, and outline the cotton with holly. Form a chimney in the center of bricks which are red candy boxes. Arrange the cotton about the top of the chimney like snow with bits of it hanging down, and place a figure of Santa Claus to look as though he were just emerging from the chimney. The children, at the conclusion of the dinner, may be given the candy boxes and the small gifts that Santa's pack contains.

Gifts may also be secreted in a huge snowball made of pasteboard and covered with cotton, or each little article may be rolled in its own cotton snowball and the balls with white ribbons attached that lead to each place may be piled up about the figure of St. Nick in the center.

In place of "Dasher and Dancer and Prancer and Vixen" harness the beloved Teddy bears with scarlet ribbons to the sleigh that Santa drives over a mountainous snowheap in the center of the table. Or erect the North Pole—a mica sprinkled stick of rock candy—at the top of the glittering snowheap and place Teddy in a proud attitude of victory upon it.

THE MAKING OF SEMI-READY

Do As You Say

HONESTY is the best policy—but far too many people have allowed theirs to lapse.

This indiscretion afflicts makers of clothing — some. Just so soon as the builder of clothing allows his ingeunity to cajole him into cheaper linings, fewer stitches, weaker bindings and spineless stiffenings, his goods smack of dishonesty and the wear shows it.

Occasionally he salves his concience by lowering the price. Cheaper goods and lower prices have ruined many a business reputation. Even the milkman knows better, but he may leave the lid off the can on a rainy day---nature does the rest.

SEMI-READY CLOTHES are made good. "Making good" is simply the habit of always giving every little thing that comes in our way---in our clothing---the best that is in us.

Wear SEMI-READY. Business and precedent say so. You can't expect the world to have a good opinion of you unless you set the example. Your appearance counts. Preference is not luck. Impressions are worth money to any young man if he makes the right kind. He can't if he is loose clothed. Wear SEMI-READY.

NO MAN can serve two masters; nor can any shop maintain two standards of quality.

Semi-ready Clothes are made and tailored in a shop where the same high quality—the same standard of quality in workmanship is maintained.

The same tailors who make the $25 and $30 suits make those at $15, $18 and $20. There is no cheap cloth nor cheap work in a Semi-ready Garment. Every suit is tailored under the one roof—the only way that high-class craftsmanship can be maintained—the only tailoring shop in Canada maintaining that policy.

Semi-ready Tailoring

The Clothes You Will Buy Some Day

Why Not Do it Now?

Semi-ready clothes will fill your every desire—whether you want conventional, quiet tailoring, or clothes which evidence the advance note in fashion.

Coupled with finer craftsmanship there is true harmony in every contour of each garment.

"Semi-ready" means something better—for we carefully avoid anything that is cheap and risky. We seek the trade of he who knows the worthiness of really good value.

Some Clothing Comment

WOMAN'S best gift to man is a clean shirt. Our best gift is ours only, a suit of clothes that mark the wearer as a man of sense, taste, judgment and appreciation.

The good of a good thing lies in making use of it. Let it lie idle and you never know its worth. Wear anything but SEMI-READY and you'll live in ignorance of what utility, style, appearance can do for you.

Six swinging essentials are worked into SEMI-READY. Had you—think you—the customs tailors of old days all of these?

ALL THESE WORKED INTO SEMI-READY

- The business sense to guide and handle the organization.
- The artistic sense to guide and build.
- The buying sense to get together the materials.
- The tangible—yet intangible—sense that discern the coming styles and anticipates fashion's decrees.
- The selling sense that markets the product of the organized and systemized shops.
- The appreciative sense that, with ear to the ground, takes in and considers the personal commendation of the wearer. He knows.

Fitness of Things

THE aim of all that we write and print about SEMI-READY is to interest and convince. We print and push to get business --- likewise to hold what we get. Holding alone, would be retrogression, for us. There's no standing still.

The congregation of SEMI-READY wearers is drawn from all classes. The suits we build are worn by the business man, for they meet his sense of what is suitable and appropriate.

These suits are worn by the young man because they meet his wishes in matters of style, shape and fashion, and any indecision he might have is settle for him. SEMI-READY is ever right.

They are worn by the mechanic because he uses good machines, makes good tools and appreciates the fitness and fitting of good clothes well made. No one is more critical, more able to be critical, and none more competent.

They are worn by the professional man, the broker, the capitalist. A discriminating taste in the things of daily life make for a nice distinction that is emphasized in SEMI-READY.

You may be a "Prince of Good Fellows"; but the "Man who would be King" must dress the part.

May we show you just what we mean when we say that Semi-ready Suits give one the air of ease and excellence? You feel better when you know you are right in your apparel. And feeling better, you cannot help having both "savoir faire" and "bonhomie."

SECOND SECTION

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1910

MADONNA AND CHRIST CHILD.

Christmas In A Scotch City

Glasgow, the commercial metropolis of Scotland, with its well nigh million inhabitants, can be chosen as an interesting illustration of the manner in which one-fourth of the people of the country spend the holidays. Many days before the store fronts on Argyll street—a thoroughfare as busy as any in the land—are gayly and profusely decorated with holly and evergreens. Above nearly every entrance signs of welcome and the compliments of the season are exhibited in holly leaves. On Christmas eve the stores keep open late. Either side of the thoroughfare is a mass of blazing, cheerful light, and there is a moving mass of humanity between. But when the stores close they close until boxing day. All the working people now get their Christmas holiday.

On Christmas forenoon the lord provost or mayor presides at the annual meeting and breakfast given by the directors at the royal infirmary. His lordship makes a speech, after which there is a distribution of good things to all the patients in the large institution. Then he visits sundry other institutions for the care of the sick and poor, where there are Christmas treeing and feasting. By the way, Christmas day is one of the lord provost's busiest days. At 2 o'clock, according to annual custom for years past, he presides at the annual dinner given to from 5,000 to 6,000 poor men, women and children in the city hall, Albion street. His lordship and the city magistrates occupy the stage and take dinner with the poor. During the repast, which consists of soup, beef, an entree, plum pudding, tea or coffee and fruit, stirring Scotch airs are played on the big organ by the city organist. At the close his lordship makes a speech, which is reported verbatim in the newspapers. It is usually a masterly production.

Outwardly the aspect of the city resembles that of Sunday. Nevertheless thousands of people are moving about. The myriad of riveters in the miles of shipbuilding yards along the Clyde have come to the city with their wives and families and are attending the matinees or evening pantomime performances that have already been running. These pantomimes are a feature of city life in Scotland during the winter. Usually three open at the big theaters in Glasgow Christmas eve. They are rehearsed for weeks before. The playwright usually chooses as his theme a fairy tale. "Jack the Giant Killer," "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves" and "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" have been favorite themes. As a rule, the playwright retains enough of the tale so that the young folks can recognize the characters, but taken altogether the production becomes really a dramatic burlesque of local life and character, interesting, entertaining and even elevating to old and young. Actors and actresses of renown take the leading parts, while there are dazzling costumes, magnificent scenery and a gorgeous ballet thrown in. No wonder it is that often until the middle of spring the pantomimes enjoy a continuous run. Latterly they become in a sense classics, for their libretti undergo weekly improvement at the suggestion of local wits noted for the pungency of their sayings and the fund of dry Scotch humor they possess. It is no exaggeration to say that these pantomimes are visited by some persons each night all the season through and by others fully a score of times.

Then there is the usual exodus of young men to the country at Christmastide. It is a common saying among Scotchmen that all roads lead to London. This is changed to Glasgow in some cases. There is scarcely a family of note in the Highlands that has not a son at the universities of Glasgow or Edinburgh studying for the professions of law, medicine, the pulpit, the army or the home or foreign civil service. With what hope and pride the advent of the young student is looked for at the little railroad station up in the mountains on Christmas eve or morning! If he lives on an estate the next day he is given a side by his rustic countrymen in their annual Christmas day football match. The game is usually a stoutly contested one, umpired and refereed by the laird and heads of the estate. At the corner of the field is placed a cask of good Scotch ale, from which the players regale themselves at half time. Then the game resumes, and the second half is fast and furious. Around the ropes are the young women of the estate looking on with pleasure and discussing their choices in the dance list of the evening.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Santa Claus in the Zoo.

Said Santa Claus: "'Tis Christmas eve
(The animals looked pleasant),
And each of you will now receive
His yearly Christmas present.
But I'd be glad if every guest
Would mention what he'd like the best."

The tapir said: "That pleases me.
I'll state succinctly, therefore,
If I may be so bold and free,
The only thing I care for
Would be those matches on the shelf,
With which I'd like to light myself."

His wish was granted. Then up spake
A timid little adder:
"Sir, but a trifle it will take
To make my Christmas gladder.
A slate and pencil, if you please,
Would let me do my sums with ease."

The reindeer said, "You may believe
I'd be a happy fellow
If I were sure I would receive
A good sized umberrellow,
And also I'd like four galochs,
Yes, and a rubber mackintosh."
—Walton Williams.

THE WREN BUSH.

An Old Custom Still Observed In Ireland at Christmas.

Among the many odd customs still observed in Ireland at Christmas few are more curious than the practice of carrying about "the wren bush" on St. Stephen's day, and antiquaries are puzzled to explain why the poor little "king of all birds" should be put to death on the festival of the first martyr.

The most probable explanation is that the wren was sacred to the Druids and was used by them in divination and other pagan rites at the festival of the winter solstice, which almost coincided with Christmas, and consequently the clergy urged their converts to destroy the birds which were associated with such unholy rites, just as St. Patrick's relentless destruction of the images of serpents, used in the ancient pagan worship of Ireland, gave rise to the legend that he—

Gave the snakes and toads a twist
And banished them all forever!

This seems the more likely because "drean," the old Irish name for "wren," also means "a Druid," and old folk still call "Jenny" the "Druid bird" and say that she has the gift of prophecy and that those who can interpret her twitterings as she hovers about a house or flies from bush to bush can read the future. In the library of Trinity college, Dublin, there is a curious document describing how to interpret the notes of the wren.—Maud E. Sargent in Longman's Magazine.

Different Now.

"Before we were married," sighed the fond wife, "you used to call me up by long distance telephone just, as you used to say, to hear my voice."

"Well," retorted the rebellious husband, "nowadays you won't let me get far enough from you to use the long distance."—London Telegraph.

Noel---A Ballade For Christmas

The bells chime happily across the night—
The night that crowns the almost dying year—
And soon the morning, with its dawning light,
Proclaims that Christmas day at last is here.
The children high aloft the boar's head bring,
And as they march their merry carols sing,
While Christendom joins in their tuneful lay,
For at this season all are glad and gay,
And men and women, with their hearts aglow,
Shout out with one accord on Christmas day,
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

Emblems of many an old time honored rite,
Of boisterous mirth and homely, honest cheer;
The Yule log, flaming high and blazing bright;
The mistletoe, to youths and maidens dear.
See for snapdragon how they form a ring
Or in a contradance their partners swing?
Lord of misrule makes good his sobriquet,
And all his mandates eagerly obey.
He wields the scepter and with loud hallo
Cries lustily, with none to say him nay,
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

All climes and classes own the season's might.
It rules alike the peasant and the peer;
The humblest home presents a happy sight;
The sternest judge forgets to look severe.
The very birds fly by on lighter wing;
The blustering north wind seems to lose its sting;
The old and young, the golden haired and gray,
Devote the hours to merriment and play,
And far across the crispy, crackling snow
We hear a chorus from a flying sleigh,
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

"HAIL TO THE YULE LOG AND THE MISTLETOE!"

The chosen theme of many a fancy's flight,
A ballad monger or a sonneteer
Yearly his Christmas poem will indite
Of a coy maiden and her cavalier.
Shakespeare full often had his merry fling,
And Milton tuned his harp to noble string;
Irving the scenes of Christmas could betray,
And Dickens its true spirit could convey.
To song and story a rich debt we owe,
And with triumphant cheer this tribute pay,
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

And as the sacred season circles near
All evil thoughts and themes are banished quite;
Our lives become more gentle and sincere;
Our hearts can find no room for dole or spite.
Paeans of praise from thankful hearts upspring
To celebrate the birthday of the King.
All humbly for our brother's weal we pray
And ask a blessing on our future way;
Our generous gifts on others we bestow;
"Peace upon earth, good will to men!" we say.
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

ENVOY.

Spirit of Christmas, we accept thee—yea,
Right willingly we bow beneath thy sway!
We join our songs to those of long ago
With this refrain, for ever and for aye,
"Hail to the Yule log and the mistletoe!"

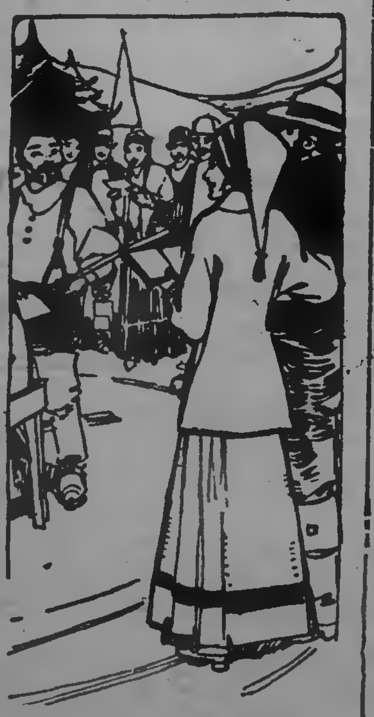
CHRISTMAS AMONG MICHIGAN WOODSMEN

By EDWARD LYONS HACKETT.

AMONG English speaking people there can be found no more quaint observance of the season than that in vogue among the woodsmen of northern Michigan. Throughout this great timber belt there are thousands of men employed, and a large proportion of them see the outside world but once or twice a year when they journey to Sault Ste. Marie or other nearby towns to make purchases of the season's clothing.

Throughout this great wooded district two-thirds of the men are Canadians, many of them devotedly religious, and Christmas among them begins, properly speaking, the 20th of December. However, these men perform their usual labors until the 24th day of the month, and then the festivities begin in earnest.



ALL BEGIN A MARCH AROUND.

During the four days preceding the celebration, however, it must be understood that the work is not so strenuous, and the monotonous buzz of the saw and the ring of the ax are frequently interrupted by merry bursts of song and anecdotes of those who have passed away during the previous season.

In Chippewa county there are many camps or settlements, each controlled by a recognized leader, and long before the holidays the point of celebration is decided upon. By Christmas eve the men, women and children have all assembled at the chosen camp, where elaborate preparations have been made for their comfort, and at 10 o'clock in the morning of that day the duly elected master of ceremonies addresses the multitude of people assembled and outlines the program of the week to follow, for these celebrations continue to the 31st day of December.

After his speech the oldest daughter of the oldest resident is elected queen of the holidays. Her corps of assistants is quickly chosen from the educated classes, and from their decisions pertaining to the week's celebration there can be no appeal. During the remainder of the day many speeches are given, refreshments of many kinds are served, and family groups flock together and relate their own folklore, while the queen, assisted by her advisers, examines and selects the various fowls to be served on the following and subsequent days.

Christmas day is but an hour old when all assemble and indulge in religious services, while the pine knots, flaring and spluttering in the night air, add a beautiful and weird aspect to the scene. At sunrise all the men, women and children, arrayed in their best, assemble at a prearranged spot and form a large circle, the women generally in plain woolen garments and the men in high topped spiked shoes and dark flannel shirts.

In the center of the group stand the husbandmen, or slayers of the fowls, waiting. A grindstone and six men three to grind the axes and three assistants, are also in the center of the group. At a prearranged signal all the people begin a march around, singing and dancing; the grindstones are put in motion, the axes are laid upon them and the celebration is on in earnest. The singing, dancing and countermarching are continued until the axes have attained a keen edge, when all heads are uncovered, while a dozen men hand up the fowls for decapitation. The women take the slain fowls in charge, and soon they are prepared for the earth ovens.

Feasting, drinking and dancing then continue until the last day of the year, when all depart to their various camps.

Wanted to Know.

"Have you ever read any of my husband's poetry?"

"Yes, I have had that—er—yes, ma'am."

"What do you think of it?"

"Madam, are you looking for a compliment for your husband's verses or for sympathy for yourself?"—[illegible]

A Christmas Game.

The "chest" may be arranged in any way that will hide one of the players. The game is based on the old poem, "Mistletoe Bough:"

The mistletoe hung in the castle hall.
The holly branch shone on the old oak wall.
The baron's retainers were blithe and gay
A-keeping the Christmas holiday.

The "retainers" all form a ring about the "lover," who is blindfolded. The retainers sing:

Here we are so blithe and gay,
Keeping our Christmas holiday.
One will hide in the chest hereby.
To guess who it is you must surely try.

With that one of the "retainers" runs and hides in the improvised chest. The "lover" is led to it, and he may ask questions of the hidden one, who may reply by "Yes" or "No," disguising the voice. By these answers the "lover" must tell who the retainer is. If he fails he must try again. When he succeeds, the hidden person becomes the lover.

MARY AND THE INFANT JESUS.

After Christmas.

Said the Christmas tree by the old back fence
To the one just over the way:
"It seems to me it is hard to be
Out here in the cold today.
Last week I stood in a brilliant room,
With children dancing by,
And beautiful candles warmed me through."
Said the other tree, "So did I."

Said the Christmas tree by the old back fence
To the one just over the way:
"I wish out there on the mountain side
They only had let me stay.
My roots were strong, I was warm and green,
While the merry snow flew by,
But now I am trembling, old and weak."
Said the other tree, "So am I."

Said the Christmas tree by the old back fence
To the one just over the way:
"A little boy threw a rock at me
As he passed along today,
And last week, up by a beautiful doll,
A sled was hanging high
For that bad little boy. I'm tired to death."
Said the other tree, "So am I."

Said the Christmas tree by the old back fence
To the one just over the way:
"A little girl that I gave a ring
Came by, and I heard her say,
'You ugly old tree, who cares for you!'
And she made up a face so wry
I wouldn't believe folks could so forget."
Said the other tree, "Nor would I."

Said the Christmas tree by the old back fence
To the one just over the way:
"It's hard to die so far from home,
But I guess we've had our day.
And the children maybe in years to come
Will think of us with a sigh
And the joy it gave. I am reconciled."
Said the other tree, "So am I."

A Christmas Doll Wedding

We are to have a wedding;
  Our mothers planned it all.
You are to be my little wife
  And I your husband tall.

I love your pretty eyes of brown—
  My own are dark and blue—
But as they're only glass, my dear,
  They'll see no faults in you.

My china lips, they long to kiss
  All your dull cares away,
But I must wait for three long weeks
  Until our wedding day.

However, time will pass, sweet maid,
  And then we'll never part.
I swear to love you all my life
  With my true wooden heart.
    Your own
      REGINALD.

Dec. 3, 1910.

Such was the love letter written by Reginald Graham of New York, a beautiful doll twenty inches tall, light hair, blue eyes, with long dark lashes, to his ladylove, Miss Alice Winchester, a brown eyed doll beauty of Boston.

The fact is that a marriage had been arranged between these two dollies by their little mammas and several grown-up aunties, to take place at Christmas time at the home of the doll bride.

But making the clothes! Grandmas, cousins and aunties spent days using their nimble fingers to fashion the tiny manly garments, as no little girl could possibly do the difficult sewing.

It was decided that a black broadcloth suit must be made, but as a full dress evening coat could be used only for formal occasions a tuxedo or dinner coat was finally agreed upon as being of more service.

All the time we have been telling about the bridegroom dear little Alice has been so busy having a long white satin wedding dress made, a real lace veil and the daintiest kind of lace trimmed underwear.

A traveling gown of cloth, an automobile coat of champagne color, a white hat with feathers and flowers, all have been prepared for the "going away" costume.

A procession of twenty little girls with their dollies follows Reginald and Alice, who march into the drawing room to the music of a wedding march played on the piano; then into the dining room, where the dollies sit at a table that has been arranged for them, with a tiny wedding cake decorating the center.

Then comes the wedding tour around the garden, and then the newly married pair go to housekeeping in a big closet that has been furnished for them with all the latest conveniences.

It was really the most brilliant marriage that was ever made in Toyland and is the true story of a dear little brown eyed girl's Christmas present.

A great many dollie guests were invited from "Mother Goose" Land, and among those most noticed were:

Jack Be Nimble, Jack Be Quick,
  He was the first one there;
Then came little Goldie Locks,
  Who ran away from the bear.

Bright Miss Nancy Etticoat,
  Used to standing long,
Shone beside Tom Tucker,
  Who sang the supper song.

Mistress Mary, Quite Contrary,
  Brought from her garden fair
Several maidens all in a row,
  With pretty curling hair.

Bobby Shafto, from o'er the sea,
  Was in a happy mood;
I saw him gazing bashfully
  At dear Red Riding Hood.

Little Miss Muffet had left her tuffet
  And surprised us all, oh, my!
By going to a corner with little Jack
    Horner
  And sharing his Christmas pie.

Shy Bopeep without her sheep
  Many sweet glances won,
And there without his little pig
  Was Tom, the Piper's Son.

Marjorie Daw and big Tom Stout
  Attracted much attention
And many more whose names, alas,
  I haven't room to mention.

It was a wedding so very grand,
  All in the month of December,
With the very Four Hundred of Toyland there,
  As many will long remember.
      —Julian Jerome.

The Price of a Life.

According to Anglo-Saxon law, every man's life, including that of the king, was valued at a fixed price, and any one who took it could commute the offense by a money payment upon a fixed scale. The life of a peasant was reckoned to be worth 200 shillings, that of a man of noble birth 1,200 shillings, and the killing of a king involved the regicide in a payment of 7,200 shillings. It has been pointed out that the heir to the throne could thus get rid of the existing occupant by murdering him and thereafter handing over the fine, according to the scale, to the exchequer, when his offense would be purged and his money would come back to himself, for in those days the sovereign received all fines as personal perquisites. There is very little doubt that these rough means were practically applied in the case of some rulers of England in the preconquest period. —London Telegraph.

ALL ABOARD FOR SOME QUEER RIDES!

By UNCLE BOB.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

COME along, now, children, and your Uncle Bob will give you a ride. What kind of a ride would you like best of all? What—aeroplane? Mercy, no! That machine that flies up into the sky and over rivers and fields and towns is too dangerous for children. It will be a long time before the men who invent things will build an aeroplane safe enough to carry little ones like you. For the present you'd just better stick to the earth and not try to go flying away into the air.

So we won't think about taking an aeroplane ride yet. Automobile, did you say? Well, Uncle Bob has no automobile for you today, but he has something that's lots more fun. A pony? Well, not exactly that, but it's something that walks.

Wait till we get the bridle on. There—take the reins and guide him. Why, what a funny bird! Yes, he's an ostrich. You never rode an ostrich, did you? Some ostriches are too bad tempered for children to ride, but this one has been tamed, and he's all right.

You don't need any saddle on him. Just sit on his shoulders, with your legs down along each side of his neck.

THE OSTRICH RIDING PONY.

His feathers make a nice soft seat for you. He is a very strong bird, and you may have to pull hard on the reins when you want to guide him.

Would you like to have an ostrich for a Christmas present? Well, perhaps a little wagon or one of these nice auto buggies that you run with a pedal and a crank would suit you better. An ostrich that is trained to draw a buggy or carry a passenger on his back costs too much for your Uncle Bob to pay. Ostriches are real rarities, and they come high in this country.

If you think the ostrich is too frisky—and maybe he is, with his long legs and stalky gait—perhaps you'd like a ride on the back of a llama, though it would be difficult to get one of these animals for a Christmas gift and still more difficult to keep it alive and well in the United States. The llama is a sort of camel-like animal that grows in South America. It can live only where the climate is moderate. Too much cold is bad for the llama. In the western and southern regions of South America this very interesting animal lives and thrives. There are many thousands of them, just as there are many thousands of cows in the United States.

The South American people use the llamas not only for their milk and flesh food, but also as beasts of burden. The llama takes the place of the horse in some of the mountainous regions of Peru and other South American countries. He can carry a pretty heavy load and travel for long distances without getting very tired.

How would you like to have Santa Claus put in your stocking—oh, dear, no, that's not large enough—put down alongside the fireplace a nice big, fat wart hog or wild boar for one of your Christmas presents? Ugh! Well, I don't blame you for feeling that way, but all the same there is such a thing as a wild pig to use as a pony, though pigs are not very popular in that way.

RIDING A LLAMA.

There are many kinds of wild hogs. Colonel Roosevelt knows a good deal about them. He hunted the wild boar in Africa, also the wart hog, and down in Texas he has hunted the peccary, which is a sort of pig also, though not by any means so much like the kind your father may have in his pigpen as the wild boar and the wart hog are. The peccary doesn't really look piggish, but he is a pig all the same; he belongs to the great hog family, which is widely distributed over the world.

Now and then a wart hog or a wild boar is caught and tamed, so that a brave young man can ride him. The wart hog belongs to Africa. The wild boar used to be very numerous in England, but that was many, many years ago—long before the present civilization got the upper hand in that island.

ABOARD A WILD HOG.

But perhaps a sled would suit you better than a wild pig? Very well, this Christmas your Uncle Bob won't try to find you a pig broken to the bridle, but will see if he can't make Santa Claus bring you a sled for Christmas. Sometimes a sled runs away and throws you, but it never bites.

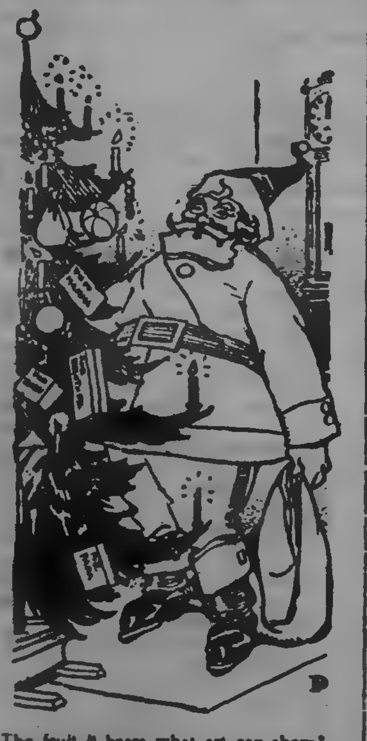
THE TREE OF TREES.

By PETER M'ARTHUR.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

A TREE there is that all year round
  Puts out its blossoms everywhere.
In every happy home it's found,
  And once a year its fruit is fair.
It blooms unseen, but none the less
  Its blossoms yield a peerless fruit.
As high as heaven its branches press
  And deep as love it sends its root.

Our thoughts of those to memory dear
  Will fill it with a radiant bloom
Whose fragrance charms the weary year
  And floods with light our days of gloom.
A whispered wish, a childish sigh,
  Will make a hopeful blossom spring,
And when the waiting months go by
  The tree the longed for fruit will bring.



The fruit it bears what art can show?
  All kinds of sweets and wondrous toys!
How can a tree so truly know
  What gifts to bring for girls and boys?
For old and young its branches bend
  Beneath their burden of delight
With gifts and trinkets without end
  To cheer the heart and glad the sight.

And when old Santa Claus comes round,
  All white with snow, but full of fun,
He plucks the presents that abound
  And leaves a gift with every one.
He is the prince of woodsmen bold,
  For he it is, and none but he,
Who gives the world to have and hold
  The strangely fruitful Christmas tree.

Stevenson Obliged.

Robert Louis Stevenson once sent the following quaint letter to an autograph hunter:

> You have sent me a slip to write on. You have sent me an addressed envelope. You have sent it me stamped. Many have done as much before. You have spelled my name aright, and some have done that. In one point you stand alone; you have sent me the stamps for my postoffice, not the stamps for yours. What is asked with so much consideration I take a pleasure to grant. Here, since you value it and have been at the pains to earn it by such unusual attentions—here is the signature.

CHRISTMAS TREE FRUIT IS RIPE.

OLD TIME GIRDLES.

They Were Indispensable Articles of Wear In the Middle Ages.

In the middle ages at the girdle were hung the thousand and one odds and ends needed and utilized in everyday affairs. The scrivener had his inkhorn and pen attached to it, the scholar his book or books, the monk his crucifix and rosary, the innkeeper his tallies and everybody his knife. So many and so various were the articles attached to it that the flippant began to poke fun. In an old play there is mention of a merchant who had hanging at his girdle a pouch, a spectacle case, a "punniard," a pen and inkhorn and a "handkercher," with many other trinkets besides, of which a merry companion said, "It was like a haberdasher's shop of small wares." In another early play a lady says to her maid: "Give me my girdle and see that all the furniture be at it. Look that pinchers, the penknife, the knife to close letters with, the bodkin, the ear picker and the scale be in the case." Girdles were in some respects like the chatelaines of more modern times, but they differed therefrom in being more useful, more comprehensive in regard both to sex and to articles worn, and when completely finished more costly. It is partly for this reason that we find girdles bequeathed as precious heirlooms and as valuable presents to keep the giver's memory green after death. They were not infrequently of great intrinsic value.

Calculating.

"Why doesn't Mrs. Flimgit stop quarreling with her husband and get a divorce?"

"She realizes how much more of his income he would have left after paying alimony than she now allows him for car fare and lunches."—Washington Star.

Careless.

WHAT IS A CHRISTMAS TREE?

BY ROBERTUS LOVE

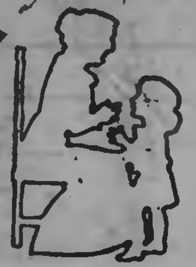
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

WHAT kind of a tree is a Christmas tree?
I'm sure all you children and I will agree
That it isn't an orange or plum or pear,
Though all of these fruits it is likely to bear.

THE Christmas tree is a popcorn tree—
A fact that a Sleepy-Eye Kid can see—
For look at the popcorn balls and strings
That hang from its branches, 'mong other nice things.

BUT listen to grandpa's wise old talk.
He tells us that popcorn is grown on a stalk.
We'll have to believe him, and so, you see,
That it really isn't a popcorn tree.

THE Christmas tree is a candle tree,
For candles all over it all of us see.
They're red, white and blue, and we'll light 'em tonight,
For candles are meant to make candle trees bright.

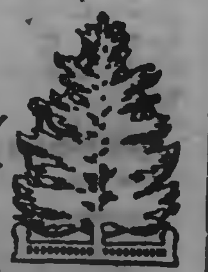


NOW listen to grandma (please leave us alone!)—
She tells us that candles are molded, not grown;
So we've got to give up, with a sigh, you see,
The notion that this is a candle tree.

THE Christmas tree is a spangle tree,
For spangles are dangling all over it, see?
Spangles of silver and spangles of gilt,
It's surely a spangle tree Santa has built!

BUT listen to daddy—he says, says he,
There's no such thing as a spangle tree,
For spangles, says daddy, are made in a shop,
So this nice idea we'll have to let drop.

THE Christmas tree is a candy tree—
I'm sure now we have it! Let's holler with glee!
There's candy in boxes and candy in bags,
Let's mark it with "THIS IS A CANDY TREE" tags!



BUT here comes your mamma, who says, if you please,
"Who ever saw candy that GREW upon trees?"
So sadly we've got to surrender such whims,
It may be this candy was TIED to the limbs!

THE Christmas tree is a CHRISTMAS tree!
Is that not sufficient for you and for me?
It's full of good goodies that Santa Claus grows,
And WE shouldn't ask how they got there, I s'pose.

A Merry Xmas to All

BREEZY BITS OF BRITISH NEWS

Much interest centres in the visit of the two famous Scotch combination Glasgow Celtic and Glasgow Rangers, to Ireland on Boxing Day. The first named play Belfast Celtic at Belfast, whilst the Rangers meet the Bohemians at Dublin.

Don't forget Saturday's football results in next Monday's Review.

The first All British Ball held at the Foresters' Hall on Friday night last was a great success. The music performed by the orchestra under the able direction of Mr. A. C. Cowie, certainly deserves the highest praise. Owing to the numerous requests for another ball at an early date, the committee are considering having another on or about New Year's, but more later on.

Sentence of death has been passed at Croydon on Florence Boxall for murdering her illigitimate child by strangling it.

Seven young Guardsmen have been charged at Croydon with being deserters from the 9th Company of Irish Guards, stationed at Caterham. It was stated that the men were sober, but had been drinking heavily overnight. Eighteen men broke out of barracks. The seven caught were remanded to await the escort of two sergeants and two privates.

Scott's Rhyme of Merry Christmas

Heap on more wood! The wind is chill,
But, let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.
Each age has deemed the newborn year
The fittest time for festal cheer,
And well our Christian sires of old
Loved when the year its course had rolled
And brought blithe Christmas back again
With all his hospitable train.

Domestic and religious rite
Gave honor to the holy night.
On Christmas eve the bells were rung;
On Christmas eve the mass was sung;
That only night in all the year
Saw the stoled priest the chalice rear.
The damsel donned her kirtle sheen;
The hall was dressed with holly green;
Forth to the wood did merry men go
To gather in the mistletoe.

Then opened wide the baron's hall
To vassal, tenant, serf and all;

Power laid his rod of rule aside,
And Ceremony doffed his pride.
The heir, with roses in his shoes,
That night might village partner choose;
All hailed with uncontrolled delight
And general voice the happy night
That to the cottage as the crown
Brought tidings of salvation down.

The fire, with well dried logs supplied,
Went roaring up the chimney wide;
The huge hall table's oaken face,
Scrubbed till it shone, the day to grace,
Bore then upon its massive board
No mark to part the squire and lord.

Then was brought in the lusty brawn
By old blue coated serving man;
Then the grim boar's head frowned on high,
Crested with bays and rosemary.
Well can the green barbed ranger tell
How, when and where the monster fell,
What dogs before his death he tore
And all the baiting of the boar.

The wassail round, in good brown bowls,
Garnished with ribbons, blithely trowls.
There the huge sirloin reeked; hard by
Plum porridge stood and Christmas pie,
Nor failed old Scotland to produce
At such high tide her savory goose.

Then came the merry maskers in,
And carols roared with blithesome din;
If unmelodious was the song,
It was a hearty note and strong.
England was merry England when Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale;
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale;
A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year.

—Sir Walter Scott.

THE JOLLY JACK TAR

BY

HARRY SYPHER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

OH, the jolly Jack Tar! he is far away from home,
Aboard the nation's battleship upon the briny foam.
At Christmas time and all times he sails the seven seas;
He quaffs the fragrant spices in every foreign breeze,
And always when the day comes round that comes but once a year
He sighs to quaff the fragrance of his fireside cheer.

BUT still the jolly Jack Tar upon the billowed brine,
For all his lonesome feeling, is never heard to whine.
From somewhere east of Suez he gets his Christmas greens
And decks himself all over with a wealth of woodland scenes.
With gorgeous glee he decks himself upon the hammock deck,
With evergreens upon his heart and holly round his neck.

THOUGH jolly Jack has not a chance to hang the mistletoe
And kiss the girl he left behind in case she gets below,
He hitches up his trousers and he whistles through his teeth
And goes and makes the mascot goat a jolly holly wreath,
And then he sings a chantey song, with loud guffaws between,
Anent the merry mascot and the wearing of the green.

THEN down within his mess room the jolly Jack Tar sits
And culls a Christmas dinner from the galley and the kits,
And Billygoat and Nannygoat are both remembered, too—
They get a bounteous feast themselves when jolly Jack is through
For, though they have no spinach, they devour the Christmas greens—
The holly and the shrubbery and all the woodland scenes.

We Wish All the Compliments of the Season

For the Children

A Hippo Very Patiently and Quietly Waiting For His Dinner.

Above is the portrait of the largest hippopotamus in the New York zoo. He is hungry and waiting for the attendant to bring his dinner along. You can see by his open smile that he is able to take a pretty large mouthful. In captivity the hippopotamus is fed grass and hay, bread, carrots and various other vegetables. When the keeper feeds bread the hippo simply opens his mouth and lets the man pitch the loaves into his cavernous maw.

In their native habitat, Africa, hippos are sometimes found as much as fourteen feet long and nearly five feet high, but they usually are much smaller. They delight in water, living in lakes and rivers and feeding on water plants and the herbage growing near the water. They are good swimmers and divers and can remain under water eight or ten minutes.

A Roland For an Oliver.

"A Roland for an Oliver" is an expression that dates from the time of Charlemagne. Roland was his nephew and, like the great Charles, was eight feet high. Oliver, a celebrated knight of the same period, was quite a match for him, and they agreed to test their respective strength and skill in a combat on an island in the Rhine. The contest lasted five days without the slightest advantage to either. If Roland got in a well directed blow his opponent gave him quite as good a one in return, or if Oliver performed a feat of extraordinary skill Roland was sure to match it with a movement quite as adroit. It was a remarkable and altogether unsettled combat, and it gave rise to the saying "a Roland for an Oliver" when a person who has attacked another receives a blow or a retort fully equal to what he has given. Whatever it may be that is received, a return in kind is often called "a Roland for an Oliver."

Elephants Good Workers.

Elephants are used in every department of sawmills in Burma. In the work of piling logs they show great intelligence. One elephant will drag a log out of the water to the saw bench and place it with his tusks on the table, while his mate waits at the other end, ready, as soon as the buzzing circular saw has converted the round tree into a four sided log, to lift it off the bench, place it on the ground and drag it out to the storage yard, where he puts it carefully into position, placing one log exactly on top of the other. Elephants can pile logs as high as their foreheads. When the squared logs are wanted for shipment the elephant picks out the required number and drags them down to the waterside. If it is necessary he enters the river and holds the logs in position while they are being bound together by the raftsmen.

Portrait—A Game.

In the game called portrait one person leaves the room while the others choose the name of some one they all know. The person on re-entering the room has to guess the name selected by asking questions, which must be answered only by "Yes" or "No." For instance, "Is it a man?" "No." "Is it a woman?" "Yes." "Is she married?" "No." "Is she tall?" "Has she fair hair?" "Are her eyes blue?" "Is she in this room?" and so on till the portrait is recognized.

Sometimes the company choose the one who went outside to be the portrait, which naturally makes the guessing rather more difficult.

What Feet Are These?

There's a foot that's played all over our land.
There's a foot that is often seen in the sand.
There's a foot that crosses many a stream
And a foot we sometimes strike in a dream.
There's a foot that marches in rain or shine
And a foot that has measured many a line.
There's a foot which makes for our feet a rest
And a foot which is heard from east to west.

HO! FOR CHRISTMAS SPORTS OUTDOORS.

By UNCLE BOB.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

DID you ever wear snowshoes? Maybe not, but they're great fun if you know how to use them. Of course if you live in southern California or Florida or other really southern places you needn't ever hope to enjoy snowshoes unless you go a long way north, but it is interesting to read about them and know something about them anyhow. There are states in this big country where snowshoeing is popular—away up in Michigan and Wisconsin, for instance, where the snow lies deep on the ground for months at a time. Over in Norway, far across the Atlantic ocean, is the place where snowshoes come in the most handy, for that is a land of deep snows and long winters.

NOT THE LEAST BIT AFRAID.

The idea of the snowshoe is to keep you from breaking through the top crust of the deep snow and let you skim gracefully over the white surface. Snowshoes are much used in the big forests, where the snow falls several feet deep and then gets a frozen crust over the surface that will hold up anybody on snowshoes, but would let a person wearing ordinary shoes or boots break through and flounder about up to his arms perhaps.

With a pair of snowshoes secured to your feet you can travel fast over the snow crust—if you know how. It takes quite a little practice to learn how to travel on snowshoes. The little boy in the picture certainly looks as if his father had taught him how, for he doesn't appear to be the least bit afraid. His smile shows that he is enjoying the sport.

Snowshoes are not real shoes, of course. You must wear your real shoes and stockings to keep your feet warm, then fasten the snowshoes to your soles. They are really very much like little sleds, only that you have a sled on each foot instead of the "belly buster" that you use in coasting downhill. You can climb hills on snowshoes, and you can't do that on a sled, as you know. That's where lots of the fun comes in.

In northern Michigan and some other parts of the north the little boys and girls sometimes get a pair of snowshoes from Santa Claus, and they prove to be a very enjoyable Christmas present.

"Skates will do for me," says Susie. Oh, very well. Then we'll have Santa Claus leave a pair of skates for you beneath the mantel. They're too big and awkward to put into your stockings, and you want all the room there is in your stockings for candy and other smaller gifts, anyhow.

Every boy and girl who loves the outdoors—and what child doesn't?—wants to go skating. You'll agree to that, won't you? Of course, if you live far south, where the creeks and ponds don't freeze over, you can't expect ice skating, but then there are roller skates. Still, roller skates don't really suggest Christmas. A pair of them is a welcome gift from Santa Claus to a boy or a girl, but it is the ice skates that make us think of Christmas time.

HER THRONE IS A TREETOP

"SKATES FOR ME," SAYS SUSIE.

Nowadays skates are nicer and cheaper than those we used to have, say, thirty years ago. Did any of you boys and girls ever see a pair of the clumsy looking wooden skates with steel runners which your fathers used to wear before the all metal skates came into fashion? Those wooden skates were strapped to heel and toe—no heel plates or toe clamps in those days. But they were mighty good skates all the same, and your father enjoyed them just as much as you'll enjoy the highly polished nickeled beauties which Santa Claus may leave for you this Christmas.

Here's a picture of the Christmas queen, the queen of outdoor sports in winter time. You will see that she is dressed very warmly, which is as she should be, for she is standing in a treetop—her throne, you know—and it must be pretty chilly up there when the wind blows. But you will notice also that the Christmas queen has wings, so she can fly down and join her subjects, the other boys and girls, in skating, snowshoeing or coasting downhill. The queen in this case is not a fairy, as you may imagine, but a dear little girl "made up" to play the part at a Christmas tournament that took place in an English town last year.

Christmas on A Canalboat

"How are we going to spend Christmas?" exclaimed the good natured Mrs. Captain Boggs, seemingly a bit surprised at the question, for canalboat folk are sensitive of any criticism aimed in their direction.

"Why, we're going to spend the day just like other folk. Some think because we live on canalboats we don't have any comforts and eat like savages. My, but I'd a heap sight rather live down here than in a flat like my niece's. She's got six rooms, and they don't begin to be as big as mine.

"If you think there ain't room just look here," and Mrs. Boggs displayed the secrets of a suit of rooms, the ingenuity of the arrangement rivaling the den of the New York bachelor girl. Out of the main cabin, which served as living and dining room combined, two alcoves jutted, besides an infinitesimal corner dubbed the kitchen, but which was even tinier than the modern apartment house kitchenette.

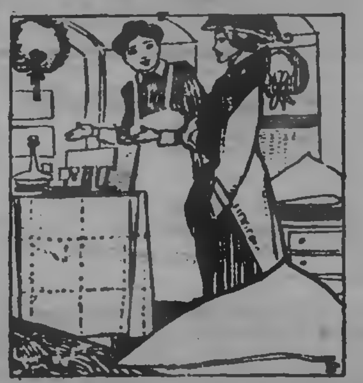
While under ordinary circumstances the kitchen was part of the cabin proper, two doors at right angles to each other could be drawn out, which, meeting, formed a room by itself. A shiny coal stove or range quite filled the compartment, leaving just room before it in which to work, while above it every inch of wall space was utilized with pots and kettles and kitchen utensils of every sort.

A low cupboard opening into the hold contained more articles of kitchen use, as well as vegetables and canned goods. Bunks were displayed in the two other alcoves, which were in open view of the cabin. But from the recesses of the boat Mrs. Boggs pulled out a sliding door, which completely divided the space into two rooms, and when curtains were drawn into the cabin the occupants enjoyed all the privacy desired.

A big divan could be opened up at night into a roomy double bed, and another bunk, "just under the eaves," was sufficiently large to tuck two small youngsters away. Chests of drawers built in, wardrobes and cupboards in out of the way places supplied room for bedding, clothing and the boots and shoes of a family of children.

One of the biggest surprises in the boat, one which conveyed a hint that might be applied in small houses where room is at a [illegible] was the preserved fruit baskets.

"We all do up our own fruit," went on Mrs. Boggs. "You see, while we go up the canal we are in the country most of the time, and it is much cheaper to put up our own fruit than buy it in winter, and this is where we store it."



"I'D A HEAP SIGHT RATHER LIVE DOWN HERE."

Going to the stairs up the companionway, she pulled out tiny drawers. Small knobs jutted out from the face of each step with which to open the drawers, while within there was quite room enough to allow pint fruit jars to stand upright.

A cold storage room was tucked away in the hold, into which a small door about two feet in height opened. The dining table was a folding affair which turned up against the wall of the cabin when not in use.

When some surprise was expressed at the presence of a sewing machine in the room Mrs. Boggs said: "Oh, that's nothing! Many of the boats have organs as well, and there is one fitted up with a porcelain bathtub. So, you see, we have some of the luxuries of city houses and plenty of good air and sunshine. A concert is to be given on one of the boats here New Year's eve, and if you should like to come down we'd be glad to have you and show you a bit of canalboat hospitality."

A Seditious Poet.

One of the editors of the Nationalist newspaper El Alam has published at Cairo a book of poems said to contain seditious matter, eulogizing the two assassins Dhingra and Wardani, vilifying the murdered Premier Boutros Pasha, denouncing the British occupation, and threatening the Khedive. Ferid Bey, leader of the Nationalist party, wrote a preface recommending the book. The book has been confiscated, and the author of the poems has suddenly disappeared from the [illegible] of the authorities.

WINNIPEG CAR MEN RESTLESS

Unless a Decided Change Takes Place Few Cars Will be Running To-day.

Winnipeg, Dec. 16.—Unless there is a decided change in the feeling existing among street railway men, there will be few if any cars running today. Magnus Sinclair, international representative of the union, stated that the executive waited on Manager Phillips on Wednesday, and made a final attempt to effect a settlement, but the manager refused to consider their propositions. He stated that the men would hold a mass meeting when the cars cease running at two o'clock in the morning, when a three-fourths vote of the men would settle it.

Sinclair said the feeling among the men was very pronounced, and there was but little doubt of a strike being called. Manager Phillips of the street railway stated that representatives of the men had called and endeavored to arrange a settlement, but the company could not see their way to accept the proposals. When asked as to the company's condition regarding men, Manager Phillips said that doubtless they would be handicapped for a few days, but he felt that there was no other alternative.

RIDDELL AT WASHINGTON

He Discusses the Observance of Rush-Bagot Treaty.

Washington, D.C., Dec. 16.—"International Relations Between the United States and Canada" was the subject of a comprehensive address by Justice W. R. Riddell of Toronto before the international conference of the American Society for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes, which opened its three days' session yesterday. Secretary of State Knox is presiding, and Hon. Elihu Root and Andrew Carnegie are among the notables participating.

Justice Riddell sketched the progress of various international arbitrations, from the treaty of Ghent in 1814 to the waterways treaty of last year between Canada and the United States, providing for a permanent joint commission. Continuing, he said: "Leaving aside questions of tariff, which are quite outside the subject of this paper, the international relations between the two countries are governed by the three agreements, the Rush-Bagot arrangement, the general arbitration treaty of 1908, and the waterways treaty of 1909."

Speaking of the claim by the United States that there was nothing in treaty obligations to prevent the building of any kind of vessel on the great lakes and that there were a dozen shipyards able to launch naval vessels of the maximum size that can be taken through the canal system, he said:

"It may be well for the United States to consider whether it is not unwise to ask that the letter of the agreement should be set aside. Canada would be considered ungracious were she to refuse to consent to other ships being allowed to pass up the canals for use on the lakes. It would look as though she feared a hostile movement on the part of her neighbor; that she doubted the good faith and real desire for permanent peace of her elder brother to the south. But both parties thought that the agreement was one that should be made, and when made, should be continued, and one rather fails to see how the convenience of one party should lead to its modification. National sensibilities are to be considered, however absurd they may be, and whether they are absurd or not."

"It might well be that the most carefully drawn code would be found not to cover certain matters — the 'casus omissus' is always coming up in ordinary litigation. What harm could result from allowing the board to lay down rules to cover any casus omissus?

"We have got far away from the old 'club law' in most instances. Is it too much to expect that the two great English-speaking nations will set the example to the world of the total abolition of this fiendish law in international matters as well. God speed the day."

Storms in Spain.

Barcelona, Dec. 16.—Storms of a cyclonic character are flooding a large part of the country and the situation is becoming desperate in the Provinces of Malaga, Seville, Valladolid, Badajoz, Zamora, Oviedo and Corunna. Practically all the crops in these districts have been destroyed, and the people are threatened with famine. Many villages are now submerged, and countless bridges have been swept away.

The British steamer Gravina dragged her anchors at Corunna and was dashed against a jetty. The Norwegian steamer Tifli, chartered by the Royal Mail Steamship Co., is reported ashore at Orotava, Teneriffe, and is regarded as a total loss. Four of her crew perished.

The British Elections.

London, Dec. 16.—The latest returns announced last night give the Government coalition 353 seats, and the Unionists 257.

The standing of the parties is now as follows:—

Government Coalition—Liberals 240, Laborites 40, Nationalists 64, Independent Nationalists 9. Total, 353.

Opposition—Unionists, 257.

Clearly in the new Parliament, as in the last Parliament, the Nationalists, by combining with the Unionists, could overthrow the Government, but the Liberals, Laborites and Nationalists are all equally desirous of abolishing the veto of the House of Lords, and may be expected to work together to attain that object.

On Their Way to Servitude.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—Thomas McNulty and Mary Dolan, on their way from Barrie jail to spend, according to the sentence, the remainder of their lives in Kingston penitentiary, were at the Union Station for a while yesterday. They were not handcuffed and were apparently traveling together on the best of terms, though it was the girl's evidence that convicted him. McNulty showed dislike of the curious crowds that hovered about. The girl's father and two women friends were also in the party.

Rink Roof Caved In.

Owen Sound, Dec. 16.—At Parkhead, a village ten miles from here, on Wednesday night at 7.45, the entire roof of the rink collapsed. Quite a number of the hockey boys had gone on the ice, when the rafters began to break, and immediately the door was jammed with people endeavoring to make their escape. Strange to say, there was only one injured, one young man received a slight injury to his arm.

A Real Bandit.

OPPOSITION ASKS QUESTIONS ABOUT THE SHELDON CASE

Warm Debate Occurs In Commons Over the Illegal Use of the Mails and the Failure of the Authorities to Invoke the Law That Empowers the Postal Officials to Act—New Banking Act.

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Quite an animated debate was stirred up in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon on the responsibility of the Government in enforcing its own laws and putting an end to the operations of the promoters of get-rich-quick schemes, through their use of the mails.

J. E. Armstrong (E. Lambton) precipitated a long discussion over the C. D. A. Sheldon affair in Montreal. He wanted to know what action the Postoffice Department was taking to put a stop to the mails being used for the furtherance of get-rich-quick schemes, such as that run by Sheldon. Had the Government made any effort to locate the guilty parties? Surely it had not come to this, as was indicated in the reply, he said, that the Government had no control over the matter which was going through the mails. The Postoffice Department, he had been informed, had no power to institute prosecutions. He could not understand this.

He gave instances to show that the United States postal authorities got right after this class of people, and made them disgorge. Why did not the Solicitor-General take the matter up? He should be censured, for he knew that this man was carrying on illegal transactions.

He then went on to say that if the Government of the United States could bring men back, surely the Government of Canada could. If the Government couldn't, they ought to get the power at once. The Federal Government must have the power, for neither Quebec nor Ontario had control over the mails of Canada.

W. F. Maclean (South York): The question raised by the hon. member for East Lambton is on a similar footing to questions that I have raised in this House on former occasions. I contend that it is the duty of the Federal authorities to enforce federal laws. And I am the more confirmed in that opinion, because I find that, in some cases, we are doing it now. We enforce the Railway Act, we prosecute for infractions of the customs law, and for crimes in connection with his Majesty's mails.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the British North America Act had not made provision for the administration of the laws. By that act practically all the courts were placed under the jurisdiction of the provinces. In this case action had been taken by the Provincial authorities to prosecute the offender, and he is being looked for at the present time. The province had crown prosecutors, and he doubted if we would have been much better off in this instance if there was a federal prosecutor.

Mr. Armstrong complained that there were violations of the law in respect to the operation of mining companies in New Ontario.

Jacques Bureau, Solicitor-General, ~~said that before~~ the postoffice authorities could be expected to take action, it was necessary to show that there had been fraud, and that the mails had been used for the circulation of circulars.

A. E. Lancaster said it was quite manifest that the mails had been used for this purpose, and that the Postmaster-General had neglected his duty in failing to prosecute.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in the absence of Hon. W. S. Fielding, introduced in the House of Commons yesterday the new Bank Act, which follows upon the decennial revision required by statute. The bank charters expire July 1, and will have to be renewed. It is a bulky measure, and contains several important changes.

The main feature, Sir Wilfrid explained, was the introduction of a clause providing for a shareholders' audit. At a general meeting of the shareholders, an auditor can be appointed under the new section, and at any time thereafter shareholders representing five per cent. of the capital stock of the bank, can ask the Canadian Bankers' Association for a special audit, and the audit so made shall be included in the annual statement issued to the shareholders of the bank.

"It also provides," Sir Wilfrid continued, "that the annual statement of the reports and of the accounts and the documents issued by the bank must be issued upon the authority and signature of the proper officers; and upon them the civil and criminal liability rests. If they do not acquaint themselves by actual information of the truth of what they sign, it would not be sufficient for these officials to say that they have signed in good faith, as was done in former days, but every official of the bank, whatever his rank or standing, who under the law is compelled to put his signature to a document, must personally acquaint himself as to the truth of the facts therein contained, and he becomes responsible.

New machinery is provided, whereby banks whose share capital is $50 to $100, which is the usual parity now, by resolution of the shareholders.

An added provision makes it legal to pledge to the bank as security under the act the products of the forest, including saw logs, railway ties, and timber, as deals, boards, staves and other lumber.

There is no doubt that the bill will be exhaustively discussed in committee, when the Bankers' Association will be able to make suggestions, and the fight that H. C. McLeod, former general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, for Government inspection, will be brought up.

Pulp Area Concessions.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—Hon. Frank Cochrane is reported to have set himself against yielding to a formidable movement to secure extension of pulp area concessions in the Nipigon district. According to corridor rumors, it will be a fight to a finish before the Minister of Mines yields any of the public domain, except it be upon such terms as will fully conserve the public interests.

According to one statement, a deputation from the Canadian Power & Paper Co. which saw Hon. Mr. Cochrane, caused the negotiations to be advanced a stage. From another source, a very different intimation was conveyed.

The deputation included Wm. Mackenzie, F. H. Phippen, K.C., and S. Marks, Sault Ste. Marie.

The Canadian Power & Paper Co. holds a Dominion charter. Its head office is at the Canadian Northern headquarters, Toronto.

TOOK EARTHQUAKE FOR BURGLARS

Glasgow, Dec. 16.—The Glasgow police force is being subjected to unprecedented raillery to-day for its failure to capture the "bank burglars," who on Wednesday night threw the city into a scare. Experiencing a tremendous shock, and rumbling noise, the police jumped to the conclusion that a bank was being dynamited. A general alarm was sounded, and the police searched the city for the supposed yeggs. The fact that everybody else in town had heard the "explosion," and was out in the streets in a state of semi-panic, only served to convince the police that they had a desperate case on hand.

Not until the search had progressed several hours was it learned that the noise and rumbling were from an earthquake that shook not only Glasgow, but much of western Scotland. No serious damage resulted.

KILLED SON

George Vanstone, Aged 61, Beat His 6 Year Old Son to Death With a Broomstick—Arrested on the Charge of Murder.

Special to The Review.

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 16.—Another murder occurred at Goderich last night about 10 o'clock when George Vanstone, 61 years old, beat his little son, aged six years, to death with a broomstick.

The murderer spent some time in an asylum some years ago, and was probably insane when he committed the deed. He has been arrested.

EIGHT HUNDRED FARMERS MEET PREMIER TO-DAY

They Ask a Lower Tariff on Farm Machinery and Free Trade With Great Britain—In Case This Is Given They Will Be Able to Supply the Empire With Wheat—E. C. Drury Moves the Resolution.

Ottawa, Dec. 16.—Eight hundred delegates, representing every province of Canada, with the exception of Prince Edward Island, were present at the convention held at the Grand Opera House yesterday, to frame the resolutions to be presented to the Government by the monster deputation of farmers, which will wait upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the House of Commons to-day.

The resolution on the tariff was moved by E. C. Drury of Barrie, Ont., secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, and ex-master of the Dominion Grange.

Mr. Drury said that tariff was undoubtedly the greatest question of the day, as far as the farmers were concerned. He did not see any objection to the system of protection, if it did what it was intended to do, namely to adjust an infant industry for a short time, but no one contemplated that this system would run on for years, and become a permanent burden on the country.

To-day the organized manufacturers were holding up the country, instead of trying to develop it. They were not trying to increase the output of the country, but to restrict it for their own advantage. He would present this question not from a standpoint of the farmers, but from the standpoint of building up a great empire. In making their demands, they were not asking for any system which would tax the manufacturers for the benefit of the farmers, but they were asking that the system established for infant industries, and now become a system of legalized robbery, should be put a stop to.

E. A. Partridge of Sintaluta, Sask., seconded the resolution. Under free trade conditions manufacturing could be carried on more cheaply than at present. He declared himself in favor of direct taxation on the basis of land values.

The resolution was supported by representatives from each of the provinces, S. C. Parker of Berwick speaking for Nova Scotia, S. B. Hathaway of Fredericton for New Brunswick, Robert Sellar of Huntingdon for Quebec, Mr. Johnston of Simcoe for Ontario, James Speakman of Penhold for Alberta. R. McKenzie of Winnipeg, Thomas McMillan of Seaforth and J. L. Brown of Pilot Mound, Man., also spoke in support of the resolution, but a delegate moved that no one be heard in favor of the resolution, but that an opportunity be now given to those opposed. This was agreed to, and the chairman invited any person who did not approve of the resolution to take the platform, but there was no response, and the resolution carried unanimously, the delegates cheering.

The memorials demand in brief:—

(1) Reciprocal free trade between the United States and Canada in all horticultural, agricultural and animal products, spraying materials, fertilizers, fuel, illuminating and lubricating oils, cement, fish and lumber.

(2) Reciprocal free trade between the two countries in all agricultural implements, machinery, vehicles and parts thereof.

(3) An immediate lowering of the duties on all British imports to one-half the rates charged under the general tariff, whatever these may be. That any trade advantages given to the United States in reciprocal trade relations be extended to Great Britain.

(4) For such reduction of the remaining preferential tariff as will insure the establishment of complete free trade between the Dominion and mother country within ten years.

(5) That the farmers of this country are willing to face direct taxation, in such form as may be advisable, to make up the revenue loss under the new tariff relations.

The other resolutions ask: Government ownership of the Hudson Bay Railway, the establishment of a chilled meat trade in Canada, to foster a greater export business, the passing of a law to permit the formation of co-operative societies, and Government ownership of terminal elevators.

Want Her For the Stage.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 16.—A tubful of mail for Hattie Leblanc, the little French-Canadian girl who was acquitted by a jury on Wednesday of the murder of Clarence F. Glover, was received at the Cambridge jail yesterday. Hundreds of souvenir postcards, each bearing a message of congratulation, were in the mail, and an immense pile of letters. The letters included many proposals of marriage, and several theatrical men offered the girl a large salary for a stage contract. One Boston theatrical agent made an offer of $500 a week.

Hattie will leave within a few days for her old home in West Arichat, Cape Breton.

Trip to Indies.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—Final arrangements have been made with the Dominion Government and the C.P.R., by which 125 or more Canadian manufacturers and business men will take a pleasant combination business and holiday trip through the West Indies on board the Lake Manitoba during January and February next. H. C. McKenzie Cornish, the man who has been engineering the project, is in Toronto for the week. He is an English resident of Jamaica, is general manager of the Canada and West Indies Publishing Co., and editor of the company's magazine. He is also connected with The Daily Telegraph and Guardian of Kingston, Jamaica.

DEPOSITORS TELL HOW THEY WERE PERSUADED TO FORSAKE FARMERS' BANK

Evidence In Lindsay Bank Conspiracy Trial Is That McGill Said Farmers' Bank Was Going Up and Advised Depositors to Transfer Accounts—Col. Mason Tells of Former Manager's Letter.

Lindsay, Dec. 16.—Yesterday's evidence in the trial of McGill, Fleury, and Coulter, charged with conspiracy to injure the Farmers' Bank, was mainly that of depositors who had been solicited to withdraw their deposits.

James Malcolm of Nestleton, a depositor and stockholder, said McGill and Coulter had called on him one night and McGill told him "as a friend," that his money wasn't safe. McGill had solicited his account for another bank. He had also said the bank stock had sold as low as $11. He had complied, but later went back to the Farmers'.

During the examination, Mr. Cowan referred to the preliminary trial proceedings as having been conducted by H. H. Dewart, K.C., counsel for the bank, and not the crown attorney.

Mr. Porteous, liveryman, had once been asked by McGill if $35 wasn't "pretty low" for the bank stock.

Mrs. Caroline Brisbin of Gelverton had seen Norman Fleury with McGill about June 28. Her deposit was changed in her own house, Fleury drawing up the check and giving her a new account book in the Home Bank.

Lewis Fallis, Janetville, had seen McGill and asked him concerning rumors about the bank. McGill was after a horse "to drive around the country."

"Did you have conversation with Mr. McGill?" asked the crown.

"I asked if the Farmers' Bank was going up. He said yes. I said it was funny, and asked him to speak to the women in the house, as I was the means, through McGill, for their deposits being in that bank."

"Were you in the Farmers' Bank in Lindsay?"

"I was, and went into the bank next door. I asked Mr. Fleury there about the books I was to get. He said they were not ready. We got back the books and checks that had been given to Mr. McGill the day before."

Robert Thompson had seen A. B. McGill with Coulter on Tuesday, July 5, on the road to Nestleton. McGill had said their stock was down to 30, and at last was as low as 11."

"Did you do business?"

"Not there. At my home. Mr. McGill met me and came back with me in the buggy. I got my bank book down and I think McGill did the writing. He gave me another bank book. I said 'I thought the Farmers' Bank was doing well.' He said the Nestleton branch was doing well, but the other places were not. He thought it could't last more than a week or two. In about ten days I transferred back to the Farmers' Bank."

Messrs. Marlow, Muirhead, John Burns and W. H. Heaslip had been solicited to transfer their accounts, they said.

Gordon Dickson, present manager of the Farmers' Bank in Lindsay, was next called. He came June 29, when McGill said there had been a run on the bank, but gave no reason. McGill left the bank at noon and didn't come back until the evening, when witness sent into the bank next door for him.

"Next morning we went on the train to Janetville together," said witness. "At Janetville he came in with the check of Heaslip. I asked to see Heaslip. He said he demanded the cash. I said, 'I want 15 days' notice.' He said, 'I'll protest it.' I said, 'You'll have to pay for the protest yourself.' The money was afterwards paid to Heaslip."

"How much was withdrawn up to the investigation in the Police Court?"

"Sixty thousand dollars."

Col. Mason, general manager of the Home Bank, described the negotiations between him and McGill about starting a branch of the Home Bank in Lindsay, which was opened June 29, with McGill as manager. It was at a meeting of the board of directors on June 28 that the matter was decided. In his communications McGill had said that he had been connected with the Farmers' Bank, and, owing to a feeling of uneasiness, some were withdrawing their accounts, and that he had some influence and could get some of these deposits.

"If you knew he was in the employ of the Farmers' Bank, would you have talked to him about the matter?"

"No, I don't think I would."

Will Be Tried by Jury.

Buffalo, Dec. 16.—While his aged mother sobbed so violently that the trial of the case at times was interfered with, Ernest V. Tyrall of Toronto, charged with bringing a woman into the country for immoral purposes, was given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner C. K. Robinson yesterday. Commissioner Robinson considered the evidence sufficient to hold the man for the grand jury.

Free Delivery for Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 16.—Mayor Dores yesterday said that free mail delivery would be put in force here in January. Deputy Postmaster-General Coulter has promised him that this will be carried out. Last month a police census was taken to ascertain if the population exceeded 10,000, as the Department promised free delivery if it was over that. The census gave the city 10,030.

Joy Riding Sailors.

Brest, France, Dec. 16.—Three sailors of the United States battleship Minnesota were arrested yesterday, charged with having assaulted and robbed a chauffeur whose automobile, it is alleged, they seized for a nocturnal joy ride.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

There are growing dissensions in the ranks of the British Tories.

British tariff reform journals seek to minimize importance of farmers' delegation to Ottawa.

Correspondence between Mr. Fielding and President Taft regarding the trade negotiations was brought down in the Commons.

A sad story comes from Winnipeg of thirty men being sent on a 65-mile tramp for work, and finding they were not wanted when they arrived at the place indicated.

It is stated that Federal home rule will be one of the subjects for discussion at the Imperial Conference next year.

Niagara district fruit-growers met at St. Catharines and heard a description of the little peach pest, a new disease that is making some headway in Ontario.

FROM THE SCRAP HEAP

In the House of Commons Mr. Monk read from the Royal navy list the history of the cruiser Rainbow, one of the vessels purchased by the Government as a foundation for Canada's navy and which was put in commission in 1892. In 1906 she was placed in the list of cruisers available for subsidiary services and later in the list of vessels and hulks for sale. Again she was in the subsidiary service list and finally sold to the Canadian Government.

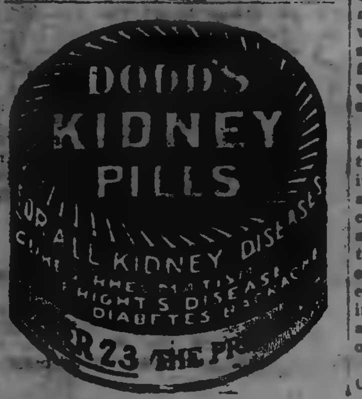
This vessel, which was no longer considered fit for effective service, is thought to be good enough for a leading place in the navy being organized for the protection of Canada.

ACTION NEEDED

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told a deputation which waited upon him to urge the immediate construction of the Georgian Bay canal that there should be no rivalry between that project and that for deepening the Welland canal, and that both would be undertaken when the finances allowed.

Either of these would be a large and expensive undertaking, and without saying anything in opposition to either the Government should be urged to complete the Trent Canal at once. This district, between the Georgian Bay and the Bay of Quinte, has to pay its share of the other large Government works, such as the Welland Canal, the Intercolonial Railway, and the Pacific Railways, but has to wait long years for the completion of the comparatively inexpensive work that would be of such great benefit to it. It may be said that the other works referred to are intended to benefit the country as a whole. And the Trent Canal will be a national benefit as well as of great advantage to a section of country large enough and populous enough to compare with provinces.

Why is the beginning of construction on the northern outlet delayed? While the canal is still a bottle corked at both ends, there is a prospect that an outlet will ere long be given to Lake Ontario, but the cork should be drawn at the other end. The western wheat cannot be conveyed down this waterway until it is constructed from Lake Simcoe to the Georgian Bay, and until that part of the canal is in operation the mills in Peterborough or at other points along its route cannot make use of it to bring the western wheat that they need. Neither can it be used to the full advantage for shipping to the west from this city and the towns and villages on these waters until the outlet is provided to the north. The Government should not be permitted to delay this matter, for it is of too great importance to be put off from year to year.



AN EXCELLENT WORK

That the Children's Aid Society has done and is doing a good work in Peterborough the people of this city and county know, and it is pleasing to learn, in the information given by Mr. Gunton to the Review, that there are sixty-five societies in the province engaged in this excellent work. That six thousand children were so far neglected or abused as to make it necessary for the societies to take charge of them is an unpleasant fact, but it is gratifying that an organization exists that is capable of rescuing the little ones from the results of neglect and from drifting into lives of crime. Mr. Kelso told a western audience recently that no child was really bad, and the experience of the past sixteen years, in which of the six thousand taken in charge, less than one per cent. turned out bad, goes far to substantiate his statement. The children, rescued in time, become law-abiding citizens, but left to themselves in vicious surroundings, they become not only a burden but a danger to society.

Mr. Gunton was right in his estimate that child rescue, as carried on by the system the societies have adopted is a very cheap way of dealing with a problem, compared with allowing them to grow up under conditions that would in very many cases almost inevitably result in the children becoming criminals. The financial aspect is one view of the matter, and it counts emphatically on the side of rescue. But that after all is the least important phase of the question. It is the child that appeals to the community—its present interests and its future. The child with parents who are drunken, lazy or vicious, and who is consequently neglected or exposed to vicious surroundings, is helpless, and must grow up in ignorance of what it should know, and knowledge of that of which it should be ignorant, unless a helping hand is held out. The innocence and helplessness of the children, and the future that looms black before them, even if they cannot realize it, are what appeal to the hearts of the people and lead so many to become active in the work of the Children's Aid Societies, and so many more to cheerfully support the work.

Mr. Gunton's recommendation of the officers and work of the Peterborough society was well deserved. That his opinion is shared by the people of the city was shown unmistakably when the recent appeal was made to them, and will be again when the time arrives to give the people generally another opportunity to have a part in the work which the society is carrying on.

EDITORIAL NOTES

China will have a constitutional government next year. Turkey and Russia have parliaments. The world does move.

A St. Louis man is reported to have caused a sensation by the invention of a noiseless soup spoon. But was it the spoon that caused the noise?

It is a Liberal theory that protection is a disadvantage to manufacturers who desire to make for export. But, as pointed out by the Hamilton Spectator, Senator Jones says one reason why his agricultural implement company purchased the factory in Batavia, N.Y., is because the works there are peculiarly well adapted for foreign trade, and the United States has higher protection than Canada.

NO ALLIANCE SAYS MR. BORDEN

Between the Nationalists and Conservatives—A Vigorous Reply.

Ottawa papers of recent date make comment as follows:—"Liberal politicians and the Liberal press are making desperate efforts to assert that an alliance exists between the Conservatives and the Nationalists. It accordingly is worth while to set down exactly what Mr. R. L. Borden said on the subject in his great speech of November 24:—

"I have had the good or bad fortune, according to the point of view that may present itself to any one, to be denounced beyond measure by Nationalist speakers on every platform where they have spoken in the Province of Quebec. I do not complain of that; I have taken my stand on that question, and as a public man I am open to criticism and open to denunciation at the instance of any man who does not happen to agree with me. I share the honor of being so denounced with about 80 Conservative members of Parliament and also with a number of gentlemen on the other side of the House.

"It has also pleased Liberal speakers and the Liberal press of this country to declare that the Conservative party is in alliance with the Nationalists, and if you work that out to its logical conclusion then there cannot be any difference of opinion whatever on this naval question of Canada, because we are in alliance with the Government party on it, and we are also in alliance with the Nationalist party, and there is absolutely no difference of opinion.

"We are not in alliance with the Government in this question. Our policy differs from theirs, but if any proposals which the government bring down to Parliament are in accordance with the policy which we have announced for which we stand this year at least, then we will support those proposals.

"We are not in alliance with the Nationalists, and we have been denounced by them even more strongly than we have been denounced by the hon. gentlemen on the other side of the House.

"We will retract no part of our policy because Nationalist or Liberal agrees or disagrees with it.

"We will stand by it as we laid it down last year and we will not be swerved from it by any statement, whether of Nationalist or Liberal, that we are in alliance with some other party in Canada."

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE SEA.

Origin of Most of Them Is Wrapped In Deep Mystery.

While most sailormen will stoutly deny that they hold superstitions and that the occult has no stronger hold on them than on land men, the popular belief is to the contrary. It is likely that the seaman's isolation from outside influences and the weeks and months spent afloat with only his mates for company served to foster superstitious notions in the days of sailing vessels, while the general spread of knowledge works but slowly in these occult matters, concerning which Jack is peculiarly unreasoning.

"The Finn is the most superstitious of all sailors," according to a writer in The London Globe. "There are many of this race who still believe in the ominous portent of the phantom ship, the folly of starting a voyage on a Friday (a notion by no means confined to seafaring men), the low burning blue lights which are ghost spirits hovering near to give warning of approaching disaster, and many other things, all of which,

"Fill the sailor's mind with murmurings,
And speak to him of wrecks.

"A story is told of a brigantine which numbered several extremely superstitious men among her crew. One night when there was no moon and a slight ground swell was running, the watch, who happened to be the most superstitious of them all, heard an unearthly wailing coming apparently from the very surface of the sea. The mate and the helmsman also heard it, but the former lacked imagination and although he was certainly interested, he nearly blew the watch's head off when he ventured to suggest mermaids. The helmsman did not feel quite happy, but he had to stick to the wheel. The watch was pale with terror, but he kept silence owing to the mate's complimentary references to his courage and abilities. Slowly the sound began to move along the ship's side, becoming more and more agonized as it approached. This annoyed the mate, and going to the side of the vessel he waited until he had located the sound and then emptied a bucket of water over the rail. There was a gasp, and then dead silence, and nothing more was heard that night.

"When the watch went off duty he, of course, gave a detailed and lurid account of the incident to his shipmates, who listened, as he thought in awed silence, and then called on one of the audience for his version of the matter. This man, a Tynesider, who dearly loved a joke and had no respect at all for hoary superstitions, had conspired with his fellows to play a trick on the watch. On the night in question he had crept over the bows without a sound, carrying with him the ship's cat, secured in a bag. Crouching under the stays, the joker let the cat's head out of the bag, which he tied round the animal's neck so that it could not escape. He then applied his teeth to the unfortunate animal's tail! Everybody knows the fearsome sounds an angry cat is capable of producing, and those to which a cat whose tail is being bitten gives vent are among the most hair-raising. The sound was more or less regulated by squeezing the luckless beast's body. The mate's bucket of water was an unwelcome as unexpected, and caused the Tynesider to beat a hurried retreat.

"Not only is the origin of many sea superstitions 'wrapt in mystery,' but also any logical explanation of cause and effect. It would puzzle any one to say why it should be unlucky for the ship's boy to whistle on the weather bow, except that it is generally unpleasant from a music lover's point of view for a boy to whistle on any bow at all. Nor would it be easy to explain why a sneeze to starboard presages disaster, and why should the squeaking of a pig at night be considered an evil omen? At the mere sight of an overturned hatch many a seaman will declare that another ship has just gone to the bottom, and he will say the same should the salt box or the cracker barge' (anglice) biscuit box be upset."

New York State's estimated receipts are $37,000,000, and department appropriations asked for are $50,000,000.

BEAUTY VERSUS ADORNMENT

A Plea For the Plain but Smartly Dressed Woman.

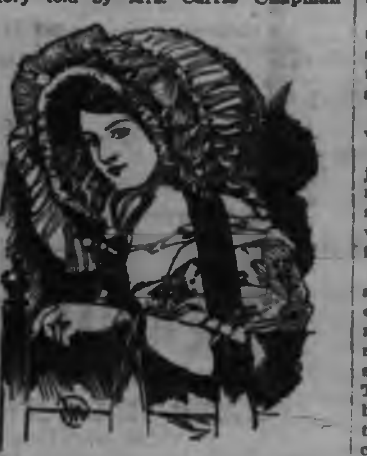
MRS. CATT'S LATEST BONMOT.

The Need For a Special Maid on the Sleeping Car to Dress the Little Girls Who Have No Mammas Along to Look After Them.

Dear Elsa—I went last evening to a most amusing play, "The Commuters," that was put on at one of the big Broadway theaters for a tide over attraction—that is, a show to stimulate the appetite of roof garden audiences before the opening attractions of the regular season. But the show has proved such a success that it is still running and drawing immense houses.

One of the amusing scenes opens with an advanced woman's talk at the suburban woman's club. When the very intense lecturer, gowned in a stunning French creation, finishes her little talk, which, by the way, has bored her hearers to tears, she announces that she is ready to answer any question anybody would like to ask her. Her disgust is tragic when sweet little Mrs. Newlywed inquires the name of her dressmaker.

And this reminds me of a funny story told by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt recently. It seems a man was addressing a woman's club on the subject, "Woman's Sphere Is the Home." After a lot of the usual talkee-talkee he drew himself up pompously and said, "All that I am I owe to my wife." "Yes," replied a wag at the back of the audience, "that's right, exactly as all the men blame everything on a woman."



EVENING HOOD.

Now I'm going to discuss the beauty question. No; I'm not going to tell you the right way to treat your eyebrows or instruct you as to the ways of the latest hairdressing—the hobble effect, it's beauty versus clothes—that's my screed today.

To begin, I don't see why people should wax conceited on the strength of an aquiline nose or a well shaped mouth or dreamy eyes surrounded with lashes half an inch long and black as night, do you? Because the beautiful person when you come to think of it merely sees herself in a glass darkly, never face to face, as we see her. She catches a glimpse of herself in a shop window, and a shop window is far more conducive to giving one fits over the hang of one's skirt than any true and lasting assurance as to the beauty of one's face.

Then take a looking glass.

If I were as ugly as a looking glass makes me out I'd give up the ghost at once; but, as you know, I'm optimistic, and men have said—well, they have said things that are rather nice about it. But, then, some one said, "All men are liars."

That's just it—one never knows.

Now, a woman has, to my mind, no earthly reason to be "cocky" over her beauty either of face or form.

The only subject on which she has a right to be so pleased with herself that she annoys people is her clothes, more especially if she pays for them out of the money she earns herself. To do this she must have good taste and must understand herself perfectly, so she can express herself in her clothes. She must be firm and unshaken in her belief in herself, so that she can override the autocratic dressmaker's opinions, as these same personages bully their weak patrons into wearing clothes that don't suit them.

She must have the courage of her opinions to be a week before the fashions, which some people think is even worse than being a week behind; but, you know, my dear, these are the people who are generally not in the "know."

She must learn a new way of sitting and walking every year—this season of grace we do the chanticleer hop—she must never be ungraceful and always, the most difficult of all, absolutely unconscious of the good looking clothes she wears.

These are all things I think one might be proud of, for they show character, perseverance and self forgetfulness. And after these qualities are added up to the good of the plain woman the proud beauty, who's never done a hand's turn for herself, would better take a back seat.

Pretty women often, too, trade on their faces. They think if "Providence has given us so much, why should we try to improve on it?"

If they cultivate no intellect they have nothing to say for themselves, and after a man, captivated by their pretty faces, has escorted one of them to the altar he spends the rest of his life scouring the country for really plain women and basking in the warmth of their wit and geniality and the good taste (which has served them so well in the choice of their clothes) that one forgets that they are plain and makes them almost beautiful.

Am I not the apostle of the plain woman properly dressed?

Coming back from a long railroad journey recently, I was struck with the necessity of a special maid on the sleeping cars to dress the little girls who have no mammas to look after them.

On the sleeper with me were a man and his small daughter. When night came the little miss got to bed all right, but the trouble began in the morning when father undertook to assist with the mysteries of her toilet. The hair combing process was almost his Waterloo. It took a long time for the operation, and every woman in the car was interested in the "nice man." Now, when papa takes his boy with him things are not so bad. The masculine garments are not so much of a riddle to him, and then there is no arranging of the coiffure to wrestle with, so all goes well. But the poor little girl whom papa dresses is not happy in her appearance. She knows she is not exactly buttoned, and she is painfully conscious that her hair ribbons are not tied as they should be; hence the need of a special maid for small girls on the train.

Make yourself a party hood like the illustration I'm sending you. Any material, silk, satin, bits of lace, tiny flowers and chiffons, can go into its makeup and you'll have a lovely hood.

Yours devotedly, MABEL.

An Aeroplane Luncheon.

To be strictly up to date one should give an aeroplane luncheon. Send out the invitations on white cards with a flying machine or simply birds with outspread wings painted in one corner.

For the luncheon table arrange a centerpiece of yellow chrysanthemums and over it suspend an airship made of white crape paper filled with cotton batting and shaped like a cigar. Fasten fine strings along the under side, allowing them to hang down about eighteen inches, then draw them together at the ends and tie them to a small basket in which stands a tiny doll dressed in leather. Make the propeller of three pieces of cardboard, gild and place it at one end of the airship. Fasten to the small aeronaut's basket as many white ribbons as there are guests. To these ribbons are attached favors of papier mache flying machines, birds and little toy balloons. At each place, says the Woman's Home Companion, should be small crash bags filled with candy and marked "Ballast."

The following menu would be appropriate:

Halves of Grapefruit.
Flying Fish.
(Smelts and Finger Rolls.)
Chicken's Wings a la Curtiss.
(Serve Stuffed Potatoes With the Fried Chicken and Stick Small Planes Made of Toothpicks and Tissue Paper in Either Side of the Potatoes.)
Salad a la Santos-Dumont.
Sweet Pepper Shells Filled With Chiffonade Salad.
Aerated Bread and Butter Sandwiches.
Hamilton Ice Cream With Lady Fingers and Eclairs.

Funchal, Madeira, Dec. 16.—Troops fired into a crowd of rioters at Santa Cruz yesterday. The casualties were not made known. Twenty persons were arrested. The disorders originated in resistance of the uneducated classes to the strict measures taken by the authorities to check the cholera epidemic. The disease is still claiming many victims.

Roof Caved In.

Eastman, Que., Dec. 16.—The roof of the large skating rink here caved in from the weight of snow yesterday morning. The building was empty.

STAGE BUSINESS

A Trying First Appearance and an Unrehearsed Funny Act.

Mr. Lyn Harding, a popular English actor, made a most trying first appearance on the stage. He played the part of a servant, and all he had to say was "The duke has arrived," and take off the stage a plate of dessert which was on the table.

But when he got down to the theatre in the evening he found that the livery he had to wear was made for a man considerably smaller than himself. Still, as there was no other costume, he had to put it on. When he went on the stage the serviette he carried on his arm fell to the floor, and as he did not like to leave it there he stooped to pick it up.

Unfortunately his breeches were so tight that it was impossible for him to stoop low, and ominous cracks reminded him that the seams of his garments were not too firm and persistence in his efforts might be disastrous.

It was a case for strategy, and so he stooped a little first one way and then the other in the vain attempt to accomplish his object without damage to his clothing. With each ineffectual effort the audience roared with laughter. Standing in the wings was the low comedian ready to come on, who naturally saw his efforts being discounted by this unrehearsed effect (which was having so great a success. "Leave the stage and come off," he whispered. This, however, was the one thing the novice felt he could not do. He persisted in his attempts to take up the serviette, to the increasing delight of the public.

At last a happy idea struck him! He got one foot under the serviette, kicked it up into the air and neatly caught it as it fell, a feat which drew enthusiastic applause, redoubled as the actor left the stage. As he reached the comedian he was received with a volley of abuse. The novice's cup of bitterness was full. Presently the manager, however, arrived in ecstasy. "That's one of the funniest things I've ever seen in my life!" he cried. "Please do that business the rest of the week! It's great!"

Twelve Men Entombed.

Denver, Colo., Dec. 16.—Twelve men are reported entombed in shaft No. 2 of the Leyden Coal Co., at Leyden, Colo., fourteen miles west of Denver. It is feared all are dead.

The fire started about nine o'clock Wednesday night, the result of an explosion and the timbering of the shaft was ablaze in a moment, cutting off escape in that way.

Shaft No. 1 is separated from shaft No. 2 by a narrow wall. A rescue party, under the direction of Samuel Perry, president of the Leyden Coal Co., was endeavoring early yesterday to break down the wall, and the twelve imprisoned men could be heard working madly in their efforts to gain freedom. There is no hope of stopping the fire at present, and every effort is being made to gain an entrance to the entombed men through shaft No. 1.

As a south bound Northwestern passenger train pulled into Escanaba, Mich., Charles Moore, the engineer fell dead at the throttle. Heart disease was the cause.

"O.K." IS THE LABEL FOR THE BELMONT MINSTREL SHOW

Clever and Well Trained Local Boys Under Direction of Mr. Holly Shepard Provided a Big Evening of Laughter and Melody---A Most Entertaining First Part and an Olio Replete With Original and Cleverly Performed Features -- Will be Repeated To-night.

Congratulations, Belmonts, your show was immense.

With every moment bringing something new of surprisingly high quality, with a first part that was dressed with an eye to both the attractive and artistic, with an olio that afforded real vaudeville with talent that had ability supplemented by confidence and willingness, with a director who can direct, and with an orchestra that knew the music like a book, what else could the Belmont minstrel show be but what it was—a big, unqualified success.

On the occasion of its presentation for the first of its two night season a large and thoroughly pleased and mildly surprised audience saw the Belmont minstrels live up to the most optimistic predictions. Mr. Shepard was certainly fortunate to have such bright and talented amateurs at his disposal, and the bright and talented amateurs were certainly fortunate to have Mr. Shepard at their disposal. Both were essential to the success of the performance, and to both is due the congratulations of the public for the clean, snappy and entertaining show provided.

When the curtain went up on the first part the neat and professional appearance of the boys won the spontaneous applause of the large audience. The chorus were dressed in tasteful suits of blue and of white, and the end men—those end men—immediately coralled the people's affections and aroused their hopes.

There were six of them (Reg Turner, Geo Wesley, Geo. Clarke, Walter Davidson, Roy Fuller and Holly Shepard) bedecked in green raiment of blouses and knickers.

When they pranced in from the wings and made their bows, a short time after the opening, they were received with a burst of applause that shook the plaster. That plaster must have been pretty weak at the end of the show, for the applause kept up throughout the first part in appreciation of both the efforts of the soloists and burnt cork sextette, and was continued with encore-winning approval right up to the rousing ensemble and finale that brought the performance to a close at the end of the excellent program of vaudeville features.

The first solo to follow the spirited opening was "Will You Be Out To-night," given in splendid voice by Mr. Paul Trebilcock, and like every other contribution of the evening, was vigorously encored.

Geo Wesley followed with "Espanola Prance," and got a hearty reception, as did also George Buchanan, who sang "Baboon Bungalow." Roy Fuller couldn't have been any more realistic in Chinatown rag if he had dieted on chop suey and rice since the first rehearsal. Mr. Nat Greenhalgh's pleasing tenor was heard to fine advantage in "Honey, I Will Long for You."

"Things Are Coming My Way," by Reg Turner proved that many a true word is spoken in jest. After a clever and lively rendition of the song some friend, probably prompted by the saying that two heads are better than one, slid a cabbage bouquet down to Reg by special wire—string from the balcony to proscenium opening. "Coming My Way" was accorded a double recall.

Stan Ecclestone sang "Think of the Girl Down Home" in splendid voice, and with good expression.

"I Didn't Ask, So I Don't Know" was what Walter Davidson captured the crowd with. A bouquet for him too. The encores weren't counted, but the singer was called upon so often that he did the last chorus in pantomime. A clever verse in parody of the recent Thomas shoe factory frost at Lindsay runs as follows—

A man named Thomas to Lindsay went,
The town was fast asleep,
The way he woke the people up,
Would make the angels weep.
The council gave a block of land,
And also office room,
The banker certified his cheques—
The town began to boom.
He built a factory of hot air,
To manufacture shoes.
The papers published extra sheets,
To spread abroad the news,
But boots and shoes he'll never make
For Thomas now has fled.
When I asked a policeman where he went,
Just listen what he said

Chorus—
I didn't ask, he didn't say; so I don't know
The place I wish that man had gone
Is no place for me to go
I'd rather be just where I am,
Though this town is awful slow,
I didn't ask, he didn't say; so I don't know.

"Close Dat Eye," is a pretty darkey lullaby, and Miss Geraldine King gave it to the best advantage, with the chorus realistically humming a banjo accompaniment. On her response to an encore Miss King was presented with a handsome bouquet.

George Clark made them sit up with "That Loving Rag." He handled the number in gilt-edged fashion. His coon dialect was perfect, and he made a fine impression.

Miss Josephine Sproule made a hit with "Baby Doll," singing the number in a most taking way. Two well deserved encores and a bunch of posies were her reward.

"Any Rags" served to show the audience that Mr Shepard was not only a director, but a finished performer. He was as light on his feet as a feather, and executed a neat step as a chaser. First the end men and then the chorus took up the refrain, and with the burnt cork contingent posing, and the chorus on its feet also the curtain fell amid thunderous applause, which was so prolonged that the song and finale had to be repeated.

Mr. W. McIlroy made a highly acceptable interlocutor in respect to both voice and appearance.

AN OLIO OF QUALITY

The olio was a straight surprise. That's the only way to put it.

If the people looked for something that would produce that desire to yawn about the middle of the bill they were agreeably disappointed. Not one of the turns lagged. On the contrary they were all clever and original, and were gracefully and smoothly presented by bright and well trained amateurs.

The Belmont Mandolin Club, under the direction of Mr. Louis Mendel, opened the olio with a nicely played medley. The club is composed of Messrs. Mendel, Brighaman, Cook and Zepp.

Walter Davidson loomed up big in the next number on the list which proved a very easily followed, lucid and simple exposition of that increasingly popular pastime of aeroplaning. Just imagine the opposite of that and you have it. The short words couldn't be measured with a surveyor's chain, and the long ones will never finish. The "speech" was the height of originality, and was ludicrous to a degree. The local references in it took the audience by storm.

"A neat dancing creation," read the billing of the next offering, and it certainly was a smart and neat turn. Miss Geraldine King was the soloist of this act, and sang "Lazy Moon," the number being admirably adapted to her flexible soprano voice. The octette of dancing boys who assisted kept up a nice swinging movement throughout, and joined in the catchy chorus. Two encores were given. The dancers were H. Thomas, W. Briegel, W. Belleghem, L. Fitzgerald, E. Tovey, F. Jamieson, H. Jobbitt, F. Trebilcock.

In "A bunch of nonsense," George Clark and Holly Shepard afforded a feast of absurd and laughable repartee. Mr. Shepard was perfectly at home, of course, and showed up as if a spotlight were turned on him. What got the audience, however, was the remarkably expert manner in which Mr. Clark also fell in line. His actions were exceedingly droll and fitted to the characterization to a "T," and his expression was great. Don't overlook George Clarke. He is certainly some nigger.

Big Chief George Wesley and his bunch of cops swung their batons with true professional skill. They were certainly an inspiration to laughter, and Mr. Wesley was a second "Sergeant Brue" in his very funny burlesque of a proud bluecoat. For the third recall the force tiptoed across the stage individually in all sorts of mysterious glides, their leader bringing up the rear with a stride that was a cross between a hundred yard dash and a Cossack dancer. The cops were J. Simpson, G. Buchanan, D. Brown, K. Leech, N. Greenhalgh, H. Hall, W. Cochrane, S. Ecclestone.

The finale, for which the entire company was assembled, was led by Mr. W. McIlroy. He sang "Gee, it's Great to be a Soldier Man," and gave this gingery number in excellent voice and with just the right expression. The chorus took up the refrain, and stepped lively to the stirring melody.

Then the company sang "God Save the King" and the curtain was lowered to enthusiastic hand clapping.

Mrs. Shepard, who was at the piano conducted the orchestra in a very capable way, and the orchestral work was a big factor in the success of the show.

Presentation to Miss Jennie Buyers at the Novel-Ti Company

A pleasant event took place at the Novel Ti Co. one evening last week, when Miss Jennie Buyers, who has been a member of the staff for a number of years, was presented with a valuable silver bread plate and a beautiful silver cake basket. The Novel Ti Co. has always been noted for the superior and refined class of goods produced, and it is now to be congratulated on its training, as Miss Buyers has been forming a tie of nature, but the knot will be tied by a reverend gentleman of the city, and the gifts were accompanied by many good wishes for her future happiness. Miss Buyers thanked Mr. Attwood and her associates for the kindness shown her and for the beautiful presents.

VERDICT OF "NOT GUILTY" RETURNED

In Charge of Arson Against Joseph Wilson---Jury Deliberated for One Hour and Forty Minutes.

Following a verdict of "not guilty" by the jury at 8.20 last evening, Joseph Wilson, charged with arson, was discharged by His Honor Judge Huycke.

The jury deliberated for one hour and forty minutes.

His Honor, in discharging Wilson, remarked that he should consider himself very fortunate, that the jury had taken such a view of his case. He might have been in trouble with other juries, considering the evidence. "I want this to be a lesson to you," said His Honor. "For the sake of your wife and your children, and for your own good, lead a better life."

AFTERNOON EVIDENCE.

Joseph Wilson, the accused, told of his having had several drinks after leaving his work at six o'clock. He had not told Mrs. McFadden he owned the pig. The words used by him were that he would like to own it.

He could not remember having gone into the house at McFadden's. He remembered going over the hill and to his home, where he remained for the night.

NOTHING TO DO WITH FIRE.

Witness said it was three miles thing to do with the burning of the barn.

"How many times have you been intoxicated since the fire?" asked Mr. Wood.

"Twice as far as I can remember."

"And before the fire?"

"I couldn't say. I didn't have anything last winter."

"You were drunk this time?"

"Yes."

"Was it bad whiskey?"

"Not good."

"You had four drinks from the bottle?"

"Yes."

"You don't remember being in the house?"

"No."

"You don't remember Mrs. McFadden striking you?"

"No."

"Not at all?"

"Well, once on the road."

"Did you tell anybody you were 'going to burn the barn,' or 'make it hot for them?'"

"Not that I remember."

Witness said it was three miles from his work to McFadden's, and he got there about seven o'clock.

"You didn't leave the house that night?"

"No, I did not."

In answer to Mr O'Connell, witness said he had not been in trouble before.

This concluded the evidence, Mr. D. O'Connell commencing his address to the jury. In his thorough review of the evidence the counsel for the accused submitted to the jury that the fire at the barn had been started by McFadden's sons, through a probable carelessness while smoking, and had taken advantage of the circumstances to place the blame on Wilson.

The County Crown Attorney, Mr. R. E. Wood, followed with his address, and next the jury were charged by His Honor Judge Huycke.

DROPPED DEAD LAST NIGHT WITHOUT SLIGHTEST WARNING

Well Known George Street Tobacconist Passed Away Suddenly—Appeared to be in His Usual Health—Was Curling in the Afternoon.

At his residence, 317 Boswell avenue, Mr. William E. Talbot, the well-known George street tobacconist, dropped dead about 10.30 last night, without a moment's warning.

The shocking news was not generally known until a late hour to-day, but as the sad tidings spread rapidly, expressions of general surprise and genuine regret were heard from all sides.

It appears that the deceased was at his store last evening until about ten o'clock, before leaving for his home. As far as is known, he was feeling in his usual health. He unlocked the door at his residence and had just entered the hall, when he fell over and passed away. His wife found him in that position on hearing the noise of his fall. The late Mr. Talbot had been about as usual all day and participated in a curling match, of which sport he was an ardent devotee, on the same afternoon. Heart failure was the cause of death.

The deceased was 47 years of age and very highly respected in the city. For the past fifteen years he had conducted a flourishing tobacco business at 382 George street.

He was a popular member of the Peterborough Curling Club and of the Bowling Association in which clubs he took an active interest. He was a member of the Anglican church.

Surviving him are his mother, his wife, one brother, Mr. A. L. Talbot, and one sister, Mrs. Flewel.

The funeral has been arranged to take place Saturday afternoon. The service at the house will be held at three o'clock before interment takes place at Little Lake cemetery. Rev. H. R. Trumpour will officiate at both services.

DANGERS BEFORE US IN MOULDING OF NATIONAL LIFE

"An Ounce of Prevention Worth a Pound of Cure" the Subject of Principal Falconer's Address to the Canadian Club

There was much about the address delivered to the Peterborough Canadian Club, last evening by Principal Falconer of Toronto University, which would make a Canadian with any pride in his country think, and think hard. Judging by the rapt attention, the speaker received from his auditors, each shot found its mark.

Principal Falconer had a unique subject, "An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure." It may be explained in other words, "Now is the time to mould the National Life of Canada," with the accent on the "now," and in acting in the present, set up a high standard, which will be inherited by the next generation, and also improved.

The speaker said something during every minute of the time he was on his feet, and the evening was such, that another visit from Principal Falconer will be awaited with warm interest by the members of the Canadian Club.

The dinner held, at the Hotel National, commenced shortly after eight o'clock, with the introduction of the speaker by the president, Dr. Cameron following one hour later.

After announcing his subject, Principal Falconer, remarked that in taking such a one, he might be might be able to give that turn, which perhaps is proper in speaking to Canadian Clubs. It had been said within the last two days by two distinguished Americans, that they had not seen elsewhere, such quality of men, as they had had the privilege of speaking to at Canadian Clubs.

At these clubs, our Canadian individuality is exercised. They are gatherings of men, interested in the welfare of our country with the view of listening to addresses so that National questions may be considered.

And there is no doubt but that we have a Canadian individuality and a great future. But there is a danger. We may think, that we will drift into this great future through the lapse of time. In the eyes of the world we have only recently become a nation, but as Canadians we knew that our nation is not a young one and that our individuality is not superficial. We know this because lies behind us, a history of The speaker dealt with the question of how we came by our individuality, showing how one stratum of people of the old land came here and joined another stratum, in Eastern Canada, thereby forming an individuality for Canadians made up of persistence, conviction and energy. But it was not alone from our origin, but also through the struggles which our fathers had, which made it possible for us to have what we now hold.

Following these struggles we had for the first time colonies claiming responsible government, full and free and resolved that they would not be wrenched away from the mother land.

And the people were educated. Go back in history and we find men of the best type. We can never be too thankful for the past, but we are are apt to rest upon that past and assume that we will be equally fortunate in the future.

What of to-day. We hear a great deal of the vastness and wealth of the country and so little of principles. Our resources are very important, but they are primarily business questions. They do not touch the depths of humanity. It may be that the business side of the national life has usurped a place of undue prominence. The things that made our fathers are in the foreground.

Now we are not going to enter a great future by the lapse of time. The national resources, no matter how great, are going to be depleted, and it is manhood that has always made nations. There is something immoral in the disheartedness of many people who are intent on gathering so much of these resources. The result will be that our children will have been given an inheritance, from which we will have been skimmed off all that is best. Conservation of resources is wanted, so that the people will be shown the necessity of thrift. This will have a business and moral effect that will count in our national life.

The amount of timber land in this country is not by any means as inexhaustable as we think. We are told in its being exhausted, an effect will be made on our waters and on our rainfall, and the lack of the latter will have an injurious effect on the agricultural interests. The law of morality demands that we shall not squander our share by mortgaging the future

The speaker took up the question of the soil, showing how by our carelessness, its future for production, is endangered. The action will be like that of disease, not only effecting one, but others. Here an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. We should practice economy, and thrift should be engrained in our children.

We are gifted people, and in a country where it is easy to earn a living. Here is a danger—that of becoming extravagant and wasteful. The danger faces us to-day. We must not plunge into these with the thought that time will repair mistakes.

USE THE MARGINS.

Success in life depends on the way the margins of life are used. Its the man who knows how to use the minutes another man wastes who is successful. That is ability—also a moral ability of the highest kind. We are at the beginning of a great national life, and should be prepared to think of the struggles coming. And we should learn the difference between rivalry and enmity. Rivalry is a moral struggle—its fair play. It breeds strength. Just as soon as you bring a dishonest element into play you change to enmity—the desire to get anything, anyway.

TOLERANCE.

Another element in our life is the necessity for toleration. Tolerance is the ability to allow another man a conviction different from our own, and yet respect him for that conviction. The virtue of tolerance could not be found in a people of low order. It is the mark of intelligence, and is to be found only with people with intelligence.

Lord Acton has said you can estimate the tolerance of a people by the treatment they give to minorites.

So let each endeavor to work out what God, who is the King of the nation, has given each to perform.

Mr. D. Walker moved a vote of thanks to Principal Falconer for his address, and this was seconded by Mr. F. D. Kerr.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

SAID FAREWELL

At St John's church choir practice last night a nice farewell was tendered to Mr. Vernon Knowles, late of the Review staff, who has resigned in order to take a position on the C.P.R. at Montreal. Speaking on behalf of the choir Mr. Devey expressed regret at Mr. Knowles' departure and wished him all prosperity in his new sphere and also extended their hearrty good wishes for the coming season.

Mr. Knowles replied in a few well-chosen words, saying that he would carry with him pleasant memories of the many sincere friends he had found during his short stay in Peterborough. Mr. Knowles left on the 11.26 this morning for Montreal, where he will assume his new duties on his arrival.

NEW YORK HOCKEY SITUATION

(New York World.)

There's going to be a great fight on the ice when the big amateur hockey teams open the season. The final struggle for the trophy will then be on, and every player now says that his team is sure to come out the winner. The Crescents and the New York A.C. teams both have "two legs" on the cup, and this year's winner will become the permanent possessor of the trophy.

Now that the Brooklynites have regained the services of Shirreff, they say the Winged Footers will not gather in the trophy. The way that Artie Liffiton is playing the centre of the ice in practice this fall and the splendid form shown by Dufresne, who is with them this year, are the main causes of joy in the Crescent's camp. Just how good the Crescents really are will be seen when they meet Yale in an exhibition game at St. Nicholas Rink to-night, and every follower of the game will be on hand to get a line on them. Yale, under Intercollegiate rules, will be allowed to use every man, and as they will undoubtedly work their whole squad the Crescents will have to play a working game in order to win.

Yale is the strongest hockey team in the Intercollegiate League. There is some doubt as to whether or not Arthur Howe will play on the Yale team this season. He is considered the best defensive player in the country, but as he has been chosen captain of Yale's football team for the coming year it has been rumored that he will not take to the ice this winter. Scully, one of the Yale football tackles this year, is a good defensive hockey player, and even should Capt. Howe fail to play to-night the Bulldog's team will be able to give the Crescents a mighty hard game.

While the Crescents and the New York A.C. teams are occupying the centre of the stage, the St. Nicholas team must not be overlooked. If both Breck Putnam and Tris Souther, the former Harvard player, decided to get into the game this year the St. Nicholas team will have a fair chance to win. Then there is Baker, who learned the game with the St. Paul School team. At forward he is a wonder, and he is sure to play with the St. Knicks this winter.

The New York A.C. considered the loss of Shirreff a hard blow at the time he returned to the Crescents, but they have discovered a player in Mallen, of Canada, who promises to hold down Shirreff's position without any trouble.

INERESTING SPORT GOSSIP FROM THE OLD COUNTRY; SOME NOTES OF INTEREST

London — American superiority in the field of sports has been demonstrated here in more than one line. This fact is admitted by Englishmen.

American athletes were very much to the fore at the Oxford freshmens meeting, and A. Zeigler of Iowa stands out. He put the sixteen-pound shot 40 feet 5 2-5 inches.

Stolz of aCliforoia could not win in the "quarter" owing to an injured ankle, but another American R. Lodge of Oklahoma, easily took the "100" in 10 3-5 seconds. The hammer-throwing of Zeigler was another feature, his winning effort of 130 feet 2 inches being exceptional at the freshmen's sports.

Horses bread in America have done splendidly this season, and Columbus, the winner of the Derby Gold Cup, has proved himself a useful three-year old. In 1909 he had half a dozen outings without scoring but he has now nearly 2500 sovs. to his credit for four successes since July.

Norman III, who as previously announced has been sold to go to the Continent, was purchased by Baron Johann Harkanyi to do duty as a stallion in Hungary at the Abony Stud. It is interesting to note that Norman III. is the first American-bred stallion since Starke to stand in that country.

Here I might add that Maher, the American jockey, is ahead of all other jockies riding here both in percentage of victories and his style of doing his work.

Maher has been overtaken by a bad cold and his opportunities have been somewhat restricted during the past six weeks, but the progress made is in favor of the American jockey. He has rubbed off a couple of the five points' advantage Jockey Wooton claimed seven days ago, and as they respectively stand at 130 and 128 it looks like being a near thing between them for first place in the winning list right up to the close of the season.

KING PATRONIZES TURF

King George will continue that patronage of the turf which from the earliest period English Kings have bestowed, and lovers of the sport will note with satisfaction the liberal entries of his horses, published. Four colts, all Sandringham-bred, are engaged in the Middle Park Plate, sons of Florizel II. and Loch Doon, of the same sire and Guinea Hen, of Lord Bobs and Mirabelle, and the Thrush and Laodamia; and the four have also been put into the Two Thousand Guineas and Prince of Wales Stakes at Ascot in 1912. These appear to be the four from whom most is hoped, but there is a daughter of Florizel II and Sweet Vernal, half sister therefore to Devil's Dyke who has not been neglected. She is in the New Stakes at Ascot next summer, and as a three-year-old in the neO Thousand Guineas. Looking further into the future, Sweet Vernal has a colt-foal by Desmond who has been nominated, together with the Guinea Hen colt, for the Prince of Wales Stakes for two-year-olds of Goodwood in 1912. A son of Thrush and Komm Carlinchen is in several races and so are sons of Flying Fox and April Princess and of Martagon and Mundon. A son of Volodyovski and Runaway Match is also.

WOOTON TO RIDE FOR DERBY.

It has already been made known that Lord Derby has first claim on Jockey F. Wooton's services now that that lad is out of his apprenticeship. I learn that Wooton has since agreed with H. Lytham that that gentleman shall have second claimHe does not purpose binding himself further, preferring to be a free lance after these two claims are satisfied.

Wooton, who is Maher's chief rival, has already won 110 races. His percentage is away below aher's. The latter is said to be thinking about retiring.

London "turfites" often express regret that Cyllene no longer finds a home in this country. This is natural, considering his stock won £35,000 last year, while the total this year already amounts to £36,714. Still, what is England's loss is the gain of the Argentine Republic, and, after all, if Cyllene is no longer, he has left a big family here, some of which will no doubt prove successful at the

It is not foten that we see a race declared void through the inability of the competing horses to get the course. This happened lately at Liverpool, however, when the four starters for the Beecher Steeplechase either fell or refused. Unfortunately the fall of Swift Hack led to the breaking of Lynn's leg.

COMING SCULLING CHAMPION.

It is believed that England possesses a coming champion sculler in W. Albany, who recently easily beat M. Arlett in their match from Putney to Mortlake. He is under the care of Tom Sullivan, who thinks so highly of his protege that he wants to match him against Bossy Phelps. Sullivan predicts that Albany has it in him to develop into a real champion, and says he will match the new-comer against E. Barry later on. It is a very long time since an English sculler held the world's championship, and it will certainly give professional sculling a much needed fillip if Albany turns out as well as Sullivan predicts.

A sporting sheet says: "By some peculiar providence, England is the matrix of almost all high-class stock, and you can no more maintain a breed of such elsewhere for any long time than you can make Stilton cheeses outside of Stilton area, or Cheshire cheeses outside Cheshire. It is not only thoroughbreds, but horses of all classes, that are drawn from this country to improve the breed in all parts of the world.

"Our French friends must at least understand that they would not describe their thoroughbred mares in their own stud book as "Poulinieres Anglaises" if they did not most thoroughly understand the origin of the blood horse in this country, and there, of course, they can treat the bulk of the American-bred stock as "taboo." There is no mare in the French book, except, of course, the Anglo-Arab—which can not be traced at all points to the English book, and many represent lines that might usefully be brought back to England, but all are at least one remove away from the matrix."

WHAT ARE THE PROSPECTS

For a Church Hockey League this Year

Now that the ice is in good shape and hockey gossip is the chief topic among the sporting element of the city, the question of a church hockey league is being mooted.

The Review was in conversation with several of the officers of the last year's Church teams and they each expressed themselves as willing to lend their efforts towards placing a team in the League should one be formed.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour was of the opinion that All Saints would be willing to enter a team. Rev. H. J. Keith stated that he would place the matter before the young men of his Church.

Mr. E. N. McWilliams, who, for some years was president of the League, would be willing to lend an evening if a meeting was called, to discuss the organization of one.

The only Church that is not very optimistic in their outlook is the St. Andrews, who, at present hold the Cup, won by them for the last two years. Very few of their former winning team are available this year.

THAT INDIAN WONDER

Gama, the Hindu wrestler, who was the sensation of England a couple of months ago when he threw the best men on the other side in short order may be expected in Montreal in about two months' time if he accepts and signs the contract which Manager George Kennedy, of the Canadian Athletic, mailed his manager, B. G. Benjamin, yesterday.

Gama is now at Lahore, India, whither he has gone to defend his national title of India. If he accepts the conditions and terms of Manager Kennedy's contract he will leave for Canada at once.

In all probability Gama will be the greatest sensation that ever walked on to a wrestling mat in America. During his sojourn in London he was rigorously avoided by the majority of the best grapplers overt here. Hackenschmidt avoided him and Zbysko also carefully avoided him after going through one match with the Hindu.

Dr. Benjamin F. Roller, showing considerable more backbone than the rest, met Gama in London and got a toss and a broken rib that stopped the match inside of two minutes.

Zbysko was thrown in the first match with the Hindu and beat it out of the country before the date fixed for the second one arrived.

In England Gama's cause was espoused by an English publication called oJhn Bull, run by the well-known Parliamentarian, Horace Bottomley.

All the pressure that "John Bull" could bring to bear to arouse public opinion to force the best of the grapplers to meet Gama, failed, however.

The will of George L. Fox divided $1,500,000 among Brooklyn charities servants and friends of the testator.

"PAT" MOORE

This eighteen-year-old Philadelphia boxer gave Abe Attell—the greatest little boxer in the business—a hard argument the other night. He floored foxy Abe in the seventh round, and had him guessing for a while. They say Moore never fights two rounds alike. He is apt to stand off and stab with his left, or tear in and mix at short range. He is fast on his feet, cool, a clever boxer, and he fights like a terrier from gong to gong. In appearance Moore is a pocket edition of Bob Fits. He is all arms and legs, his shoulders coming up high and protecting his jaw, after the fashion of the first Australian.

EPIDEMIC OF BROKEN ARMS IN PRIZE RING

Promising Scrappers Laid Out by Fractured Bones in Their Battering Weapons

How is one to account for the numerous injuries that fighters are suffering just now? There is a regular epidemic of broken arms and hands, and if the thing keeps up there will be but few fighters fit to fight left in the game.

Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion, seems to have set the pace in the matter. When he cracked one of the bones in his forearm in the bout with Tommy McFarland at the Fond du Lac a short time ago it wasn't long before Matty Baldwin, the Evanston fighter, followed suit, breaking his arm in a Boston bout, and that, too, in the very first round.

Then came Monte Dale, a tough fighter who hit Battling Nelson's hard head a glancing blow with his forearm and cracked a bone.

In the Wolgast fight Tommy McFarland broke a bone in his right hand, and in Attell's fight with Frankie White in Milwaukee he smashed one of his right knuckles. Eddie McGoorty, the middleweight boxer, has had a mashed hand for some time now, and the remainder of the list is quite extensive.

Tommy Gray's attack of appendicitis, from the effects of which he has just left the hospital, might be added to the general terror of the situation.

Baldwin's accident nipped a promising campaign in the bud. Matty never was boxing better, and he had planned to clean up all of the lightweights and then insist upon a meeting with Champion Wolgast. Now they are both laid up with fractured forearms.

A DIAMOND ROMANCE

When "She" Saw "Him" in Uniform It was Love at First Sight

A pretty romance of the baseball diamond has been made known at Sacramento by the announcement of the engagement of Miss Edith Wolfe, a niece of the late Senator Thomas G. Platt, of New York, and Benjamin Hunt, southpaw pitcher of the Boston American League team, who was formerly a member of the pitching staff of the Sacramento Coast team. Miss Wolfe, who is a former Vassar girl, and was for a time on the stage, first met Hunt while he was attending college in Oklahoma, but it was not until he was playing in a Sacramento uniform that the mutual admiration began. Miss Wolfe is an ardent admirer of the game, and reading an article by Hugh Fullerton on pitching, caused her to send a number of the magazines to pitchers whose work she esteemed on the diamond. Hunt was not satisfied until he learned the identity of the fanette and finally arranged to tell her inside facts about pitching which Fullerton had failed to mention. The lesson in pitching was coached by Dan Cupid.

Cobb's record against Young, the grand old man of baseball, was two hits in nine attempts, for an average of .222. He had the same mark against Walter Johnson, with the difference that he faced the Idaho phenom, eighteen times and made four bingles.

Chicago business concerns will give away over $1,250,000 in Christmas presents to employees.

THE WEST WANTS CUP

Vancouver Sporting Writer Does Not Think Edmonton Has Much Chance of Beating East.

(Vancouver Saturday Sunset).

Edmonton will make another attempt to lift the Stanley Cup this winter with another imported team. Edmonton is surely Stanley Cup mad, and that is about as close as they will ever get to the old mug until they build up a cup team and not depend upon the hockey market each season. All-star teams look good on paper, but give the writer the team of probably less individual brilliancy but who have conquered the habit of playing together every time.

It must make those Eastern teams hold their sides when they learn each year of the divers methods by which challenging teams attempt to separate them from the bread-winning Stanley Cup. For the ways are certainly many by which challenging teams hope to spring a surprise on the cup-holding players.

Edmonton has conceived an idea that importing players each year will eventually put that place and the Stanley Cup on intimate terms. About as much chance of eating pea soup with a toothpick. It is yet to be proved that a picked team of stars can do any better or as well as an average team which is accustomed to each player's work. Every day team work becomes a more important factor in deciding issues on the field of sport, and while an individual effort may redound with brilliancy for the team which looks for results, it is more to be deplored than commended.

Eastern teams have been successful in holding the Stanley Cup because they have developed a fine system of team play, while Western teams have more or less depended on individual brilliancy. For the same reason has Westminster been able to successfully hold the Minto Cup against the onslaughts of Eastern teams. Westminster plays systematic lacrosse throughout, and so superior has that system been to the systems displayed by challenging teams, that up to the present, they have experienced no difficulty in warding off challenging teams. When Westminster meets a team which employs a better system and exploits it to better advantage than the champions, then only will Westminster go into sackcloth and ashes.

The same holds good in the hockey situation. The East holds the cup because they have and play the "system."

THREE BILLY BURKES

Two of Them a Success, the Third a Rank Failure

There are three Billy Burkes known to the world of amusement. One is feminine. There are two males. One is an actress, one a horse ,an one's a prize fighter. The actress and the horse are successes, the pugilist a failure.

Billy Burke, the actress, is about the sweetest girl on the stage. Billy Burke, the horse, is just about the classiest 2:07 trotter in the game.

Nobody cares for Billy Burke, the pug. He came out of the West to win a name, was mauled by great and small in and around Philadelphia, and has now gone back to the West. He has given up the ring.

HOCKEY IN DETROIT

The Detroit Amateur Hockey League has become a reality. At an organization meeting eight clubs made up the circuit, and rules and regulations governing the league were drawn up.

A FOOTBALL HERO

Dear Mother—As I write you I am lying on a cot,
My form is full of torture; I would sooner die than not,
I'm just a scrub, dear mother, but I line up every day,
And try to be a hero till they send me to the hay.
My nose is somewhere in my skull, my teeth are on the field,
I have an ear, just one, that's here, and all my scalp is peeled.
Still, 'tis for Alma Mater that I've fought this awful duel;
Please send me fifty, mother, for the doctor's getting cruel.

Dear Ma—I have your letter. You enclose a measly ten;
How far will that much take me when I have to mix with men?
I'm playing with the football scrubs, I'm working like a slave,
Another week without more funds will see me in my grave.
I spent six bones for arnica, I owe four beans for glue;
Why stint your boy who's seeking joy? What is an X to you.
Please wire me fifty, won't you? I know you won't be sore;
I love my Alma Mater, but I love my mother more.

Mother—I can't believe it! Not another tiny cent?
This to the boy you said might some day be president!
You sent me here to college, and you told me when I came
That I should study long and hard, that I should make a name.
I lie upon a cot of pain, nursing my ruined nose.
My good right hand is shattered—I am writing with my toes.
I cannot stay in college now, my football days are done.
Wire me enough to get back home. I am your loving son.
—Wm. F. Kirk, in The

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

The Y.M.C.A. Bowling alleys were the scene of a very close and exciting game last night when the High Rollers and Lancashire Trio met for the first time. The first game went to the Trio without much serious opposition. But in the second game the High Rollers proved the right to their name and hung up a new team score for the tournament and won the second game handily. The third game was very close and was only decided on the last balls, the Lancashire Trio winning the last game by seven pins. This leaves the Trio and Nivvies tied for first place in the league.

In the intermediate basketball league the Burglars had no pity for the Shamrocks and robbed them of another game in spite of their protests. Score, Burglars 30; Shamrocks 0. Sawbones and Rowdies postponed their games.

THE NEWS FROM NORWOOD

Special to The Review.

Norwood, Dec. 12.—The annual High School concert and "At Home" was held in the town hall on Friday evening, Dec. 9th.

The High School staff and pupils were rewarded for their persistent efforts to prepare and render a programme of exceptional merit by a full house, and all fully appreciated the rendition of the several numbers on the programme. The choruses by about fifty voices, all pupils of the High School, were of high merit, and rendered in such a manner that showed that great care had been used in the preparation.

The comedy "All Charley's Fault," was a decided hit. Each character was well portrayed, and every part was acted with great credit to those taking part.

The programme was as follows—

Instrumental—Faye McCleary.
Chorus—"The Moon is Up."
Reading—"The Welsh Classic" Edna Cardwell.
Chorus—"Rowing."
Instrumental—Mary Pickford.
Reading—"Kentucky Belle," Edna Houson.
Instrumental—Jean Nicol.
Comedy—"All Charley's Fault."

Act. II.—Complications arise and Charley is obliged to confess.

Mr. John Weir has purchased from Mr. D. Sedgwick the King Property on Colborne street, consisting of the fine new livery barn and sheds and the ruins of the hotel. It is rumored that an up-to-date temperance house will be erected on the vacant lot and run by a competent person. Mr. Weir will have one of the best livery properties in this part of the country, and should command a liberal share of the patronage in that line.

There is small hopes of Norwood having a skating rink this winter. Mr. Fleming has left the village, and as yet no one has made a move to put the ground in shape for a rink, although there is some talk along that line. A good sheet of ice could be provided at small cost, and as Norwood people have always patronized the rink liberally any one taking hold of the enterprise should be able to realize good returns from the undertaking.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

EDISON'S VIEW OF RELIGION

Vancouver Province.

It was an off idea on the part of a New York reporter to interview Thos. A. Edison on the subject of religion. It indicates an adventurous spirit, alive to the public appetite, eager for something vivid and bizarre. He should now interview John D. Rockefeller on the subject of operatic music. He might try James J. Jeffries on the true function of the sonnet. Much of interest might be evolved by a conversation with Theodore Roosevelt on Valenciennes lace of the rare variety. It may be objected, however, that religion is a subject that concerns all men; that its claims and its conclusions concern every son of Adam, irrespective of their vocations, avocations, or conditions. That no doubt is true, and Mr. Edison shows his responsiveness to this universal demand, by his manly testimony to the nobility and grandeur of the Golden Rule, taught by Jesus of Nazareth. And if, as the interview in question stated, Edison had been attacked by Rev. Chas. F. Aked and other persons, for what they called his atheistic views, it was perhaps natural that he should retort by exposing the avariciousness of a minister of the gospel, who would not talk to an interviewer about Mr. Edison's religion unless he got a fee of $200. It was natural and human but it was not in consonance with a high philosophic ideal. Mr. Edison need not have been so snappish. A man to whom the whole arcana of science is open, or at any rate some of it, should be lifted above the region in which spiteful accusation works, lives and has its being. We should all have been happier in reading the interview in which Mr. Edison discarded the idea of immortality, if he had displayed the largeness of spirit and the magnanimity which a true acquaintance with science usually emanates.

But, really, Mr. Edison is not in anyway an authority on the subject of religion. His mind has been devoted to a comparatively narrow range of other subjects, to which he has devoted himself with a masterful insight and activity.

It is perhaps only natural that men absorbed in mechanisms should become insensible to mysteries that pursuers of the problems of electricity should forget that there is a world of thought and action outside of them into which they never enter and of which they have no cognisance. But so long as human nature is what it is there will always be a response now and then to the influence of the invisible world. There will always be those who say with the psalmist "My soul thirsteth for God—for the living God—when shall I come and appear before God?"

KICKED OUT THE POOR PRESS

Prince Rupert Chief of Police Uses his Official Boots on "Empire" Reporter and Banned Him From Police Court—Editor Asks Chief Some Questions.

(Prince Rupert Optimist.)

Following the publication of a story in last night's "Empire," which has been the means of frustrating the efforts of the police to lay by the heels a criminal who has threatened the life of Alderman Vernor W. Smith, Chief of Police McCarvel this morning created a sensation by ordering the "Empire" representative out of the court room. Some developments are likely to result.

ORDERED HIM OUT.

Magistrate Carss was holding court at the time in the tiny shack called police headquarters when the reporter of the "Empire" entered. Chief McCarvell immediately ordered him out. A little time after S. M. Newton, editor of the "Empire," entered, followed by the same reporter, Mr. McKay. The editor started to address the court when Chief McCarvel ordered him to take his hat off. He also told the reporter to step aside.

EDITOR TO THE RESCUE.

Editor Newton said he saw reporters there from other papers and wished to ask why the representative of the "Empire" was not permitted to be present.

Chief McCarvell said he objected to Mr. McKay because he had published something that had certainly hindered the police in their work and had interfered with the course of justice.

Editor Newton asked what about the interests of his paper, and Chief McCarvell retorted that he believed himself acting in the interests of the public, which, as a matter of official duty, had to be his first consideration. In reply to a question of Mr. Newton, the chief replied that he had no objections to any other representative of the "Empire" being present, but he certainly did object to Mr. McKay.

MAGISTRATE APPEALED TO.

Mr. Newton applied to the magistrate declaring that the chief had no voice in the matter. Magistrate Carss said he desired to act fairly by all parties in the matter and would therefore like to look further into it instead of making any declaration right away. With this Mr. Newton left and in a short time another representative of the Empire arrived, whose presence was not questioned.

STATEMENT BY THE CHIFE.

After court adjourned Chief McCarvell made the following statement:—

"In serious cases such as an attempt at blackmail, it is very important that all matters connected with it should be kept profoundly secret as, if any knowledge of it slipped out it might be taken advantage of by the guilty parties and enable them to escape.

"In this case an anonymous letter was sent to Vernor W. Smith, telling him to put $500 under a designated stone near the fire hall if he valued his life. Mr. Smith got that letter on the afternoon of Tuesday. He showed it to me about five o'clock that same afternoon, and I advised him to make a decoy letter; that certain money should be put in a large envelope and placed under the the rock as the letter instructed. At six o'clock Mr. Smith walked direct from his office and placed the letter. Meantime I had an officer secreted in such a position that he could watch the spot.

"Just as we expected no person came that night nor the second night, but this McKay of the "Empire" made a hard scramble to find out what the letter was about, and, having succeeded, published what he learned in the "Empire." Thereby he prevented the police from getting the person or persons who has sent the letter to Mr Smith demanding the money at the risk of his life."

LITTLE DORRIT 98 YEARS OLD

A London despatch says: — Mrs. Mary Ann Cooper, an aged woman who says she is the original of the character of "Little Dorrit" in Charles Dicken's Novel, is still living in the village of Old Southgate, a few miles out of London, and recently celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday. Unfortunately, a cold and the inclement weather confined her to her bed, but she was well enough to receive and appreciate birthday congratulations.

Despite her advanced age, Mrs. Cooper takes a keen interest in what goes on around her. Though her memory naturally fails her at times, she has preserved some clear recollections of her early associations with Dickens.

Her first memories of the novelist go back to the time when he must have been about 5 years old. Mary Ann Milton—as she was then — a child of 4, left her home at Sunbury and was taken to live in a small street in Somers Town. She says that the Dickens family, after Chas. Dickens' father had been released from the Marshalsea, came to live in the house opposite.

STUDIED WITH SISTERS

Two of Dickens' sisters, Mary and Harriet, were sent to the same school as Mary Ann Milton, and thus a friendship sprang up between the two families. From the first Mary and the boy who was to become famous took a liking for each other and were thrown much together.

When the children grew up Dickens and Mary Milton's brother, Tom, started life in a lawyer's office. But even in those early days Dickens' inclination were turned elsewhere, and Mrs. Cooper to-day has a clear recollection of Dickens' saying to her brother: "I can't stand this law work, Tom."

Unlike Dickens, Mrs. Cooper's brother stuck to the law, and in later years acted as the novelist's solicitor.

The name of "Little Dorrit" was given to his little playfellow by Dickens in protest, as her real name was not to his liking. At first he used to call her "little girl," but one day he announced, "I shall call you 'Little Dorrit,' as I don't like the name of Mary Ann." And to him, even after she was married, Mrs. Cooper was always "Little Dorrit."

FOND OF NICKNAMES

To judge from Mrs. Cooper's memories Dickens must have had a passion for giving nicknames to his particular friends. "Little Dorrit's" brother, he christened, for some unknown reason, "Dan Tobin," and his own brothers he called "Fis" and "Boz."

When Dickens was hardly more than a boy the friendship was interrupted. "Little Dorrit" had to go back to her home at Sunbury, but Charles and her brother remained close friends, and the two paid her frequent visits. Then came the time when Dickens first began to write, and on his visits he would often read his manuscripts to "Little Dorrit" and her brother.

"I often used to wish those manuscripts in Jericho," Mrs. Cooper admitted recently.

But she is proud to-day of her early association with Dickens, and strongly resents one or two attempts which have been made to usurp her claim to be the original heroine of one of his best known books.

ARE YOU BUYING HEAT OR COAL

Mr. W. S. Gould, of New York, a leading authority on the subject, in conversation with the writer, cited the instance of one large plant which decided to secure a laboratory test of its fuel and discovered that it ran as high as forty-one per cent. of incombustibles. Complaint was made to the mine operator, and the result was seen in the next shipment tested, the proportion of ash being reduced to fifteen per cent., at which point it has been kept by frequent tests ever since. As the plant in question consumes about 70,000 tons a year such a saving of twenty-six per cent. in fuel value has been equal to a total of 18,200 tons, which at $2.50 a ton would amount to $45,000!

A saving of $45,000 in a single year in a single commodity is hardly negligible in any plant. The delinquency in this case was an exceptional one, but it is claimed that any consumer should be able to save at least at ten per cent. on the commercial run of coal when purchased upon the heat basis.

The need for such remedy is partly chargeable to that carelessness on the part of the operator and dealer which the unsuspecting credulity of the purchaser is apt to encourage and partly to a deliberate purpose to take an extra profit. Coal men not uncommonly work in from ten per cent. to twenty per cent. of slate and one of them naively entered the claim that fourteen per cent. was allowable. Had his customer paid fourteen per cent. of the coal bill with counterfeit money his view of privilege might have changed, for slate is not an inherent part of coal ash, and may be mechanically separated at the mine. Moreover, it clogs the combustion and causes clinkers, which often contain large lumps of unconsumed carbon at their centers. Occasionally there are submitted great gray clinkers resembling pig iron, which, upon being broken open, prove to be little more than unburned coal covered with a hard glaze from improper combustion. Such trickery, therefore, results in a much greater loss of heat to the consumer than merely the proportion of adulterant, to say nothing of the harmful effect upon the furnace, and the added labor of stoking and ash handling. With scientific scrutiny of the fuel purchases it is probable that the coal trade would be inspired with the conception of honesty as the best policy quite as strikingly as have the food packers since recent legislation upon the subject.—From "Cutting Down the Coal Bill," in January Technical World Magazine.

MEANING OF WORD CHRISTMAS.

The modern habit of writing the word "Christmas" with an X is something which good form alone should forbid. The Greek letter for chi, found in the word of Christ, has the form of our X, and from this the abbreviation of the world has followed. A writer in the Capital News, of Boise, Idaho reminds us that X stands for the unknown quantity in mathematical problems. Do those who use it, then, intimate thus their ignorance of the Christ? Certainly it would not seem as if any who have a deep sense of the sacredness of this word, "Christmas," would write it in a hasty abbreviation. Further, X is the sign used by illiterate people to show that they cannot write their own names. Is this Xmas, then, a sign that the present generation has not yet learned to write or read its title clear?

X is furthermore a voiceless letter; that is, it has to borrow the sound of other letters to make itself heard. It is the ostracized letter of the alphabet and always is discarded when its use is not indispensable.

If X is regarded as a sign of the cross, that great symbol of Christian history, it is incorrect in form. In any case, to connect the thought of the cross with the Christmas blessedness is no longer the need for those who have witnessed the resurrection. Let this symbol of ignorance, indifference and suffering, then, no longer appear as a disguise of the beautiful word, "Christmas."

The writer in the News concludes: Let this meaningless, ugly sign "X" once be banished forever. Let the reporter scorn to use it. Let the city editor frown upon and stab it with his blue pencil. Let the advertisement writer cease to make it a blot and blur upon his otherwise beautiful lettering. Let the teacher, with his fine sense of the formal fitness of things, condemn it. Let the student be taught never to use it. Let the people in their private correspondence disdain to disfigure their letters with its presence. Let every one demand the removal of this barnacle from the English language. And whenever we have occasion in writing or printing to refer to the initial event of the centuries, let us use that sweet, sacred and beautiful word, "Christmas."

TO FIGHT THE APACHE PLAGUE

A Grave Task Which Confronts Paris Authorities—Audacious Thug

(London Leader.)

One of the gravest tasks which confronts the Paris authorities is the repression of the "Apache."

In the course of the debate in the Chamber some two years ago on the abolition of the death penalty, M. Briand, then Minister of Justice, declared that in his opinion one of the chief causes of the increase of criminality was the abuse of the privilege of carrying weapons and the facility with which arms can be procured. One of the first measures to be taken, therefore, if the Apache is to be got rid of, is to make it impossible, or at all events, extremely difficult, to procure the weapons which render him so dangerous an enemy to society.

The law places certain obstacles in the way of carrying arms, such as placing pocket pistols in the category of "prohibited weapons," the possession of which renders one liable to a heavy fine. But nothing is done to prevent the purchase of such weapons and gunsmiths' shops are plentiful enough in Paris. The Apache, however, buys his revolver second-hand, as a rule.

To all intents and purposes the prohibition to carry arms is a dead letter. It comes into play, more often than not, after the harm is done, and sometimes an honest citizen who uses a revolver or pistol in self-defence is prosecuted by the authorities whose duty it is to protect him.

The only way to stop the murderous practices of the Apache is to restrict the sale of weapons of all sorts, and the Surete has prepared draft regulations which, if strictly carried out, would certainly cut his claws. These regulations provide that any sort must go to the police commissary of his district and justify the request. If the commissary, after making enquiries, considers that the person may safely be trusted with a weapon, he will deliver a certificate, with a special note to the effect that the person in question may have need of the said weapon for self-defence.

Private individuals would be forbidden to exchange, sell, or even give revolvers to anyone else. If is is desired to make a gift of a revolver, the beneficiary could only accept it after obtaining the certificate from the police commissary. Second-hand weapons could be sold only to a gunsmith. In no case could minors purchase arms.

The carrying of a weapon by a person without the right to do so would be severely punished, especially in the case of a second offence.

The same provisions would apply to knives, daggers, knuckledusters and all other dangerous weapons. This measure may seem rather far-reaching, but it is only by the adoption of really stringent regulations that the Apache will be got rid of.

BRITAIN IS STORM-SWEPT

Thames River Overflows Causing Immense Damage.

London, Dec. 17.—It is thirty years since England has known such floods as are now devastating immense stretches of the country. The deluge of rain practically has been incessant since the first of December, only two days out of the sixteen being without rain. The farmers have suffered heavy losses.

Large areas of territory are so inundated that five barred gates are covered with water, which, in some parts of the country is twelve feet deep.

In many villages houses have been flooded and the residents are living in the upper stories.

The outlook in the Thames valley is grave. The river has risen ten inches in the Henley district within the last 36 hours and flooded enormous areas. Many residences have been irretrievably ruined.

Yesterday a severe gale swept the coast, causing havoc at seaside towns like Worthing, Hastings, Cowes and Dover, where seawalls were washed away and thousands of tons of sand deposited in the streets.

In the neighborhood of the sea front, houses have been flooded and yachts tossed ashore.

A number of minor wrecks are reported. Off Sheerness, a British naval tender, occupied by 100 sailors, who were going ashore on liberty time, was capsized and five of the men drowned.

Much damage has been done by the heavy sea at Portsmouth.

The Mauretania's Run.

New York, Dec. 17.—The giant Cunarder Mauretania warped into her dock before sunrise yesterday, ending the first leg of her "Mersey to Mersey" voyage to establish a world's record. The demands of the Christmas season was responsible for the flying round trip which the Mauretania is making, the steamship bringing in no less than 4,613 sacks of Christmas mail and returning with holiday mail for England.

Battling with barricades of water during the entire voyage, the Mauretania covered the distance from Daunt's Rock to Ambrose Channel in four days 20 hours and seven minutes. Ordinarily the Cunarder would have anchored outside Thursday night, but instead she came up the channel. Health officers were waiting at quarantine and after an inspection of three-quarters of an hour the steamship was released at 2.57 o'clock in the morning. The customs officers did not board the ship until sunrise, when the passengers were ready to debark.

The Mauretania sails at 6 p.m. to-night and in the 37 hours in port must unload and load thousands of tons of freight and baggage and store 6,200 tons of coal.

The Mauretania is to dock at Liverpool next Thursday evening, making the round trip in 12 days, a new record.

U. S. Postal Prosecutions.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 17.—Postal inspectors yesterday, in connection with the Government's crusade against persons suspected of using the mails improperly, arrested Louis L. Rice, president; A. C. Patterson, first vice-president; Edgar Pohlig, second vice-president and treasurer, and Geo. H. Brooks, third vice-president of the Chain Shoe Stores Syndicate, and Robt. G. McMorris of Philadelphia, F. Stanton, Ocean City, N.J., officers of the Pine Heights Co., a land concern.

According to Postal Inspector Cortelyou, the Chain Shoe Stores Syndicate was capitalized at $2,000,000. It had widely advertised that it was establishing retail stores in large cities and that it was purchasing shoe factories at bargain prices, and that the company was able to do business cheaply by eliminating middlemen.

The Pine Heights Co. advertised and used the mails in connection with the giving away and selling of lots in Southern New Jersey, which the Government alleges are practically worthless.

Burned to Death at Eighty-One.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—Fondness for her corncob pipe cost the life of Mrs. Bertha Byers, 81 years old, who ignited lace curtains. Daniel Lynch, 72 years old, who was smoking with her in the front room of his flat, was severely burned trying to save her. The fire partially destroyed the tenement and seventeen families were forced into the street.

"Eli Perkins" Dead.

Yonkers, N.Y., Dec. 17.—Melville Delancey Landon, better known as "Eli Perkins," author and lecturer, died at his home here yesterday at the age of 71. He was a graduate of Union College. He took the name of "Eli Perkins" on the advice of Artemus Ward, one of his most intimate friends.

Looking for Santa, Badly Burned.

Philipsburg, N.J., Dec. 17.—Marjorie Korp, four years old, daughter of George Korp, lighted a match yesterday afternoon and peeped up an open fireplace, looking for Santa Claus.

Her clothing caught fire and she was so badly burned that physicians say she cannot live.

Rhodes' Scholar Chosen.

Fredericton, N.B., Dec. 17.—Chancellor Jones officially announces the selection of John B. McNairn of Arthurette, Victoria County, a member of the class of 1911, as the Rhodes' scholar from the University of New Brunswick for 1911.

THE LINDSAY BANK CASE

Lindsay, Dec. 17.—The crown's case in the charge of conspiracy to injure the Farmers' Bank brought against McGill, Fleury and Coulter, former employes, is not yet concluded, and from appearances the trial will continue into next week.

Joseph Taylor, from near Bobcaygeon, gave evidence as to his circulating of reports detrimental to the Farmers' Bank stock to some of those who purchased, had represented himself to be a farmer, but was in reality a stock broker of Toronto. Witness had told this to the president of the cheese factory company, as they had money in the bank.

Oliver Masters said he was an investment broker in Toronto, and had purchased ten shares of Farmers' Bank stock for some real estate which had $2,100 against it. The ten shares were sold to James E. McDougall of the London Stock Co. for five shares at 7 per cent. dividend. The London stock proved worthless.

A. Y. Hopkins, Kinmount, had purchased five shares of Farmers' Bank stock from Heron & Co., for $35 a share, and had bought stock before that $12 a share.

Mr. Cowan: "If you knew that $150,000 of the Farmers' Bank money had been carried over to Syracuse to be put into the People's Mutual Life Insurance, would you have bought at 35?"

"No."

C. Furlong, representing Heron & Co., members of the Toronto Stock Exchange, said they had bought Farmers' Bank stock from the London Stock Co. at $11 a share and sold it to Greville & Co. for $15. Witness had written to McGill and Fleury regarding stock. In one letter he referred to the Farmers' Bank stock being rather weak and that he had understood from a fairly reliable source that insiders of the bank were selling their stock.

English Journalist's Whirlwind Trip.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Landing in New York from Mauretania at four o'clock yesterday morning, W. R. Holt, Parliamentary correspondent for a London newspaper, caught a special train, held in waiting, and was whisked to Washington.

At the station here Mr. Holt leaped into an automobile and began a whirlwind investigation of the capital of the United States. He will leave on his special train last night for New York and will sail at six o'clock this evening on the Mauretania for London. The result of this meteor-like flight will be a series of articles for his paper on "Thirty-eight hours' impressions in America."

Before arriving here Mr. Holt had arranged for an audience with President Taft. He saw the president, talked with Speaker Cannon and Vice-President Sherman and the chairman of the House ways and means and the Senate finance committees. Last night he returned to New York to go "slumming" and generally "do" the metropolis before sailing.

Newfoundland Fisheries.

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 17.—It was stated yesterday that early in January the Premier of Newfoundland probably would visit Washington for the purpose of conferring with the representatives of Canada and the United States regarding an amicable modification of the fishery regulations as a result of the recent Hague decision.

The recent ruling of the American Board of Treaty appraisers, facilitating the admission of Newfoundland fish into American ports is regarded here as indicating a friendly attitude on the part of the American officials.

United States Soldier Boy Killed.

St. Thomas, Dec. 17.—John B. McDermet, an ex-soldier from the Philippines, traveling from Chicago to Providence, R.I., fell from a Michigan Central train near Rodney some time during Thursday night, and his dead body, almost frozen, was found by section men early yesterday morning. Letters found showed he had a brother and sister living at Providence, who spoke of him as their long lost brother, and urged him to come home.

Boilers Exploded.

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 17.—With a roar that startled everyone within the radius of a mile, two large boilers in the Fredonia power house at Fredonia, N.Y., exploded Thursday night, killing instantly L. Burrows, a fireman, and hurling William Bishop, another fireman, to the top of the Buffalo and Lake Erie Traction Co. house, fifty feet away. Loss $150,000.

Aeroplanes for German Army.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The Ministers of Marine and War have decided to introduce aeroplanes in the regular service. Officers from both army and navy will be selected for instruction as pilots.

Home Rule.

London, Dec. 17.—It is stated that the Government will initiate a discussion on federal home rule at the Imperial Conference.

Eighty-Four to Be Ordained.

Montreal, Dec. 17.—There appears to be little difficulty to secure recruits for the French clergy, as 84 young men will be given the different orders to-day in St. James' Cathedral, Mgr. Bruchesi officiating.

Farmers May Build Line.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—A private meeting of western farmers was held last night, when many signatures were obtained towards the formation of a company to build the Hudson Bay Railway.

Lists were handed out to be taken home by the delegates to obtain more signatures of possible stockholders and a company will take up the matter of organising a joint stock company with the idea of obtaining a charter.

These will report to the central committee.

PREMIER HAS NO DIRECT REPLY TO FARMERS' DEMANDS

Sir Wilfrid's Reply to Delegation Proves so Great a Disappointment That He Sits Down in Absolute Silence---Says He Believes in Government Building, But Not Government Operation.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Declaring that public ownership was not in his line, but stating that a concession might be made as to the ownership of the proposed Hudson Bay Railway, though Government operation was another matter, as to which he would only promise "due weight to your representations," Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday afternoon parted with the huge delegation of nearly 1,000 farmers, representing all parts of the country. It was the Premier's nearest approach to a definite statement.

He was speaking in regard to the demands of the farmers that the Hudson Bay Railway be Government-owned and Government-operated in perpetuity, and this deluge of cold water on their hopes and aspirations was only a portion of the torrent which Sir Wilfrid poured upon their representations as a whole.

As to tariff matters, the Premier said that if what was in view was better commercial relations with the U.S., "we are at one with you," but this was rather in the direction of natural products and not as to manufacturers. Nothing could be done that would impair or affect the British preference, which must always remain a cardinal feature of policy. Indefinite reference to the question of terminal ownership and excusing a reply as to other subjects of importance raised by the delegates on the plea of lack of time, completed the Premier's reply. Sir Wilfrid was inclined to the belief that the western farmers were too progressive in their policies, and were dominating the east.

When the Premier arose to address the great assembly, he was warmly greeted.

When he closed, he sat down in absolute silence.

The delegates went to Rideau Hall later in the day and shook hands with Earl Grey, who presented them with a book on "Co-operation" by Sir Horace Plunkett. In the evening they were entertained at dinner by Hon. Frank Oliver on behalf of the Government.

By 9.30 yesterday morning every seat in the House of Commons chamber was taken and the galleries thronged. The delegates marched to the buildings from the opera house, six abreast. Even leading members of the Government and Opposition found themselves displaced when they arrived. On the Premier's left sat Sir Richard Cartwright, and on his right D. W. McCuaig, president of the National Council of Agriculture, and leader of the delegation. Mr. McCuaig introduced the delegates, who, he said, had come to show their earnestness, and then called on the various members designated to present the different resolutions and memorials as already published. Frequent applause marked the reading of the long resolutions. Sir Wilfrid listened attentively throughout, and at two o'clock rose to make his reply.

"Permit me at the very outset," he said, "on behalf of the Government and on behalf of Parliament on both sides of the House, for which, I think, on this occasion and for this purpose I can speak"—R. L. Borden: "Hear, hear."—"To express to you the gratification it affords us to see before us such a representative delegation as we have here and to acknowledge also the profit with which we have listened to the expression of your views, even if we do not share those views in their entirety.

"When I came here this morning I thought we were coming to receive a delegation from the west. But I understand from your remarks that the delegation we have before us represents all the agricultural interests of Canada, on the east as well as the west. But you will perhaps permit me to observe that it seems to me that, though the delegation represents the agricultural interests of the whole of Canada, it is the western spirit which pervades it.

"I think that in this I speak correctly, and if you will not deny the impeachment, if such it be, that, in the west, your ideas are far more advanced than are those of the east. As I say, I do not complain of this, but simply state it as a basis of fact. The resolutions you have put before us are certainly impregnated with the western spirit.

"Nor do I believe the farmers of the east are prepared to go quite so far as you gentlemen of the west. You are in favor, I understand, of the Government ownership and operation of all Government utilities, of railways, of abattoirs and of elevators. As to this, I have nothing to say at present. The idea may, perhaps, be a good one. I understand that you have started a campaign of education, and I, perhaps, may be the first to be educated in that respect, because, up to this time I have not been an absolutely ardent supporter of Government ownership and operation of all public utilities. To Government ownership, I may be persuaded, to Government operation I may be persuaded also, but with greater difficulty. In this I am a man of the east.

"Now, what is to be the nature of the improvement? With regard to the tariff, I understand that what is proposed is closer commercial relations with our neighbors—whether by treaty or concurrent legislation is another matter. I suppose you would rather have it in the form of a treaty than not have it at all. If what you have in view is better commercial relations with the United States, we are at one with you. I am happy to say that at this moment, we are negotiating with the American authorities to do this very thing which you ask for—to improve our commercial relations with our neighbors.

"But there is one view which you have expressed, which it is the object of the Government to carry out and on which the Government will respond to your views in full as you have expressed them. That is, whatever we do with our neighbors, whatever we may be able to accomplish with them, nothing that we do shall in any way impair or affect the British preference. That remains a cardinal feature of our policy. The hour is advanced, and I cannot give more detailed information upon this point at this moment.

"As the hour is so late, I hope you will excuse me if I do not deal with the other problems you have mentioned. Let me say one word only with regard to the Hudson Bay Railway. We are prepared to go on with the Hudson Bay Railway at this moment. We will give due consideration to your representations. Government ownership, as I said a moment ago, is not altogether in my line. But I think I can go that far. Government operation is a matter as to which we shall give all due weight to your representations."

INJURED MAN NEGLECTED

Cobalt, Dec. 17.—Camille Bouvin, the Cobalt carter who was run over by his team on Porcupine trail, died at Kelso, and according to the report of ex-Chief Ryan of Cobalt, the injured man was shamefully neglected.

After being run over, he was picked up on the trail and laid under only a single blanket on the sleigh. In that way he was taken out with only one blanket over him, and he died there while all the travelers to the new gold fields were eating breakfast, quite unconscious of the tragedy near them. It is not even known if he received medical attention.

Considered Six Cases For Parole.

Guelph, Dec. 17.—The first meeting of the Provincial Board of Control was held at the Reformatory here yesterday. The members present were: Justice Teetzel, Dr. Turnbull, Hamilton Cassels and Noel Marshall of Toronto; Donald McIntyre of Kingston, and T. H. Preston of Brantford.

The records of six prisoners were considered by the board, and a report will be sent to Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, at Ottawa. All the members expressed themselves as well pleased with the new prison farm.

BELMONTS BANQUET DIRECTOR; TICKET SALE WAS $825

The Belmont Minstrels had a fitting finale to their performance last night. Coleman's grill room was the scene, and Mr. and Mrs. Shepard and every member of the company, and several club members were present.

The occasion was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Shepard, who won the sincere gratitude and appreciation of the performers for their tireless and well directed efforts in connection with the production of the show. Mr. Shepard's amiable ways, his patience and his skill were recognised in neat tributes from the company around the festive board.

Mrs. Shepard was presented with a handsome coat sweater in Belmont colors, and also a cushion top in club colors. Mr. Shepard was given a fine leather wallet, and whenever he looks at it he will be reminded of the substantial sum he took away with him as the result of the Belmont minstrel show.

Mr. W. McIlroy occupied the chair at the head of the table, and acted as master of ceremonies. He called on the chorus and the individual contributors to go through the work they did in the show, and they did so in a most creditable manner.

Mr. Paul Trebilcock, of the management of the committee, thanked Miss Sproule, Miss King, and other talent outside the club, who had so ably taken part in the performances. Mr Walter Davidson made a bright reply.

At the conclusion of the spread—2 o'clock this morning—the boys carried Mr. Shepard on their shoulders from the grill room to the rotunda of the National.

As a result of the splendid patronage the gross receipts of the Belmont shows were $850, half of which goes to Mr. Shepard. This is pretty fair returns for three weeks' work.

PLEASE RETURN LIBRARY BOOKS

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Would you kindly allow me through your columns to bring to the notice of those who have overdue books belonging to the Public Library the absolute necessity of returning them at once to the Librarian for the purposes of cataloguing and classification. The advertisement asking for overdue books to be returned, which was lately inserted in all three papers in this city, has resulted in about eighteen volumes being brought back to the Library. There are hundreds of books missing from the shelves, many of which, of course, have succumbed to the wear and tear consequent on usage, but there are very many in the houses of our citizens which have been held for months and years, and in the interests of all readers should be returned at once. Some valuable reference books are also missing, second or third volumes of a set, which, if not returned, will render the series to which they belong comparatively valueless.

I am sure it is only necessary to bring this matter in a proper light before our citizens to ensure the return of whatever volumes may be in their possession.

Yours, etc.,
FRED M. DELAFOSSE,
Librarian.

C. G. E. 3,000 LIGHT GENERATOR FOR GUELPH

Guelph Herald: — The electric lights went out again last night, but this time the cause was not in the city. Manager Hess this morning said the trouble somewhere between here and the Falls, and was probably due to the high wind. The power became so irregular that it was almost dangerous to continue it and so it had to be shut off.

Mr. Carter, the chairman of the commission, is expected back from Toronto to-day, having made arrangements with the Canadian General Electric Co., at Petreboro' for the shipment to Guelph of a new 3000 light generator. This will probably take a week to get in running order, but when it starts, if the Niagara Power does not serve at any time, in a few minutes the new generator will be able to take the load and keep the lights bright in Guelph.

CENTENARY OF PEACE

Toronto, Dec. 17.—With the aim of organising a movement to celebrate "the centenary of the preservation of British North America to the British crown," an event which it is hoped to have marked by the coming to Canada of King George, a meeting was held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, with Rev. Dr. Carman presiding.

The outcome was the enlarging of the executive committee, at whose instance the primary step was taken.

Rev. Dr. Carman read letters sympathising with the movement from Justice Riddell, Bishop Sweeny, W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., Sir Henry Pellatt, Prof. Baker and others.

R. S. Neville, who acted as secretary, said the object was to promote a national and imperial celebration. The preservation of Canada to the British crown in 1812-14 was one of the most important events that ever occurred in the western hemisphere. Petitions should be immediately circulated to bring the matter before all Legislatures, municipal bodies, historical associations, Canadian and Empire clubs and educational institutions, asking particularly that the King be invited to come in 1812, 1814 or 1815.

An organization meeting of the Hundred Years of Peace Society was also held yesterday in the Iroquois Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., with a large representation from the municipalities along the frontier. It was decided to apply at once for incorporation under the laws of the State of New York.

WANTED CHILD SENT TO PRISON

Teacher Had Girl in Court for Throwing an Eraser

New York, Dec. 16.—"I think the crime of throwing a black-board eraser at a teacher is crime enough to have this girl sent to the House of Correction until she is twenty-one," said Cecelia Francis, principal of Public School No. 168 in One Hundred and Fourth street, to Justice Salmon in Children's Court to-day when Rachel Evel, twelve years old, No. 313 East One Hundredth street, was arraigned.

After the teacher, Therese Rosenthal, had testified that the girl had thrown the eraser at her, the principal had her say.

"This girl is incorrigible," she said. "Yesterday she bit another little girl and stole a copy book from the school room and then she threw the eraser."

"Which charge do you want to prefer?" asked Justice Salmon, "the biting charge, the theft of the copy book or the throwing of the eraser?"

"Well," said Miss Francis, "I want the most serious offence charged. Which one is it?"

"That is for you to decide," said the Justice.

"Well then," said the principal, "I will charge her with throwing the eraser."

"Now, madam," said Justice Salmon, "is it not customary for the principal to discipline the pupils who commit such offences?"

"It is," replied the principal, adding thatthat she had not disciplined Rachel as she wanted her brought to court.

Justice Salmon paroled Rachel in the custody of her parents.

BEATS SON TO DEATH

Further Details of a Crazy Man's Crime.

Goderich, Ont., Dec. 17.—Another murder occurred at Goderich Thursday night about ten o'clock, when George Vanstone beat his little son, aged six, to death with a broomstick. The murderer spent some time in the asylum some years ago.

The scene of the tragedy was in a small one-storey frame house on Trafalgar street, in the northeastern part of the town. The little boy, a pretty chubby little fellow and curly-headed, had only recently started to school. The father, it is stated, had been teaching the boy to write numbers as far as 20, and being unable or unwilling to attempt it, the father's temper, which is known to be a fiery one, was aroused, and taking the handle of an old broom he commenced beating the boy. The back of the body is of a purple hue and even down on his little legs the marks of the broomstick are quite discernible. The right side of the head has been beaten to a pulp. Breaking the handle of one broom he seized another and must have used it considerably, as there are bloody marks on the handle. The distracted mother is unable to tell how long she was out searching for assistance. It seems no help was available from the neighbors, as a large number were down town doing their Christmas shopping.

Sergt. Moore of the police force was the first to arrive at the house, about ten o'clock. When he entered he found the father nursing the boy. Dr. Hunter arrived immediately afterwards and pronounced life extinct. The announcement had a visible effect on the father. He leaned over the body as it lay on the table and kissed it repeatedly. He resisted arrest in a rather stupid manner, making a remark to the effect that he could not see the necessity of it. He is about sixty years of age and had a family of four boys and one girl, the oldest being about thirteen years of age. He has had the reputation of possessing a most ungovernable temper, and on Dec. 10 of last year was committed to jail on a charge of threatening his wife.

The inquest was adjourned a week.

Train Hit Wagon.

Toronto, Dec. 17.—Bert Fee, Riverdale, surrounded by his wife and three children, will partake of his Christmas dinner, if nothing unforeseen happens between then and now, and that time, with more than ordinary zest, as yesterday morning at nine o'clock he escaped a terrible death by a second of time by jumping from a delivery rig, which was cut in two by No. 3 G.T.R. flier from Montreal, at the Logan avenue crossing.

It appears that Fee, who is an employe of Fenwick & Co., dealers in coke, East Queen street, was proceeding north over the crossing just at the time when the flier was almost at the point of crossing, two hours behind time from Montreal. His horse was over the rails, but had not time to clear the wagon, which was heavily loaded with bags of coke. Fee, perceiving his danger, jumped clear of the rails just in time.

Bags of coke and remnants of the rig were scattered over a distance of one hundred feet. The horse, set free, ran away, but was soon captured.

The crossing at this point is very dangerous, it having five tracks, and with a steep grade on either approach, makes it very difficult to traverse with a heavy load.

Ice Bridge at Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 17.—Rescued from death in the Niagara River Rapids, only to be fined $5 for drunkenness, was the fate of John Fink. Fink was saved from falling from the bridge into the rapids by Eel Petit, a newspaper man, who found him asleep with his feet hanging over the precipice.

C. M. Dickson was sentenced to three years in Kingston for twice robbing William Sewartz's store at Ridgeway.

The first ice bridge of the season formed in the gorge yesterday, the first one before Christmas that is on record.

London Police In Fight.

London, Dec. 17.—A police sergeant was killed and four policemen were wounded, one probably fatally, last night in a revolver battle with burgars trapped on the second floor of a jewery shop in Cutler street, Houndsditch.

The robbers waited at the top of the stairs, picked off the constables as they ascended and then made good their escape.

Six Months For Dynamiter.

Smith's Falls, Ont., Dec. 17.—The trial of L. A. Purcell of Smith's Falls, charged with obstructing the sheriff's officer in the discharge of his duty and also of having destroyed certain machines by blowing them up with dynamite to prevent their being seized and taken away, ended in his being sentenced to six months in jail.

Lost Fifty Places.

Regina, Sask., Dec. 17.—Although the vote has been taken on local option throughout the province, interest in the matter has not yet subsided.

The temperance people claim that over 70 per cent. of the places voted dry, but the result was changed, owing to the fact that, outside of the cities, there were no voters' lists, and hundreds of fraudulent ballots went in.

Five Sailors Drowned.

Harwich, Eng., Dec. 17.—Five of the crew of the naval tender Elfin were drowned yesterday in a collision between the tender and a submarine. The Elfin was sunk and the submarine seriously damaged.

A CENTURY OF PEACE

Suggestions are being made of a fitting manner in which to celebrate or commemorate the one hundred years of peace that has happily existed between this country and the United States. One, from the other side, is that it be celebrated by the abolition of the customs houses maintained on the borders of the two countries. This is practically an invitation to Canada to give up what it fought for in the last war, and however sincerely or kindly meant will not be entertained on this side. The abolition of the customs houses would mean not only commercial, but also political union, and while Canada has only feelings of friendship for its big neighbor, it has no desire to change its political status by becoming states in the Union. It rather looks the other way, to taking a more responsible part in the affairs of the Empire.

A sensible suggestion is that of the Toronto News, that the convention by which each nation agreed not to maintain armed vessels on the great lakes be made a permanent treaty, instead of being terminable on six months' notice from either side. There is no reason why either country should wish to assume the burden of placing and maintaining war vessels on the lakes. A movement in that direction by one would compel the other to adopt similar measures, and lead, in a smaller way, to a repetition of the ruinous competition the powers are engaged in with men-of-war.

The United States have shown a desire to promote measures that will make for peace, as witness President Taft's initiative with respect to a conference looking towards disarmament and whether as part of the peace celebration or not it would be a sensible act for both nations to give further evidence of their good intentions by eliminating the six months' notice provision of the present treaty.

PROTECTION AND THE FARMER

Representatives of the Dominion Grange, who met in Toronto, did not represent the farmers of Ontario in their resolutions calling for free trade. A prosperous country is the best one for the producer of agricultural commodities, as well as for the others in it engaged in any business, and a reduction of the tariff that would result in the crippling or closing of Canadian manufacturing industries would injure the farmers along with the other residents of the Dominion.

One speaker at the convention was a United States manufacturer who had established a Canadian branch at Sarnia. He complained of unfair treatment by a combine of manufacturers in his line, and if his statements were correct the case should be met by an application of the anti-combine law, and not by measures that would destroy Canadian industry in many lines. This same speaker said:

"Were the duty taken off altogether, and the location of the United States plant favorable for the supply of Canadian customers, there was no reason why the American manufacturer should come to Canada. That was the only way Canada would lose by the elimination of the tariff."

And that one way, even if it were the only way, is enough to show that the removal of the duty would have a serious effect. In many places in Ontario there are large industries that would not be here if it had not been for the tariff. Peterborough has several established by United States concerns, or promoted by men from that side of the line. What has been the benefit to this city of the location here of the Electric Works and the Quaker Oats mills, both established by United States manufacturers? And other industries would not have had an existence if there had been no protection.

It is not only the citizens of Peterborough who have benefited by these industries, for the farming community has shared largely in the beneficial results. A home market is the best market for the farmer, as well as for other producers, and the manufacturing industries provide a home market. If the Electric Works or the Quaker Oats mills had not been started here would the farmers of this district have found as good a market for their produce in Schenectady or in Cedar Rapids, where the United States factories are? The whole community would suffer if these industries were lost to us, or if the Auburn mills were closed, yet the admission of importations free from the Old Country would swamp the woollen mills, which are already handicapped by the lower duties on goods coming from factories where lower wages prevail.

Ontario farmers realise this as well as the workers realise what effect free importations would have on their wages. It is not the abolition of the tariff that this country needs, but a sounder method in dealing with the country's finances—the abolition of extravagance and the rake-off.

A DEPLETED PROFESSION

Word comes from the West that a thousand teachers are required in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and that an official is on his way to Ireland to secure them.

Why is this? Is not the Canadian bred teacher efficient, or is he not available in sufficient numbers. If lacking in number are we furnishing the facilities for turning out more teachers to meet the demand. If the facilities are there, is there anything lacking with the course of instruction. Is it too long, is it too difficult? And, does the average teacher that the West is calling for require the preparation implied in a long and arduous training?

People returning from the West and who are competent to judge, tell us that what is needed and what is asked for is instructors competent to teach in the rural schools the plain branches of a plain education. That for many years the isolation of the school house, especially in the sparsely settled districts, means that it is open for only a part of the year. Climatic conditions are against keeping the school open throughout a long winter.

Why not fill the want of the West with teachers for the emergency?

Throughout Ontario, at least, the examinations for entrance to the High Schools and Normal schools have been made stiffer, to raise, it is said, the standard in the profession. This is all very well, but the children of all communities are not in need of a teacher of the highest attainments. They, the children, have first to be taught that they may appreciate and absorb the advanced teaching. Stiffer exams may help to weed out and select, but it will impoverish the supply.

There is such a thing as quality without quantity. What the West needs is numbers, that there may be enough to go around.

We welcome the Irish and English or Scotch teacher. He or she will make good citizens, but our Canadian young women and young men should have the first chance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

An egg eighteen hundred years old has been dug up in Germany. Who will select the actor at whom it will be thrown?

The story running in all the papers, entitled "The British Elections," is not a good newspaper serial. The most interesting features were in the earlier chapters, and before it is done, the public will be tired of it.

A deputation that waited upon members of the Dominion Government ask for a more effective inspection of immigrants, stated that, forty-nine per cent. of the consumptives undergoing treatment in free sanitariums came from other lands. This one fact seems to prove their case.

Speaking to a deputation that asked for the deepening of the Welland Canal Sir Wilfrid Laurier said of that project and of the Georgian Bay Canal, "The two projects would involve the borrowing of two hundred millions, but I am not scared. Perhaps if it were left to me there would be no difficulty, for I am the extravagant boy of the Administration." Yet this lighthearted spendthrift cannot make up his mind to spend the small sum necessary to complete the Trent Canal.

That the man Beach was not permitted to go over Niagara Falls until he had first sent his boat over to test it was fortunate for him, for it was badly damaged, as one would expect it to be. What is to be gained by such exploits is a problem. Neither passengers nor freight boats would ply over the cataract if Beach had succeeded, and he would have risked his life in an attempt as useful as walking a tight rope.

Fire From Friction.

The Australian bushman uses a method of his own to procure a light. First he selects two pieces of light wood, each about a foot long, from the cork tree or black fig tree. [illegible] a flat piece, he lays on the ground amid a pile of dry leaves. Upon this strip of wood he kneels in order to hold down the ends. Then he rolls the other pointed stick between the palms of his hands so that it bores a hole into the flat strip of wood. This makes fine wood dust, which catches on fire, sending its sparks among the dry leaves. By blowing upon the tiny light the bushman soon has a fire, which he feeds with more leaves.

Blacks Oppose Change.

Lord Gladstone held his first native Indaba at Gaberones recently when he received several native chiefs. The chiefs said they wished to remain as they were, and did not desire the change that would be involved by the inclusion of Bechuanaland in the Union. The Governor-General intimated that it was his keen desire to safeguard the right granted by Queen Victoria. If any change came, they would have no reason to fear for the continuance of just administration, and he, therefore, counselled them to enjoy their rights without agitation.

Calgary Jewel Robbery.

Calgary, Dec. 17.—One of the most daring jewel robberies in the history of local crime took place when a thief or thieves, surreptitiously carried off over $8,000 worth of pearls, opals and diamonds from D. E. Black's jewelry store, Eighth avenue. It was between four and five o'clock in the afternoon that the precious stones were missed. Black had been showing his jewels to a customer and had left them in a [illegible] on a table in the diamond room. Later one of the packages was missed. A man named Mason, who is alleged to have been employed as a piano-player in a resort in the "red light" district, is under arrest.

Lake Steamer Ice Bound.

Sandusky, O., Dec. 17.—The passenger steamer Lakeside, bound from Ellis Island and Put-in-Bay, with 78 passengers aboard, is fast in the ice about two miles off Cedar Point, and five miles from here.

About half the passengers are women and children.

The first information of her serious predicament came with the arrival of the fireman, who walked across the ice yesterday to get aid for the icebound ship and her passengers.

If it is found, after a trial, that the ice is firm enough, sleds will be sent out after the passengers.

Bolivian Ministry Resigns.

Buenos Ayres, Argentine, Dec. 17.—Yesterday's papers published a telegram from La Paz, announcing that the Ministry of Bolivia has resigned because of its disapproval of the terms of the protocol which Gen. Pando of Bolivia signed on Dec. 13, re-establishing diplomatic relations between Bolivia and Argentina.

These relations had been severed as the result of Bolivia's dissatisfaction over President Alcorta's arbitrament of the Bolivia-Peru boundary dispute.

Treasure Trove

Its Secret Was Revealed by a Vision

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Jarvis journeyed from the little railroad station in a brightly painted stage drawn by two iron gray horses. He was the only passenger for the beach, and he shook about in the huge vehicle like the proverbial pea in a barrel. At the entrance to a narrow sandy lane shaded by wind blown cedars, under which the marsh grass straggled sparsely, the stage stopped.

"All out!" sang the driver lustily. "Goin' to the beach, ye said?" He peered down at Jarvis with beady black eyes beneath thatches of white eyebrows.

"Yes; Edgewater cottage. Straight ahead?" Jarvis asked the question while he threw his luggage to the ground and paid his fare.

"Edgewater cottage? That'll be the Rowe place, last cottage on the left. So long!"

"Much obliged. Goodby!"

Jarvis turned to the left and walked slowly down to the beach, his head bared to the fresh breeze, his lungs gratefully inhaling the invigorating salt air.

The last cottage proved to be a rather large structure placed not far beyond high water mark. Its shingles were weather beaten to a silver gray, and the many windows tightly shuttered looked like closed eyes in a sad face. It seemed desolate enough compared to the other cozy houses along the beach, but Jarvis decided after a hasty examination that when he got out some porch furniture and opened up the shutters the cottage he had hired would be fit enough for his purposes.

The rusty key he had obtained from the agent creaked in the lock and the door swung open, admitting him to large, comfortably furnished rooms.

His first duty was to throw wide the shutters and raise the window sashes to the fresh air. Except for a layer of dust over everything the house was in exquisite order of arrangement. He decided to sleep in the wire inclosed balcony, and as he had arranged by letter for his meals to be sent in from the hotel on the long point beyond there was little for him to do save to arrange a cot in the balcony and unpack his painting things.

At sunset a steam launch from the hotel discharged a boy with a basket containing his dinner. Jarvis discussed the excellent meal on the veranda, his artist's eye lingering on the wide sweep of green and blue flecked with white that filled the foreground.

Here were color and life enough to limn any number of canvases. Jarvis was glad he had decided to close his studio and run away from all his friends, and the chance that brought him to Beachside had been decided by the childish method of closing his eyes and running his finger along the map of New Jersey while he counted ten. Then he had opened his eyes and found Beachside, most inconspicuous of small watering places, under his finger. Now he was here.

He smoked a thoughtful cigar while the sunset tints faded to opal and silver and then a uniform slate gray settled over the water.

The cigar consumed, Jarvis felt for another one in vain. His cigar case was empty; also he had forgotten his tobacco pouch. He fingered his pipe wistfully and rummaged his traps for tobacco of some sort. In sheer desperation he carried his tallow candle (there was no kerosene in the cottage) from room to room in an aimless search for nicotine.

At last he whistled joyously. On a small stand in one corner of the living room he found a smoking set of hammered brass. The huge tobacco jar contained a few pinches of the desired weed, and he crammed it into his pipe gratefully.

Now he closed the door and locked it and went up to his balcony. He threw himself down on the cot and smoked contentedly, dreamily. Overhead was the shine of gentle stars, and on the beach the waves broke softly, musically. He went to sleep.

Jarvis was awakened by a crashing volley of thunder, followed by a vivid flash of lightning. He sat up and gazed open mouthed at the strange scene depicted before his eyes.

There was all the wild fury of a hurricane bursting about his ears. Huge waves pounded on the beach, breaking in blinding spray that drenched his face. Some dark shape loomed out of the blackness, coming nearer. He discerned the outlines of a large white steamer, saw dark forms tossed against her whiteness, heard the blare of her distress signals, saw her careen on the shoals and become engulfed in the sea. Still the waves broke on the beach, and in their tossing they flung a dark form on the white sand beneath the balcony.

Jarvis tried to rise, but his limbs seemed paralyzed. He endeavored to utter a sound, but his lips were dumb. He could only sit there on his couch wildly conscious of tragedy heaped on tragedy, powerless to help.

Another wave rose high crested, curved downward and greedily snatched the still dark form from the sands, drew it out into the sea's bosom and kept it.

Horrified, the painter stared down at the beach, now conscious that the silent form had left something behind, a small dark object whose outlines were lost in the darkness. Then the waves came again and again, sucking up the sand and piling it over and about the dark object until it was entirely hidden from view.

With appalling suddenness the storm vanished as if it had never been. Overhead the stars shone gently, and the waves softly lapped the quiet beach.

Jarvis found his motive power as if magically restored. With a leap he was off the cot and dashing down the stairs to the sand. There he stood dumfounded.

To the touch of his stockinged feet the sand was warm and dry. His groping fingers confirmed that fact. The tide was rising, and almost to its verge the sand showed no trace of dampness. The sea stretched a level expanse, broken here and there by dimpling wavelets.

"I'll be banged if I know what to make of it," muttered Jarvis dazedly. "I couldn't have been dreaming, and yet"— He looked at his watch. "It's certainly up to me or the tobacco I've been smoking! Nine o'clock when I turned in, and now it's 9:30. Even in these swift times they don't turn storms off and on at that gait!"

Chagrined, he walked over to the place under his balcony where the waves had tossed the dead man for a brief instant before they reclaimed him. Jarvis had watched it with his own eyes, and he had seen the following waves heap sand about a small, dark object the man had left behind. There should be a little sand mound here—and there was!

The painter was too excited to return to his bed; therefore he went into the cottage, found an old fashioned lantern, in which he stuck a candle end, took up a coal shovel and went back to the beach.

Here by the candle's dim light he grimly dug into the shallow heap of sand. It was a fool's business, he told himself as he delved downward to where the sand was soaking wet and the water oozed up into little wells and impeded his labor.

At last came rags and shreds of something that might have been an oilskin coat, and afterward, deeply embedded in the sand, Jarvis found a small water soaked box bound with iron bands. This was treasure trove.

Jarvis hastened to the cottage and with hammer and chisel pounded away at the little box until its rotted sides fell inward and the iron bands crumbled to rusty flakes.

Pitiful indeed was the little treasure contained in the tiny chest—a sailor's keepsakes. Bits of coral and pretty shells and stones, a woman's lovely face smiling from a tarnished frame, a baby's first photograph, the mother's loving inscription penned on the back; a few letters, intimately tender, from wife to husband; a copy of a will, a few months' wages tied in little oilskin sacks, the owner's name on the inside of a memorandum book—James Petrel, master of the freighter Sea Nymph—that was all.

So the man who had been thrown on the beach as revealed to Jarvis in the vision—for such the painter believed his strange adventure to be—must have been the captain of the ill fated vessel. On the morrow he would inquire concerning the wreck of the Sea Nymph and try to find the relatives of James Petrel.

After that Jarvis tumbled into bed and went to sleep, wondering why he of all men had been chosen to bring to light the long buried box. He dreamed about the curly headed baby, whose charming smile pursued him through his dreams.

"Yes," said the oldest cottager when Jarvis guardedly made inquiries concerning wrecks on the coast. "It was as far back as 1885 that the Sea Nymph went ashore off here. She got on the shoals, but the seas were riding so high she didn't stick. Back she went, and they simply swallowed her up, so the story goes. Bits of cargo floated ashore long afterward—one or two bodies of seamen. That was all. Divers never found trace of her. It was the worst storm ever known on the coast. After that they built the breakwater and the lighthouse. At that time there was an old fisherman's hut on the spot where your cottage now stands. Tradition has it that the old man lured the steamer to her ruin. If he did it was small profit to him, for the storm washed his hut into the sea, and he went with it. The man who owns your cottage once found a copper canister filled with choice smoking tobacco buried in the sand near by. It pleased him to resurrect it and smoke it. He quit using it after awhile because, he claimed, it gave him the nightmare—said the Sea Nymph went ashore every night in his dreams. If there's any of it left you better not smoke it," added the oldest cottager whimsically.

"It's all gone," replied Jarvis, with a cryptic smile.

And this is the treasure that Jarvis found. When he had traced the widow of the luckless Captain Petrel he found her prosperously married to one of the ship's owners, while the curly headed baby with the charming smile had grown to be the loveliest girl Jarvis had ever met. As a consequence Doris Petrel became the artist's wife.

In addition, the memory of the vision that had come to him that night clung so persistently in his mind that he transferred the stormy scene to canvas with every detail of that wild night of thunder and lightning, hurricane winds and mammoth waves, the ghostlike vessel shuddering to her watery grave, the package on the beach half obliterated by the sand. Next to Doris herself, this picture proved to be Jarvis' treasure, for it made his fortune.

From His Pa's Side.

"She doesn't know where the baby gets his bad temper."

"That's strange. Most young mothers can place that sort of responsibility in a jiffy."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE ROYAL PELT.

Ermine More Fashionable Than Ever This Winter.

NEW ERMINE SET.

In line with the popularity of black and white effects this season that royal pelt, ermine, has come into more than usual favor from the fashionable world. It not only adorns hats, trims evening gowns and street suits, but makes the stunningest of the new small piece sets. The illustration gives a good impression of how attractive is the new makeup in collar and muff sets of ermine.

The belted feature of this pointed stole is particularly smart, as is also the turned down collar with its broad tie of silk.

The Separate Waist.

Persian effects in separate waists are one of the latest comers in the dress world, and they are certainly attractive when soft colorings are selected.

The natty blouse in the cut is of pale though rich Persian colorings carried out in chiffon, which material is used over a foundation of navy blue satin. The folds and simulated buttonholes and covered buttons are of the blue satin. Such a waist worn with a dark blue cloth costume is exceedingly good taste.

IN PERSIAN CHIFFON AND SATIN.

Doesn't Know Her Age.

There is a glaring phase of unfairness in the position of the two sexes, despite all our struggles for the suffrage. A woman still dreads to tell her age, no matter how youthful she may look, while as long as a man looks youthful he is generally willing to admit and even to boast of how many milestones he has passed. There is at least one father who understood this problem in time and who gave his daughter a fair chance in life by never letting her know how old she was. He realized at her birth that a time would come when she would not want to tell her age, and he spared her the humiliation of having to prevaricate, so she was never told either her age or the place where she was born, and there were no birth records preserved in the family.

PRIMITIVE PHYSIC.

John Wesley as a Physician and Some of His Remedies.

It is not generally known that John Wesley in one of his brief intervals of leisure published a sort of medical vade mecum called not inappropriately "Primitive Physic." It was first published in 1747, and it ran into at least twenty-four editions. The author was greatly surprised there was so swift and large a demand for it. In the later editions he was able to add the word "Tried" to certain remedies the virtues of which he had meanwhile found opportunities of testing. After five years' careful trial and notwithstanding the objections of the learned he recommends for the ague "to go into the cold bath just before the cold fit," but omits to say how to time the coming of the fit. To prevent apoplexy use the cold bath and drink only water. If this proves useless and a fit should declare itself you have only to "put a handful of salt with a pint of cold water and if possible pour it down the throat of the patient." To cure asthma "take a pint of cold water every morning, washing the head therein immediately after." Wesley gives four ways of curing old age—"take tar water morning and evening" or "a decoction of nettles" or "be electrified daily" or "chew cinnamon daily and swallow your saliva." The two great panaceas in the Wesleyan doctrine are the use of cold water and the use of electricity, and at the end of the book are columns of every sort of disease which may be overcome by these simple expedients.—St. James' Gazette.

WANTED A JOB.

Therefore He Did His Best to Please the Manager.

A certain playwright relates how a manager was much annoyed by the persistent applications for a "job" made by a peculiarly seedy individual. Time and again the manager had referred this person to his stage manager. "See Blank," he would say, interrupting the man's attempts to set forth his qualifications.

At last the applicant did succeed in gaining audience of Blank, the stage manager, who was in the theater for the time "sizing up" candidates for the chorus.

There were, of course, a number ahead of him, but this fact did not prevent the seedy man from interrupting the stage manager between songs with requests for a job.

Exasperated, the stage manager at length turned to the pianist and ordered him to play an accompaniment for the stranger. With considerable hesitation the seedy person raised what voice he had in song. The result was bad as bad could be.

The manager suddenly commanded him to desist.

"What do you mean by this tomfoolery?" he demanded, disgusted. "You certainly have confounded impudence to ask me for a job!"

"Look here!" said the stranger, angry in turn. "I don't claim to be able to sing. In fact, I don't want to sing. I'm a stage carpenter. I only sang to please you because you insisted on it!"—Pearson's Weekly.

RECORD MARKET THIS MORNING LARGE QUANTITIES OF FOWL

Talk about your markets, this morning had them all beaten. The people were simply falling over themselves so crowded was the interior of the hall. The crush around the exits reminded you of the crowd coming from the Belmont's minstrel show last evening.

This morning's offering of turkeys was superior to any seen on a local market for a long time. Turkeys, geese and chickens were everywhere at all prices. You could not get a decent turkey under two dollars, while the highest price asked, as far as is known, was four dollars. Think of that.

Despite the extraordinary prices great numbers were eagerly bought up and very few people left the building without a fowl of some sort.

Eggs have, true to predictions, risen and are now selling at thirty-eight cents. Butter is still twenty-five cents. Hay was not so plentiful this morning nor wood.

The following were some of the prices asked to-day;

Potatoes—80 cents.
Beef—8 to 9 cents.
Pork—12 to 13 cents.
Turkeys—$2 to $4.
Geese—$1.50 $2.
Chickens—40 to 80 cents, a pair.
Apples—$4.50 to $5.
Hay—$14 dollars a load.
Wood—$5 a cord.
Butter—25 cents.
Eggs—38 cents.

MILLBROOK HOTELMAN FINED

George Page, proprietor of the Hotel at the Millbrook station, appeared in court this morning charged with unlawfully keeping lager for sale. Mr. Morrison, Assistant Provincial Inspector, visited Millbrook and found in Page's hotel about thirty gallons of cider, rather strong, and two cases of lager.

Mr. Page stated that he thought he was privileged to sell the cider, and he was not aware that there was any lager in the house. He ordered four cases of lagarene and these were in his cellar. When Mr. Morrison searched the premises these were found and two of the cases contained lager. He had the invoice for four cases of lagarene and the mistake must have been made in the shipment. He had however, sold none of the lager, and in fact was not aware that it was on the premises until informed by Mr. Morrison.

Police Magistrate White said in view of the statements of Mr. Page he would make the penalty as light as possible. He would impose the minimum fine of $20 and $4.80 costs, and in default, imprisonment in jail for thirty days. The money was paid.

As the information was laid by Mr. Morrison the fine goes to the Government.

A CLEAR EXPLANATION OF A POINT THAT IS DISPUTED

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir:— I saw a piece in the Peterborough paper of Thos. Trenum reg. of Indian or Indians from Hagersville trapping in season and out of season whole year round.

I was awful glad about what our friend Mr. Trennum said that an Indian can fish the whole year round, and not fish only but anything he needs on the reserve and on any portion of the provincial territory as to which their claim have not been surrendered yet, or at least the government has not paid off the Indians their claim. Their claim is from the line called the 45th degree. It runs from east to west along.

And a line run from Hastings to Ottawa River.

And another line that starts from Whitby and on to Ottawa river and at that—we then can hunt and kill at any time inside of this unsurrendered land that I am speaking of.

Yours etc.,
MISH-NAH-BA.

MAKES REPLY TO MR. BURNHAM

To the Editor of the Review,

Dear Sir,—Just a word in reference to British, Canadian and United States democracy. I maintain that in none of these countries does the constitution admit the absolute sovereignty of the people, which in itself, is political atheism. Mr. Burnham has evidently not grasped what "the sovereignty of the people" means. In the sense condemned by the Pope it means the people claiming to rule independently of God or Eternal Justice. This principle all Christians must condemn as well as the Pope, because it makes the people gods. They who maintain the sovereignty of the people in this sense are, therefore, atheists in principle, as for example, Red Republicans and Anarchists. Now, this is plain and simple reasoning. The democracies of Great Britain, Canada, United States, etc, do not maintain this, and on this question, therefore, agree perfectly with the teaching of the Catholic Church. The constitutions of these countries provide certain safeguards, which protect their citizens against mob violence, and are, therefore, in harmony with Catholic teachings and principles. In fact the great principles of liberty underlying the British constitution were adopted by the British people many centuries ago, and were so firmly fixed that private judgment so far has been unable permanently to dislodge them. The United States, Canada, etc. are oll modelled after Great Britain. We, therefore, love these countries, because they protect the liberties of the people. The Catholic Church is free in them. Mr. Burnham is a lawyer, but seems as ignorant of the constitution of these countries as he is of the teachings of the Catholic Church.

I refuse to argue further with Mr Burnham, because, in the first place, he does not grasp the nature of the subject he is discussing. He reminds me of a man I met the other day day in a certain place, who was convinced his backbone was made of wood. No possible reasonings could change his opinions. Another reason is that I have found from personal experience that he makes statements which he must know are not true. I take for example my speech at the opening of the new Collegiate Institute. Mr. Burnham was sitting in one of the front seats, and in his newspaper report next day he made positively false assertions, putting in my mouth words I did not say. Since then I have no confidence whatever in Mr Burnham's veracity.

PETERBORO' MAN'S VIEWS ARE STRICTLY ORTHODOX

To the Editor of the Witness.

Sir,—We are told by the "new lights," these modern apostles, the so-called higher critics, that since the uncovering of the monuments, even our faith in the Word of God as a divine revelation will have to be restated. Allow me to give my readers a little of this restated faith as found written in Prof. Geo. Jackson's book, "Studies in the Old Testament," which institution Prof. Jackson is teacher of the English Bible. On p. 97, speaking on the early chapters of Genesis, he says; "It is indeed hardly less than cruel to allow young men and women to grow up in the belief that these chapters are literal history, and afterwards to send them to a university." On p. 39 he continues; "It has somehow to be made plain that these chapters are not science, and are not history." On p. 102 he adds; "They contain no account'—such is the sober summary of Dr. Driver's reverent pen—"of the real beginnings either of the earth itself or of man and human civilization upon it. . . . If, for example, we read in any other book that a serpent talked with a woman in a garden, that in that same garden God Himself walked in the cool of the day, that the sons of God took unto them wives of the daughters of men, and that as a result the earth was peopled with a race of giants—if, I say, we read things like these in any other book, we should never dream of taking them as the sober record of actual facts. We should say at once, "This is no history; this is myth, legend, allegory."

On page 108 one would really think one was reading Tom Paine or Robt. Ingersoll. He says; "What is to be said of the remarkable longevity which these early narrations attribute to the patriarchs? Did Methuselah really live to be nine hundred and sixty-nine? Had Noah a son born to him when he was five hundred years old? It is, to say the least, extremely difficult to take such statements seriously."

Now our new apostle goes on to write about the fall of man. Hear him, on page 110; "On the story of the fall it is unnecessary to dwell, because even the most thorough-paced literalist hesitates to treat its picturesque details as SOBER PROSE' (the capitals are mine). Continuing, on page 111 he says; "If we admit, on probably we must, that of the origin of sin we KNOW NOTHING' (capitals mine), 'that does not mean that we are any less certain of the fact . . . that all men are sinners in need of the mercy of God.'

The first apostles of Jesus Christ wrote as though they knew something of the fall of man and the origin of sin. Their teaching, as every Bible reader knows, accorded exactly with the records found in these early chapters of Genesis. Between the first apostles of the Lamb, and these modern apostles so-called, there is a great gulf fixed. Hear how this critical analyst cuts out the books of Daniel and Esther.

On page 74 he writes; "Again, as was mentioned in the last lecture, it seems probable that the books of Daniel and Esther belong to the realm of RELIGIOUS ROMANCE (capitals mine), or to the borderland of romance and history, than to history proper." Now, I have given my readers only a little of the restated faith which these modern apostles of the new revelation would have us accept. Now, I want my readers to note particularly how much faith Prof Jackson has in this modern critical analysis of God's Word. He has beat an inglorious retreat and had not enough soldierly skill to cover his retreat. On page 22 we read—listen. "Over many of the details of the details of the critical analysis, there is, OF COURSE, MUCH UNCERTAINTY. In the very nature of the case, it MUST probably ALWAYS BE SO." (capitals are mine.) Thoughtful persons have long thought that the lump sum conclusions, the so-called "assured results of these critical analysts of Holy Writ, looked conspicuously large. In the name of God and in the name of common sense, let me ask how much faith can be put in these builders of the new faith when they admit that UNCERTAINTY must always be written over their findings. A costly building is to be erected, the contract is let. The builder, before turning a sod, demands from the architect specified details of every part of his building. The architect refuses saying; "Mr. Builder, over many of the details of this plan there is, of course, MUCH UNCERTAINTY, in the very nature of the case it must probably always be so. You will therefore please accept the plan as a whole, and proceed with the work. We all know what the contractor would say. Hear him; "Mr Architect, I want you to know that there will not be a sod turned nor sound of a hammer or saw heard on this building until you furnish certified details of every part of this plan."

Prof. Jackson is merely a reporter passing around his uncertainties of others. On page 63 he says; "I speak ENTIRELY without first-hand knowledge." Again, on page 82, he says; "Here again I can but report the findings of others.' Nothing original; absolutely nothing. Nothing certain; nothing. And yet these teachers ask us to throw away the sure and certain word of the living God for their new anti-Christian faith. Reader, are you going to throw away your common sense, to say nothing about your faith, and accept this new revelation? Are you? This teaching is falsely called Higher Criticism. It comes FROM BELOW. Reject it.

About Zutoo Tablets
"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

THE JOKE WAS ON THE FARMER THIS AFTERNOON

Citizens inclined to feel somewhat sore, at the farmers this morning on account of the high prices asked and who paid a visit to the market hall this afternoon, had their revenge.

Up to a late hour there was sufficient poultry and fowl, still on sale (at reduced prices) to feed a good sized army.

The farmers certainly made a big mistake to-day, in boosting the prices so ridiculously high. The result is that many will either carry their featherless goods back to the farm or dispose of them to merchants, at a price far below that which would have been realized had the prices been placed at a reasonable figure.

PROF. LAW AND REV. J. D. MORROW

Distinguished Preachers Will be Heard at Knox Church To-morrow at Opening Services—Both Divines are Men of Strong Personality and Marked Oratorial Power.

The opening services of Knox church will be continued to-morrow, and the large number who failed to gain admission to the church will yet have an opportunity of participating in the opening services of the new church.

The Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Toronto, will address a special meeting of men at 9 a.m. The committee in charge is looking for a large congregation of men, even at this early hour. Rev Mr. Morrow is not only a noted athlete, but a striking platform man. He has a wonderful story to tell of his dealings with men. An orchestra and quartette will assist in the service.

Rev. Mr. Law, of Knox College, Toronto, will conduct the morning and evening services. Prof. Law recently was called from a charge in Scotland become Professor of New Testament in Knox College, on his reputation as a scholar, an author and preacher

He has been in great demand since coming to Toronto, and congregations would like to take him away from his college work to the pulpit. This is his first visit to Peterborough and many will desire to hear him.

A special service will be held at 3 p.m., when Rev. J. D. Morrow will address the Sabbath school and friends in the church.

An interesting feature of this service will be the giving in of the blue boxes that the members of the school have been using to hold their offering for the pulpit chairs. If possible the amount of the offering will be announced at the service. Special music by the primary class and a number of others.

$20,000 STOCK FOR LINDSAY

(LINDSAY WARDER)

Those citizens who keep a strict tab on municipal affairs in connection with the town of Lindsay, will remember that some twelve years ago the town secured a mortgage on the Burleigh Falls power valued at $15,000. This was secured when Mr. Culverwell was connected with the above company. Recently the Burleigh Falls Power Company was purchased by the Central Power Company, which company now seek to secure the privilege of entering the town of Lindsay, to erect their poles and market their power in Lindsay.

It appears that Mayor Begg recently endeavored to get something out of the mortgage and with this in view communicated with Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K. C., the result being that the Central Ontario Power Company agreed to give the town of Lindsay 20 shares (equal to $22,000) in the above company in lieu of the mortgage.

In a letter to the Mayor Mr. McLaughlin stated that the shares would no doubt in the course of a few years turn out to be valuable and various members of the council at the meeting held last-night expressed their approval of the transaction.

BUYERS FOR TORONTO FIRM PURCHASED MANY TURKEYS

On the market this morning were representatives of the J. A. McLean Produce Company, Toronto, Ont., who bought up turkeys in large quantities for their company. Their object in so doing was to get as many dressed fowl as possible, and during the Christmas week they will sell the same to material advantage for the company to the dealers and storekeepers.

Mr. Fennell, who was the chief buyer, when seen by the Review this morning, reported an excellent business. At twelve o'clock he had purchased an immense number of all kinds of fowl, which he had piled up in one corner of the market hall.

As it was well advertised around the rural sections that the above mentioned purchasers would be in the market, the farmers naturally expected to make a good thing out of it, and consequently asked prices for their produce at away above what they ordinarily would have done. However, the standard price of eighteen cents a pound was reached, and at that price the majority of the fowl was purchased. When seen by the Review Mr. Fennell was unable to state just how many they had bought. The buying, however, was very profitable for the Produce Company and the farmers also.

FINELY EQUIPPED AUTO SALES STORE

Has Been Opened at 309 George Street--Agency for Nordheimer Pianos Also

Alderman Duffus, having withdrawn from the firm of Drummond and Duffus, has opened up a new business at 309 George street, just south of Charlotte street, in the new store recently built by Mr. W. J. Taylor. The store is very attractively finished and is steam heated throughout and completely equipped with electric light fixtures—the creditable work of Messrs. Alexander & Miller

In these premises Mr. Duffus will continue to carry on the sale of Russell and Ford motor cars and accessories which will always be kept in stock.

He has in stock at the present time a beautiful Model R, five-passenger touring car, and expects a new 1911 Model T Ford touring car in the near future.

Mr. Duffus has also taken over the agency for the high-class Nordheimer pianos, and indeed in deciding to take up the piano business he is to be congratulated in selecting this high-grade instrument with such an old, well-established and reputable firm behind it as the Nordheimer Piano and Music Company, Toronto

Until such time as the development of his business demands more room, Mr. Duffus has allotted to Mr. D. C. Lamont sufficient space to carry a stock of National stoves, ranges and kitchen cabinets, manufactured by the National Manufacturing Co., of Ottawa, and owing to the superiority of these goods, Mr. Lamont reports a large business being done since opening up three weeks ago

A WEEK IN JAIL

Alfred Meakins Sentenced By Judge Huycke—Stole a Quantity of Gin

Alfred Meakins, committed for trial, by Magistrate Dumble, on the charge of breaking into the premises of Alex. Elliott and stealing therefrom a quantity of gin appeared before his Honor Judge Huycke, yesterday afternoon, at the County Court, and at the conclusion of the hearing, was sentenced to serve one week in jail.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for Meakins.

The particulars of the theft are that Meakins and another youth, gained an entrance into the storeroom of Alex. Elliott's retail premises, through a window, and took the gin.

Meakins' companion knew how to get into the storeroom and according to his statements, Meakins asked, "if he knew where they could go and steal something."

Both took some of the gin, and later treated a number of others.

The companion of Meakins was given suspended sentence at the hearing before Magistrate Dumble.

Russell and Ford
A Great Pair to Fill the Bill

For the customer who wishes a large TOURING CAR I recommend the RUSSELL, because it is exceptionally roomy, of very fine appearance, with large wheels and long wheeled base. It also has fore doors, Mr. Russell being the first in Canada to introduce this feature. The RUSSELL is also installed with a Knight motor. It is Canadian made and this feature should appeal to all loyal Canadians. This car is on exhibition at 309 George Street.

For the customer who wishes a neat, stylish moderate priced Touring Car, in which he can combine business with pleasure, I strongly recommend THE FORD MODEL T, at $975.00, full equipment. This car is practically fully explained by the word "ECONOMY"—this on account of its small initial cost and the exceptionally small cost of maintenance, it being the lightest weight five-passenger touring car manufactured. This light weight is secured by simplified construction, elimation of superfluous parts and the use of the highest grade of material. Quality, not quantity, is the true measure of strength. The FORD CAR is an all Vanadium Steel Car. That is one reason it is not only the lightest car made, but the strongest, and will actually stand harder service. There has not been a pound of unnecessary weight sacrificed in THE FORD, it weighs plenty for every need, but there isn't any dead weight.

[illegible] relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

JOHNSON'S MUCH ABUSED HEAD

Champion's Dome of Thought Has Been Foil for Clubs, Bottles, Hatpins and Pavements

As the days go by we cease to wonder why Jack Johnson is having trouble with his head. The only wonder is that he has a head at all. A couple of days ago he was tossed out through the stage door of a Chicago playhouse by a bunch of husky stage hands. In San Francisco, a month before the big fight, he tried to run away from two bike cops after cutting out seventy miles an hour in the Golden Gate Park. The bike cops chased him into his room at the Seal Rock house and when he locked the door, kicked it down and went in after him. One of them dropped the butt of a six shooter gently on Jack's dome of thought when he tried to resist arrest.

On another occasion before that a cook at Johnson's training quarters over in Indiana was displeased with Jack's absent mindedness in paying wages and hit him on the top of his anatomy with a chair. A young lady who thought him somewhat familiar expressed her annoyance with a hatpin. It struck the solid ivory. In Frisco a bartender tapped Jack on the head with a full bottle of rye, just because he didn't see why an African should wear a silk hat. A Bronx policeman mailed him for speeding and ended Johnson's attempt to explain matters by persuasively bouncing his club from the dented surface of Jack's skull.

Several times Johnson has been informed that he wasn't welcome at hotels where the elite eat frogs' legs and drink wines of ancient vintage. Sometimes the information has been carried by a couple of callous souled and horny handed porters. Anon, the champion has been bumped from his automobile, landing on his upper works. These are only a few of the known incidents in Johnson's stormy career. No doubt he has had other experiences that have not reached the public.

SALARIES ARE HIGH

Montreal, Dec. 16.—Ernie Johnston will get that two hundred dollar bonus standing over from last year for the non-payment of which he took action against P. J. Doran, the then owner of the Wanderer Hockey Club, after all, without going to the courts for it. It has leaked out that in the dickering for salaries for this year's Wanderer team, Johnston was offered a thousand dollars for the season. A thousand didn't appeal to Ernie just at first, but eventually when it was agreed that the two hundred dollar bonus still outstanding from last season should be thrown in, he agreed to play. The highest paid player on the Montreal team is going to be "Newsy" Lalonde. "Newsy's" contract with the Canadiens calls for $1,800.

HOLMER DEVELOPS HIS BODY TOO

"I don't do all my running with my legs—I do a lot of it with my body and arms," said Hans Holmer, the "pro" Marathoner, as he came in from a long run over the roads yesterday.

"I train my legs by doing a lot of running. But the stronger the upper part of my body is the better I can travel. Every hard swing of my arms throws my entire body ahead. That's half the reason why I've been improving right along," said Holmer.

There is not a single "pro" runner in the country who can compete with Holmer when it comes to muscular development of the body. Hans says that each day he devotes at least an hour's time to exercises that build up his body. He has clean cut muscles, and the development about the shoulders is unusually good.

Holmer says that a runner who has a weak upper body cannot stand the strain of swinging his arms hard enough to help him through a long race.

HOCKEY DOINGS

The Intermediates turned out, as called for last-night, and another good practice was the result. The boys are showing improvement, their work is being watched, nightly by a large number of fans.

The schedule of practices for Intermediate and Junior players is as follows: Intermediates — Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Juniors — Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Each practice will be held between the hours of seven and eight o'clock.

The executive of the Peterborough hockey club will meet this evening at the Examiner office after the practice of the intermediate team.

The representatives of the four clubs in the intermediate series will get together at Trenton Tuesday next.

THE WRESTLERS

The beefy sports of Europe are coming in to these shores, and soon their loud ki-yoodles will fill all out of doors. All through the long sad winter they'll bind us with a spell, and make the sporting writers roll up their sleeves and yell. With defi and with challenge they'll fill the public paints, they'll dish up threats erosive and most bloodthirsty hints. They'll thunder and they'll chortle, they'll bellow and declaim, and they may do it safely, for Gotch has quit the game. O Gotch! The cornfield called him, and so he quit the mat, to feed his Poland Chinas and watch them pile on fat; and while he gathers breadfruit and plants the mellow spud, a lot of foreign "lions" are clamoring for blood. A lot of brawny terrors are telling that they'll do to this or t'other terror when he comes into view, and so they nail the roubles and burnish up their fame, and nothing can prevent them, for Gotch has quit the the game. And when the foreign wrestlers become to gr at a bore, it may be Gotch will offer to chase them from this shore. Forgetting James J. Jeffries and all that Reno dope, the husky Humboldt farmer will come forth as a hope—but let us draw a curtain upon this mournful theme; the beefy sports of Europe are coming in a stream. The rabbits roar like lions and oh, it seems a shame, to earnest, soulful people, that Gotch has quit the game!

LOWER OTTAWA CIRCUIT

Hawkesbury and Alexandria have resigned from Lower Ottawa Valley League. That circuit will consist this season of Vankleek Hill, Rockland, Buckingham and Hull clubs, playing in one section with a double schedule of matches.

December Rod and Gun

A Christmassy flavor with an abundance of light reading, marks the December number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont. Included are some notable articles, Mr. Bonnycastle Dale telling of the contrasts to be found at this season on the Pacific Coast, as compared with other portions of Canada; while the delights of a canoe trip in New Brunswick with the exhilarating experiences of days of rapid water are well described by Mr. H. B. Bustin. Then there are fishing stories recalling the pleasures of rod and line, Mrs. Charlotte C. Talcott giving voices to the feelings of many who are inevitably led to engage in the proper season in a recreation that has filled some of the happiest hours of their lives. Big game hunters are not forgotten, and a paper by Dr. Edward Breck on European and American methods is calculated to give all interested in game problems in this country much food for though. Crisp, bright verses, with an Old Time story and many other things complete a number that for variety and interest is the equal of any that have ever gone before and well sustains the reputation which the Magazine has achieved.

The will of George L. Fox divided $1,500,000 among Brooklyn charities servants and friends of the testator.

Shawmut, 2:26, died recently at Corning Farm, Albany, aged 33 years. Longevity seems a characteristic of his family, both his sire and dam lived to the ripe old age of 34.

The sensation of the Phoenix, Ariz., meeting was the California trotting mare, Helen Stiles, 2:09¼, by Sidney Dillon, that won the Copper stake and worked right at 2:06.

Joan, fourth, 2:04¾, Peter Dorsey, 2:07¾, and Grace, third, 2:06, will be wintered at Cleveland. Their owner, Captain Shew, of Pittsburg, tried to buy J. Malcolm Forbes, third, 2:09¼.

The list of pacing stallions that have beaten two minutes now numbers five, and is: Dan Patch, 1:55¼; Minor Heir, 1:58½; Copa de Oro, 1:59; Audubon Boy, 1:59¼, and Star Patchen, 1:59¼.

The famous brood-mare, Delorre, 2:09¼, was bought at a recent sale by Senator Bailey for $1,600; while Ecstatic, 2:01¾, world's champion pacing mare, went to Walnut Hall Farm for $8,000.

Mascal, a green pacing mare by Nervolo, 2:04¼, worked a mile recently at Readville, for Millard Drinkwater, in 2:09½. She is considered a bright prospect for the slow class in 1911.

The Native, 2:17½, full brother to Native Belle, third, 2:06½, and Vanko, 2:17¼, will in all probability be raced the coming season. He has been given light training recently, and showed a mile in 2:12.

Walnut Grove, a likely 4-year-old pacer, by Constantine, 2:12½, now has a record of 2:09¼ as a result of his recent victory at Minneapolis, Kan. He is considered to be a good candidate for the 2:10 class events another season.

The Readville track has been sold again, this time to a syndicate headed by W. H. Minton of Boston and A. J. Welch of Hartford. The property will be completely rearranged and the new management will hold an annual agricultural fair. A new half-mile track will be built in the innerfield.

Just an even dozen pacing mares have records better than 2:04, by name: Dariel, 2:00¼; Lady Maud C., 2:00½; The Broncho, 2:00¾; Citation, 2:01¾; Ecstatic, 2:01¾; Darkey Hal, 2:02¼; Mona Wilkes, 2:03¼; Cherry Lass, Fanny Dillard, Hal Raven and Maud Keswick, all marked 2:03¾.

Dr. Vincent of the University of Chicago, was chosen president of the University of Minnesota.

WHO PAYS THE DUTY?——
You or our foreign competitor

You pay. About that there is no room for doubt.

And it's more than likely you believe in the necessity of the tariff.

But—of what earthly good is it if you pay the duty?

The foreigner laughs at duties imposed by our government as long as you are willing to cash up. Take beer, for instance.

"Salvador"

The Famous National Drink

is the purest and best beer brewed on this continent.

The formula and entire process of brewing "Salvador" is a secret and absolutely controlled, on this side of the Atlantic, by Reinhardts' of Toronto.

Beer, almost as good as "Salvador," is brewed by the big American brewers and sold in the States at exactly the same price as "Salvador" in Canada.

But—when you order an American beer in Canada there's 34% extra to pay—the duty—plus extra freight charges.

Is it rational to pay that duty—when you can get a better beer at the normal price? "Salvador" beer is rich in flavor, sparkling and charged with invigorating properties.

My Own Son Was A Martyr to Dyspepsia

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured Him

ALEX. LARUE

INKERMAN, ONT., SEPT. 23, 1910.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the best remedy I keep for sale. I am in the General Store business, at the above address, and have been a resident of Inkerman for thirty-seven years, and since I started this store, (four years ago) I have found your remedy the most satisfactory one I have sold. Many of my customers having used them with the most beneficial results, and I can truthfully say that I know of two particular cases, among my patrons, that have been completely cured of Dyspepsia. They had previously been treated by physicians without being cured, but I advised them to try "Fruit-a-tives", and since taking that remedy their troubles have vanished.

My own son was a martyr to the same complaint, or Dyspepsia, and after a short course of Fruit-a-tives", he is enjoying the best of health. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives", on every possible occasion, and would say that if every general store keeper, who stocks medicines, would keep "Fruit-a-tives" prominently displayed, he would increase his business many fold.

You have my authority to publish this letter along with my photo, if you think it would aid the sale of "Fruit-a-tives". (Signed) ALEX. LARUE.

The sales of "Fruit-a-tives" are increasing by leaps and bounds. Thousands of people, who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are telling the good news to thousands of others, and these in turn are recommending it to still others. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit. 50c a box—6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or sent post paid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

LATE NEWS FROM HAVELOCK

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Dec. 16.—The Cordova gold mines, which have been purchased by Mr. P. Kirkegoard, of Delera, and Dr. W. G. Mackeckine and Mr. William Hughes, of Marmora, will resume mining operations at that mine in the spring

There have been, during the six years that the mine has been idle, many reports that the mine had been sold, and the hearts of the property owners in that place have been gladdened only to find the reports merely dreams. But now the expected has arrived and the new owners will resume mining operations in the spring and they expect the mine to yield them a handsome profit. The price paid for the mine is said to have been $30,000

Cordova, in its former busy days, was a prosperous and lively little village, and if the capitalists who had their money invested had shown a little [illegible] it would never have been shut down, and there is a good percentage of gold in the rock on the property. But the owners did not figure on the large amount it costs to install the machinery, and when, after a couple of years' operations, there was no dividend returned, they decided to close it down.

The power to run the machinery was obtained at High Falls on Deer River, about two miles from Cordova. There were about two hundred men employed at the mine, and the number was steadily on the increase. The employees began to buy lots and build houses for themselves, and thus there are a large number of men who own houses and land in Cordova which they have not been able to sell, as there has been no demand for property.

The village was well lighted with electricity, many of the houses were supplied with waterworks, and there was a church, school, drug store, several grocery stores, blacksmith shop, etc.

This will be good news indeed to the residents of both Havelock and Cordova.

King of Missabotti.

Toby, an old and decrepit aboriginal, said to be 125 years of age, recently died in the blacks' camp at Bowraville, N.S.W. The deceased was a very old man. To the oldest inhabitants of the Nambucca River he has always been regarded as exceptionally ancient. When the sixties were young, Mr. W. F. Sullivan, who claims to be the first white settler in the district, selected an area of land in Bowraville. Toby was then worn with age, and was fully 70 or 80 years old. A quarter of a century ago the gentleman mentioned presented Toby with a brass plate, on which was engraved, "Toby, King of Missabotti," and he wore that plate continuously until the day of his death. At the time of the presentation the deceased was the head man amongst the local blacks, and henceforth he was known as the "King of Missabotti." Local rumor weaves quite a tale of romance about the old man.

THE CRIMSON BALLOT.

(By Frank A. Marshall.)

One day in a crowded court-room
A sentence of death was said,
In the hush of the awful stillness:
"To be hanged by the neck until dead."
And a mother's heart was broken
As she faltered a murmered name,
And a father's face was furrowed
With the tears of grief and shame.

It was only one of the dramas
That are acted every day.
And the judge on the bench has asked him
What the prisoner had to say.
"The jury has said I am guilty,"
Was the low, resigned reply:
"The law has summoned the hangman
And said that I must die.

"But before the God in heaven
I did not kill my friend,
And to the looming scaffold
A guiltless man you send;
The dramshop did this murder.
And the drink that fired my brain,
That made me do its bidding,
And held me in its chain.

"But not upon the dramshop,
Nor brewery, nor still,
Nor on the high officials,
Who watch them steal and kill;
But on your skirts, your honor,
And every man's who stood
To legalise the gin-mill,
Is stamped the brand of blood."

His voice rang like a bugle,
No other sound was heard,
While something kin to terror
In all who listened stirred.
And all the court-room cowered
Beneath the last of truth;
The boy seemed judge and jury
And they the sentenced youth.

"For back of the law's officials
Is the law that spells my fate;
And back of the law are the people,
And the people are the state.
My hand held the murderous weapon,
And the blood on its blade they saw,
But back of the deed was the dramshop,
And back of the dramshop the law,

"And whosoever voted
To license this evil ties
The shameful noose of the hangman
'Round the neck of the man who dies.

And on his hands are the blood-drops
And on his brow a sign
That he is the man who sheddeth
My dead friend's blood and mine."
Then back to the cell they led him,
And there on the trap he'll stand;
And the bloody farce will be acted
Again and again in the land,
And every reddened gibbet
Shall be for a nation's blame;
For every ballot in crimson
That is cast for a nation's shame
—"Patriot Phalanx."

DRINK—A DESTRUCTIVE EVIL AND A CURSE.

The traffic is largely responsible for murder, suicide, immorality and petty crimes; it is poisoning the bodies of the children before they are born; it sends thousands to the grave before they have learned to lisp; it gives to tens of thousands who have a shattered constitution and weakened will; it predisposes them to every form of illness; it is destroying the capacity for motherhood, and weakening the moral instinct of the mother. It wastes all this human life, and it involves an incalculable loss of social wealth through physical efficiency, mental incapacity, and loss of self-respecting ambition. It wastes the value of loss time and expense through sickness, and the maintenance of prisons, police courts homes and asylums due to drink. Drink is, in fact, one of the most destructive evils, destroying mind and body, which curses the human race.—Philip Snowdon, M.P., in "Socialism and the Drink Question."

WHICH IS HEATHEN?

At an important gathering in New York City, the editor of a Chinese newspaper in San Francisco made an eloquent address in which he protested against our un-American exclusion of his countrymen from rights and privileges which other nationalities enjoyed within our boundaries. He said: "You have singled out my people from all human creation as unworthy of your hospitality. You let in the Italian, you let in the Hun, the Turk, the Jew, the underworld of Europe and Asia—the and the Russian, you let in the unidle, the ignorant and criminal, and you shut out the peaceable Chinese, because you say, we are heathen and smoke opium. You say the truth we are heathen and we do smoke opium; but you are Christian and you drink whisky. And if I were a woman I would rather my husband smoke opium every time than drink your Christian whisky. Opium puts him asleep; opium makes him harmless like a corpse; whisky makes him a wild beast; whisky wakes up the devil and makes him a brute. 'Melican man comes home full whisky — kicks wife; Chinaman comes home full opium—wife kick him; You be Christian we be heathen. With my knowledge of your American saloon, if I were to return to my country, and the issue were a choice between the opium den of my heathen China and the saloon of your Christian America, I would choose for my people opium rather than whisky." — Selected.

Not gold, but only men, can make
A people great and strong;
Men, who for truth and honour's sake,
Stand fast and suffer long.
Brave men who work while other's sleep,
Who dare while others fly—
They found a nation's pillars deep
And lift them to the sky.
—RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

BLACKLISTER TO APPEAR

A blacklister, who yesterday broke the rules pertaining to hotel bars, will appear before Magistrate Dumble at the police court Monday morning. He has been out of the city for a long time, and asked for liquor at a hotel, where he was not known by the bartenders.

The proprietor, who knew the 'lister, arrived on the scene in the nick of time.

Proceeds May Amount to $3000

The proceeds of the St. Joseph's bazaar have not yet been ascertain but it is estimated by those in charge that they will amount to a sum in the neighborhood of $3,000. The returns are not yet all in, but a full account will appear on Monday. The committee also wish to thank the merchants who so kindly contributed goods to the bazaar.

GROTESQUE NAMES.

Burdens That Innocent English Children Had to Bear.

In England, as in other countries, thousands of people go through life cherishing a grudge against their parents for giving them absurd or incongruous names. It was most natural that a demure and pretty girl in a north suburb should feel resentful when she had to answer to the name of Busybody, given in honor of the winner of a race fifteen years before. Among the names registered at Somerset House are Airs and Graces and Nun Nicer, which were innocently borne by two little girls who found them most embarrassing in after years.

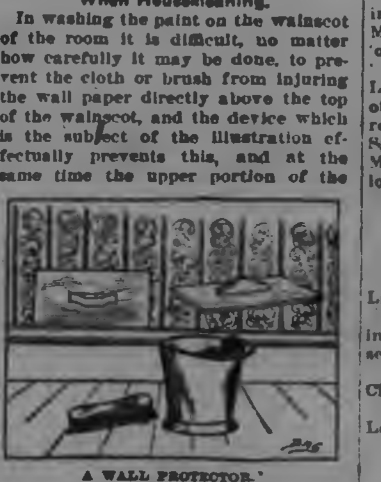
The appalling name of Wellington Wolseley Roberts was borne by a young man who, in disposition and appearance, was anything but militant, and as little likely to win fame on the battlefield as his predecessors Arthur Wellesley Wellington Waterloo Cox and Napoleon the Great Eagar.

However, even these names, inappropriate as they may be, are to be preferred to Roger the Ass, Anna (sic) Domini Davies and Boadicea Basher.

To parents of large families the advent of another child is not always welcome, but it is scarcely kind to make the unexpected child bear a token of disapproval. It must be rather terrible to go through life, for example, as Not Wanted James, What Another, Only Fancy William Brown, or even as Last of 'Em Harper, or Still Another Hewitt. And yet these are all names which the foolish caprice of British parents has imposed on innocent children.—Chicago Record-Herald.

When Housecleaning.

In washing the paint on the wainscot of the room it is difficult, no matter how carefully it may be done, to prevent the cloth or brush from injuring the wall paper directly above the top of the wainscot, and the device which is the subject of the illustration effectually prevents this, and at the same time the upper portion of the wainscot may be thoroughly cleaned without fear of soiling the paper in any way.



A WALL PROTECTOR.

It merely consists of an oblong piece of thin board, in the center of which a rough wood handle (a small square block of wood will answer the purpose) is attached, by which it may be held in the left hand flat against the wall just at the top of the wainscot, while with the right hand the wainscot may be washed.

PARTIES AT A CRISIS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

Political Critics Recommend Another Conference.

One Man Favors a Representative Body to Handle the Constitutional Question In Britain—Rift In the Unionist Party Is Growing More Serious—Austen Chamberlain Starting on a New Tack.

London, Dec. 19.—In the politics of the United Kingdom an altogether novel crisis has been reached. Though the opposing armies are resting on their arms after a drawn battle, the chiefs in both camps confess anxiety and perplexity.

The situation contains new features as disconcerting as they are unexpected, and moderate men of all factions are awakening to the importance of putting an effective curb upon the extremists. One of the most temperate and independent writers of real influence insists to-day that the entire constitutional issue should be dealt with immediately by a representative body having the confidence of the nation to an extent not enjoyed by the "council of eight," and declares that this is the view of all sensible persons not blinded by the prejudice of birth or the passion of Socialism."

He warningly contends that there must be "large concessions, big sacrifices, in both principle and principal," if the kingdom is to avoid "what it would need, but a few more blunders and a little more obstinacy to expand into a blood red catastrophe."

This opinion carries all the more weight because expressed by a sharp critic of Mr. Balfour, who also is supposed to be in favor of a new conference, with a broader base of authority.

King George is giving the situation more attention than ever and has laid aside temporary work on the coronation program, a matter he intends to keep within personal control. It is asserted that the King will urge Mr. Asquith to make a more comprehensive attempt to reach a compromise as to the scope of the second chamber, before increasing its membership.

In the Unionist ranks the cleavage caused on the eve of the elections by Mr. Balfour's opportunist suggestion about a referendum for tariff reform has been deepened by Austen Chamberlain's defiant "I never would have made it." The son of the author of the policy is speaking for the father, when he repudiates the tactics by which the Tory free traders were brought into line.

Moreover, the younger Chamberlain never omits anything in speech or action that might promote his ambition to lead the Unionist party against free trade and against home rule. He is loud in his demand that the situation created be considered in all its aspect. This seems to forecast civil war in the party.

Austen Chamberlain is moving aggressively in another direction. The defeat of Bonar Law, tariff reformer, in Northwest Manchester, is attributed by the Birmingham man, who has seen a formidable rival in Law, to the latter's admission on the hustings that protection would not benefit the British farmer. Law told a heckler that "Our proposals are for the sake of getting a preference with our colonies, not for protection, and I do not think the farmer would benefit in the least."

Now that free traders delightedly point to the Law statement as proof that only the rich could benefit from fiscal changes of the Chamberlainite type, Austen Chamberlain hastens to point out the "serious falacy," and uses it to explain Law's "wholly unnecessay defeat in a constituency ripe for sound fiscal doctrine."

Chamberlain the younger is laying about him with a two-edged sword, and Unionist discord increases. Extreme tariff reformers admit, however, that Mr. Balfour's suggestion has postponed the realization of their hopes.

Married Beside Dead Brother.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 19.—Miss Leah Updyke was married to Pearn S. McCaa here yesterday in the room in which her brother, Roger Updyke, lay dead. He was electrocuted at a manufacturing plant. The dead man was to have been best man at the wedding. It first it was intended to postpone the ceremony but it was finally decided that they would be following the wishes of the brother if the wedding took place upon the date set. Rev. C. H. Pyke was overcome during the ceremony. The funeral of Roger Updyke was held in the afternoon.

"Roger is with us in spirit," said the bridegroom.

Shot In a Struggle.

New York, Dec. 19.—During a struggle on the Bowery for the possession of a heavy revolver between Policeman Joseph McLaughlin and a young man who gave his name as Frederick Holmyard, and said he was a member of the Winnipeg Y.M.C.A. Holmyard was shot through the head behind the right ear early yesterday, and is in a critical condition.

The policeman was trying to get the gun away from Holmyard, after the latter had fired a shot at the officer for no apparent reason.

Ex-Police Chief Dead.

LARGEST SHIP IN CANADA

The Emperor is 525 Feet in Length—Will be Used as a Freighter

Collingwood, Dec. 19.—The Emperor, the largest steel ship ever built in the British colonies, took the water at Collingwood at three o'clock Saturday afternoon. The traditional bottle of wine was broken across the bow by James Playfair, sr., father of the president of the Inland Steamship Lines, Ltd., to whose order the vessel was built.

The members of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. unanimously agreed that it was the prettiest launching they have ever been responsible for; practically the entire population of the town, together with hundreds from points as far distant as Toronto, witnessed the spectacle, which marks the climax to date of Canadian shipbuilding.

The slide was about 30 feet, ending in drydock No. 2. The gate of the dock had been removed for the hull was 15 feet larger than the dock, although the latter is the largest in Canada. A film of ice an inch thick, which covered the bay, was cracked into fragments for a radius of 200 yards.

A banquet preceded the launching. The mayor, town council, officials of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. and the Inland Lines, representatives of the Northern Navigation Co., C.P.R. upper lakes service, and Canada Atlantic service, and air engineer of the Public Works Department were among the seventy-five present.

SIR GILBERT PARKER

Famous Novelist's Early Days In Canada Are Recalled—How He Found His Vocation

Of the eight Canadians elected in the present British contest, none is better known to the Canadian public than Sir Gilbert Parker, whose novels have made him famous.

Sir Gilbert is now in his 52nd year. He is a native of Camden East, Addington, Ontario, and a former student of the Normal School at Ottawa. After teaching at Frankfort and Seaforth, he etntered the Church of England, and for a time was curate at Trenton. He also held a professorship at the Belleville Institute for the Deaf and Dumb.

SIR GILBERT PARKER

He began his career in journalism as assistant editor of the "Sydney Morning Herald." Subsequently, as a considerable traveller in the South Sea Islands and in the Far East, he found his true vocation as a novelist. It was in that nursery of talent, the "National Observer," that he first attracted attention in the Old Country, with a collection of French-Canadian stories called "Pierre and His People," which was followed by a number of works now long familiar to the novel reader, and all in varying degrees specimens of vigorous literary ability, such as "When Valmont Came to Pontiac," "The Seats of the Mighty," and "The Pomp of the Lavallettes."

His literary work has been carried on chiefly at 20 Carlton House Terrace, London. The spacious drawing-rooms contain many interesting pictures, and signed photographs of Lord Wolseley, and many other famous men, adorn the beautiful walls. One small apartment in fact is given up entirely to a wonderful collection of signed photographs of all sorts of celebrities in the world of art, literature, politics, music, and the stage. Cartoons and drawings also abound, while in the library are other valuable pictures. The house is located in one of the most desirable spots in London, and is on an historical spot. Here at the top of his big house he does his literary work. His own particular sanctum is a charmingly decorated room. A big old oak writing-table, a few selected curios and books everywhere, are features of his workroom.

Gilbert Parker is one of the Conservatives who took a prominent part in the pioneer work of the Chamberlain policy of tariff reform. It was in 1900 that he first entered Parliament, being the only one of a quartette of novelists who succeeded in the attempt—Sir A. Conan Doyle being beaten, while Mr. Anthony Hope Hawkins and Mr. J. M. Barrie retired from the contest. He was knighted in 1902.

BRITISH PRESS ON FARMER' DEPUTATION

London, Dec. 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Referring to the farmers' delegation to Ottawa as an effective answer to sham-imperialism, The Morning Leader says that when the colonies grasp the weight of the burden, which fanatical and commercial imperialists are endeavoring to fasten upon the British poor, they will, in Milner's elegant language, "Spit such policy out of their mouths."

The Morning Post, disregarding Balfour's pledge that colonial corn would be admitted free, argues that for a variety of reasons, Canadian grain growers now prefer the free trade price in the English markets rather than the slightly lower price as a consequence of the duty accompanied by a preference against the foreigner.

The Times says the immediate influence of the farmers on the policy of the Canadian Government will not be great, but it does not desire to diminish the importance of the deputation. It remarks that hitherto the west has played a part in politics which has been smaller than its due. It is certain to throw up leaders of its own stamp, and, as the east produced a new political force in the last few months, namely, Bourassa's Nationalists, between the two it looks as if an entirely new chapter is about to open in Canadian politics.

"It is a pity," the paper says, "they thought it worth while to base this renunciation on a profession of disinterested concern for the poor English consumer, who has a legislature of his own, quite capable of protecting his real interests. It seems to be the force of the bad example at this end. The Lancashire cotton spinners have hardly yet abandoned the miserable pretence of their insistence that India's claim for protection is inspired by anxiety lest the poor Indian peasant should have to pay more for his meagre garment.

"From Cobden onward the free trade creed has been tainted with cant and transparent self-interest, posing as imperial altruism."

The Morning Post draws the conclusion from the episode at Ottawa that national protection, as proposed by Chamberlain's tariff commission, is the strongest lever for ultimately removing tariff barriers within the Empire.

The Standard says: Only by maintaining her present system in broad outline, can Canada ever aspire to become a great manufacturing as well as agricultural nation. In urging reciprocity with the United States the farmers are ignoring some of the leading facts of Canadian development.

Deal a Deadly Blow.

London, Dec. 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The News say the Canadian farmers, in whose name a vast crop of legends has been sown here of protection all along the line, deal, at the moment of the third successive triumph for free trade government in this country, a deadly blow at the army of food-taxers.

Robbers Heavily Sentenced.

New York, Dec. 19.—Three Chinatown loafers, who beat and robbed a young woman from Connecticut who was seeing the sights last month, were convicted of robbery in the first degree on Saturday and sentenced to Sing Sing for thirty-one years each.

They are: Thomas O'Brien, 28 years old; his brother, John J. O'Brien, 31 years old, and Sam L. Friedman, 25 years old.

They persuaded Myrtle B. Harding, whom they met in a dance hall, to visit a stable to look at a race horse, and there knocked her down and took $10, all the money she had.

Clergy for Western Canada.

London, Dec. 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The acting secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel announces that twenty unmarried clergymen have been deputed for western Canada. The society's portion of the archbishop's fund has been allocated as follows: "Rupert's Land, $2,500; Calgary, $7,500; Qu'Appelle, $8,750; Saskatchewan, $3,000.

The Study World.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—N. J. Ledoux, formerly American consul at Three Rivers, Que., and in France and Austria, and now of the federation committee of the Canadian Club of Boston, who is addressing Canadian clubs, left yesterday for Montreal, after interviewing the Prime Minister, R. L. Borden and members of the Cabinet on the possibilities of the appointment by Parliament of a commission, similar to that authorized by Congress, to study world conditions, in view of the possible reduction of armament. Mr. Ledoux said he was highly satisfied with his cordial reception.

Earl Grey to Dine Dix.

Albany, N.Y., Dec. 19.—Governor-elect John A. Dix left Albany Saturday night for Canada to settle up some private business affairs. He expects to return Thursday. On Wednesday Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, will give a dinner in Montreal in honor of the governor-elect

Mr. Dix's journey will take him into the Canadian wilds in the vicinity of Lake St. John, north of Quebec, and he expects to devote part of his time during his absence to the preparation of his message to the Legislature.

Caused a Schism.

Berlin, Dec. 19.—A despatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Munich says that the oath disavowing modernism required of theological professors by the Vatican, has caused a schism in the faculty at the University of Munich. One professor has retired from the church and several members of the theological faculty have abandoned their spiritual functions rather than take the oath.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

WANTS ANDY'S MONEY

Booth Could Do Great Work With Carnegie's Millions.

Head of Salvation Army Discussing Laird of Skibo's Gift of Ten Millions to Cause of International Peace, Says That With a Chance He Would Establish a Great University of Humanity.

London, Dec. 19.—General Booth of the Salvation Army, is deeply stirred by Carnegie's gift of $10,000,000 for the promotion of peace.

"What would I give for $10,000,000 to help us win true peace?" he cried. "How would I spend it? That is no new question. We, year in and year out, have pondered it, wondering where and whence the millions will come. There are so many schemes and possibilities, but if they are to be effective all must begin with the one beginning, a university of humanity. This university for a beginning should have two centres, London and New York. It would be an institution to which the lowest, the humblest and the most degraded would be brought, and they might be taught. The greatest and only abiding lesson would be forgetfulness of self.

"In these universities I would give men of healthy bodies the means of healthy work. I would see that the money was not spent on the few alone. Around each university I would have one thousand halls which, by their brightness, would attract each their thousands. There are so many ways of spending money in the direction of peace and yet making it productive that I cannot recount all. I only wish Mr. Carnegie would leave me a chance."

Death List Numbers Four.

London, Dec. 19.—The death roll resulting from a fight between the police and burglars in a Cutler street house Friday night now totals four. This house was occupied by the burglars, who were attempting to make their way into a jewelry store at 119 Houndsditch, when they were surprised by the police.

A fierce exchange of shots resulted, and Sergt. Tucker was killed on the stairway. Sergt. Bentley and Constable Choate were fatally wounded and died in a hospital Saturday, while one of the assailants of the police died in a Whitechapel bakeshop late the same evening.

The occupants of the bakeshop, including several men and one woman, were arrested. They are believed to be the persons who rented the house on Cutler street, which backed on the jewelry store.

An examination of the premises showed that the burglars had tunneled beneath the Harris store, and within a few hours would have been in possession of the booty.

TRAGEDY FOLLOWS CARD GAME

Washington, Penn., Dec. 19.—William Love, aged 26, is dead, with half of his head blown off, and George Broadnax, charged with the shooting, and his wife held as a witness, are in jail. A huge dagger, that was in Love's hand when he was shot, still sticks in the floor of the Broadnax house, where it was plunged into the boards by the weight of Love's body when he fell.

The tragedy was the result of a miners' card game at Marianna. As reported to the police, the fight started in Love's home, and when Love drew a dagger Broadnax ran out and to his own house. Love followed, but found the door barricaded against him. He beat upon the door until the panels splintered, and crawled through with the dagger in his teeth. Mrs. Broadnax, terrified, crouched in a corner of the room, while her husband went into an adjoining room for a shotgun.

As Broadnax entered the room with the gun, Love leaped forward with the dagger in his uplifted hand There was a flash from the gun, and Love fell, the dagger sinking deeply in the boards a few inches from Broadnax.

Knocked Over Turnkey.

Welland, Dec. 19.—Claude Dickout, aged 20, sentenced by Judge Wells last week to three years in Kingston Penitentiary, escaped from Welland Jail at 11.15 yesterday morning. He walked out of the main entrance of the Court House. Had the earth swallowed him, his escape could not have been more secure. Dinner was being served at 11 o'clock and Turnkey Mains was carrying out the cups.

Dickout saw his chance and made a rush for the door, knocking the turnkey over as he passed. The door leading from the corridors to the office was ajar. The fugitive pulled it to after him. In the thirty or forty seconds it took Mr. Mains to unlock the door, Dickout got away scot free. The police were on the case in a few minutes, and the frontier force promptly notified to be on the alert, but thus far all efforts are unrewarded.

Dickout was arrested for burglarizing at Ridgeway. In giving sentence, Judge Wells made scathing reference to the young man's life, to which the young culprit returned a bland smile.

Child Burned to Death.

Cornwall, Dec. 19.—While Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Sauve, third concession of Lancaster, north of Bainsville, were in their stable milking on Saturday morning, their little daughter, aged two years and four months, set fire to her clothing, and was so badly burned that she died in four hours. The aged grandfather, who was left in charge of the little one, stepped out for a moment, and during his absence the child set her dress afire at the stove

THE GORHAM CASE

(NO INKLING YET AS TO WHAT WILL BE DONE)

(Special To The Review)

Ottawa, Dec. 19th. — "There is nothing settled yet and I hardly think there will be to-day," said an official at the office of the Minister of Justice when asked at one o'clock If the sentence of Gorham at Peterboro had been committed. There will probably be a meeting of the cabinet at three, this afternoon, and the Peterboro petition may come up then, but there is according to the officials, nothing yet. They left the impression that they hardly think any decision will be reached to-day.

It is stated that the largely signed petition asking the minister for a commutation of the death sentence has reached the department. What will be done regarding it, is not known.

LATER.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 19.—It was stated at the Justice Department at 2.50 this afternoon that the Minister of Justice would hardly be at to-day's Cabinet meeting, and that he will be out of town to-morrow. Indications are that there will be no settlement regarding the Gorham petition until Wednesday or Thursday.

3,000 LBS. OF TURKEY SHIPPED TO TORONTO

A big shipment of turkeys was sent to Toronto to-day on the Grand Trunk by Mr. Fennell, of the McLean Produce Company, who did such heavy buying on the market Saturday.

Three thousand pounds of turkey was the amount shipped, and as his buying price was about eighteen cents a pound, the result is that the farmers received in the neighborhood of $540. Twenty-four cases altogether were shipped.

Mr W. S. Doughty, who travels for the Empire Separator Company, also purchased 2,400 lbs.

MEXICAN REVOLT FLARES UP AGAIN

Federal Troops Overthrown in an Engagement Lasting Several Hours.

El Paso, Texas, Dec. 19.—Federal Mexican troops were completely overthrown in an engagement lasting several hours at Lajunta, a small town near Minaca, on the Mexico, Northern and Orient Railroad, according to information received by railroad officials here.

At 4.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon the remnant of the Federal troops, numbering 150, surrendered their arms and ammunition and were allowed to depart in the direction of Chihuahua.

As telegraph wires were cut in many places, no details of the battle can be secured. A telephone wire running north through the mountains brought the news to the Juarez branch of the Mexico Northwestern that the Federal troops were overwhelmingly defeated and that the survivors had surrendered. The Federal forces were supposed to number over 1,000 men, and were in command of Generals Navarro and Bernandez.

The fight at Lajunta is believed to be a continuation of the bettle reported in the vicinity of San Andres on Thursday night.

An effort was made yesterday to run trains over the Mexico Northwestern into Chihuahua, but with what success cannot be learned. The railway officials say that the insurgents are in complete control of the entire region, and that traffic is practically at a standstill.

Held Up Gambling Club.

New York, Dec. 19.—Seven men walked into a tenderloin gambling club early yesterday morning, held up the twenty-five inmates and robbed them of all their money and valuables, amounting to several hundreds.

The leaders brushed past the lookout at the door, shouted "hands up," and then fired a dozen shots over the heads of the members to cow them thorough. Only one man demurred. He chose instead to jump from a second storey window and was found lying on the pavement with a broken arm. Some shots were returned, and in the exchange another man was wounded by a stray bullet. The robbers fled down the stairs to the street, and the club members, who did not court acquaintance of the police, followed swiftly.

Editions Confiscated.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 19.—Saturday's editions of the Pech and four other daily newspapers were confiscated, and their editors will be prosecuted for lese majeste, for publishing at length the speech made in the Douma by M. Purishkevitch, in connection with an interpellation as to the behavior of the police on the occasion of the recent student meetings, held in protest against the alleged cruelties inflicted upon political prisoners.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Saskatchewan temperance men claim they were robbed of several municipalities in the recent local option vote by fraud and perjury.

The Imperial Railway Co. will apply for a charter to build an electric line between Niagara Falls and Stratford. The headquarters will be at Stratford.

Robt. Goth of Leitrim will probably die at St. Luke's Hospital, Ottawa, from a fall from a load of hay on Saturday. He dropped upon his head, fracturing his skull.

P. A. Alberti, one-time Minister of Justice of Denmark, the revelation of whose banking frauds in the fall of 308 scandalized the country, was sentenced Saturday to eight years' penal servitude.

Winter is intensifying the famine in Ytangtsekiang districts in China. The authorities are endeavoring to suppress the sale of children, which has been so extensive as to be estimated at over a million.

A man who gave a name which sounded like Edward Kellar, died at the Hamilton hospital yesterday morning, as the results of injuries sustained through being struck by a radial car on the beach Saturday night.

Because James Crainer crossed the unsafe ice bridge at the Falls yesterday, the provincial police have been ordered to guard the natural structure. This is the first time in history that the bridge has formed before Christmas.

A Youthful Here.

Lima, Ohio, Dec. 19.—In a concerted effort at escape from the county jail yesterday afternoon four prisoners won their way to freedom after a murderous assault on Sheriff Van Gurten. Standing over his father's senseless body, the sheriff's fifteen-year-old son held the remaining six convicts at bay with an empty rifle until help came.

Jumped From Tenth Floor.

Buffalo, Dec. 19.—Henry F. Allen, 3 years of age, an attorney, and formerly a judge of the Court of Claims, jumped from the window of his office on the tenth floor of the Mutual Life Building last night. Every bone in his body was broken. Mr. Allen had been suffering from nervous prostration for several weeks.

AT PEACE WITH ALL THE NATIONS SAYS PRESIDENT

Taft Discusses Armaments at Peace Conclave.

President of U.S. Urges the Preservation of the Country's Means of Defence While Yet War Is a Possibility — Ability of Two Nations to Arbitrate Shows a Long Step Forward—Favors Armed Neutrality.

Washington, Dec. 19.—President Taft, addressing the closing banquet Saturday night of the American Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes, allayed "the so-called war scare which has furnished pabulum for the newspapers during the last few days." He declared that "there is not the slightest reason for such a sensation, because we are at peace with all the nations of the world and are quite likely to remain so." He said his purpose in outlining the preparedness of the United States for war "at a peace meeting," was to show by contrast the direct worthiness of the movement for a permanent court of arbitral justice and universal peace.

The President urged that a policy of "wise military preparation" be pursued. He emphasized the fact that the American people never would consent to the maintenance of a standing army sufficient to cope with that of the great powers. He urged the retention of the regular army, the improvement of the national militia, the passage of the present volunteer bill, to go into operation should war be declared, and the passage of a law, now before Congress, providing for a force of additional officers, who will be "able in time of peace to render efficient service in drilling the militia of the states," and, finally, the accumulation of guns and ammunition "to equip and arm the force we could select under our colors in an emergency."

President Taft asserted that the best method of ultimately securing disarmament among nations is the establishment of an international court, and the development of a code of international equity. Declaring that the country had not reached the point where war is impossible, he cited the Panama Canal question.

The President congratulated the association on Carnegie's gift of $10,000,000 for peace, and continued: "If now we can negotiate and put through a positive agreement with some great nation, to abide the adjudication of an international arbitral court in every issue which cannot be settled by negotiation, no matter what it involves, whether honor, territory or money, we shall have made a long step forward, by demonstrating that it is possible for two nations, at least, to establish, as between them, the same system of due process of law that exists between individuals under a government."

Winnipeg Cars Run.

Winnipeg, Dec. 19.—The feature of the street car strike yesterday was the arrival of sixty strike-breakers from Toronto. These men, the company claims, are all experienced operators and are not imported from the United States.

It is expected that they will be put to work right away unless the strikers give in before the time set by the company for resuming work—to-morrow morning.

The college students were again the mainstay of the service yesterday, and some sixty cars were operated up till about eight o'clock. College work this morning will deprive the company of this source of labor.

There has been very little trouble, and what there was, was of a minor nature. Some windows were broken and an attempt was made to derail cars by placing cordwood across the tracks.

The company state they have now 500 applications from many anxious to go to work on the cars.

Strikers and their friends are making themselves known by appearing on the streets wearing badges with the words "We walk" stuck in their caps.

Big Job Finished.

London, Ont., Dec. 19.—E. H. McGuigan announced to Hon. Adam Beck last night that his part in the hydro-electric project was complete with the completion of the St. Mary's loop, and the line from London to St. Thomas.

The great power transmission line, 293 miles in length, is complete. It has taken two years in building, and is the longest in the world.

The gangs were laid off Saturday, but will have plenty of work in future, should the line to Windsor be pushed at once. The completion of the lines will end the troubles which Guelph, Berlin and other cities have been experiencing.

The celebration of hydro-power for London, which was to have been held to-morrow, has been postponed.

His Aeroplane Wrecked.

Dover, Eng., Dec. 19.—Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday. As it was, his machine was wrecked and he was badly cut about the face.

A large number of aviators have been waiting here for a fortnight to compete for the prize of $20,000 offered by Baron DeForrest for the longest flight across the English Channel in 1910, by an Englishman in an English built machine. Grahame-White ascended in the morning for a trial flight in a strong wind. His machine soon began to rock, and he was unable to restore is equilibrium. It turned over and plunged to the ground, and was completely wrecked. It was thought at first that the aviator had suffered concussion of the brain, as he was unconscious.

AN EXPENSIVE BOARD

The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board is a useful body, and it could be more useful to the Province at large if its services were less expensive. It is criticised because it has asked from Toronto city Council, a fee of $500 for examining plans for an extensive bridge. In this case if the work was outside the duties of the Board, it would not be out of place to charge a fee for the work, especially if the Board had not put on its staff, officers for making such an examination. But as the Board requires the plans to be submitted to it, the matter is on a different basis.

It was expected by many that the provision that municipalities could refer money by-laws and debentures issued under them to the Board, and that when they received its approval they would be indisputable, would be a boon, by making the debentures more saleable and saving some of the expense. When brokers make an offer for debentures, they make an allowance in their own favor sufficient to cover the charges of solicitors for examining the by-laws and debentures. If the system were adopted of having them approved by the Board, it should do away very largely with the expense of the solicitor's fees and enable the purchasers to pay that much more for the debentures. But the charges made by the Board for the service are so high that the municipalities have not availed themselves of its services in this matter to any extent. They have preferred to take chances with the brokers outside of exceptional cases.

It would appear that the Board could be made more useful and popular by a revision of its charges.

THE POOR WITH US

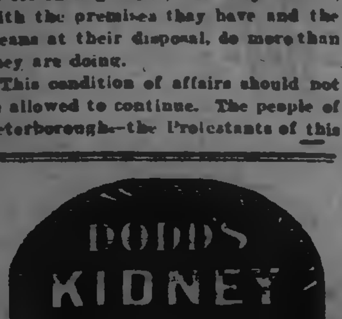
Last week the magistrate sent to the jail two men who were sentenced as vagrants—they were unable to maintain themselves and had no place to go. This is not an unusual proceedure, and for years, many years, the Grand Jurors have called attention to the presence of old men in the jail who are guilty of no crime, but that of poverty and age or weakness. This is not creditable to Peterborough and a remedy should be provided.

There are in the city two institutions maintained for the purpose of caring for the poor and helpless, the Protestant Home and the House of Providence. The latter, which is the Roman Catholic Institution, is well adapted for the purpose, commodious and properly arranged, but the Protestant Home has not sufficient capacity, and is not in its present premises, suitable for the work of housing the Protestant poor. The Government inspector has so far condemned it that he reported in favor of withholding the government grant which is given to aid such charitable institutions. The Home has done good work under the management of the excellent ladies who have given their time to its management, but they cannot, with the premises they have and the means at their disposal, do more than they are doing.

This condition of affairs should not be allowed to continue. The people of Peterborough—the Protestants of this city are able to provide for their poor and we believe they are willing to do so.

A people who spend hundreds of thousands in erecting handsome churches can spend the tens of thousands necessary to provide a suitable refuge. We do not depreciate the erecting of beautiful churches; the spirit which prompts such action is commendable and right, but the same spirit should cause the people to provide for the aged and homeless and the erection of the edifices while the poor are "sick and in prison," and left there, dishonours the Lord, in whose honor they are erected.

The management of the Protestant Home are not at fault in this matter. They have carried on an excellent work with little municipal assistance, and they have expressed their willingness to co-operate in erecting and maintaining a suitable Home or Refuge. Either their offer should be accepted, or some other method should be adopted to wipe out this stigma on the benevolence of the city.



THE PEOPLE'S WILL

Liberal papers and politicians seem to have become averse to the idea of a plebiscite or referendum, and argue that to submit the questions connected with Canada's naval protection to the people in this way would be disastrous to the constitution and altogether upsetting to responsible government.

This line of discussion from that source is strange, and for two reasons. The Conservative party has not asked for a plebiscite or a referendum. Mr. Borden's motion did not mention either. That motion was as follows:—

"We beg to assure Your Excellency of the unalterable attachment and devotion of the people of Canada to the British crown, and of their desire and intention to fulfill all just responsibilities devolving upon this country as one of the nations of the Empire. We desire, however, to express our regret that Your Excellency's gracious speech gives no indication whatever of any intention on the part of Your Excellency's advisers to consult the people upon the naval policy of Canada."

This does express the view that the people should be consulted, and that position Mr. Borden and his followers took but it does not ask for a plebiscite or referendum. In this country, as in all other British countries with responsible government, the people can be consulted without either.

The other fact which makes these fears of the Liberals of a direct reference to the people seem strange, is that the only governments of the Dominion or of the Province of Ontario that have made use of the plebiscite and referendum were Liberal Governments, one the Laurier Government of the Dominion, and the other the Ross Government of Ontario. They did not express any fears that the constitution would be shattered or even cracked. These references did not result in anything, for the question submitted in each case was prohibition, and although a majority on each occasion voted for it these governments paid no further attention to it. The Liberals adopt or oppose the principle of a plebiscite, and carry out or thwart the expressed mind of the people, as it suits them.

HIS WORK NOT DONE

Speaking of the death of Mr. Raymond, recently editor of The Review, the Toronto News says:—"An eager-hearted, radiant, buoyant optimist passes away with the death of Charles F. Raymond. His name was well known to readers of the News and other Canadian newspapers, and he published two or three books of cheerful, human philosophy. Dying at 38 years of age, one feels that his work was not done and mourns for a life that was so hearty and for the loss of work that was so simple and so robust."

ACTION IS NEEDED

The Examiner thinks the Government is doing enough for the Trent Canal by proceeding, none too speedily, with the construction of the eastern division. It argues against operations being carried on at the same time on the northern end by saying that it is better to finish one end and then concentrate energy upon the other rather than to divide the appropriation and work between the two. But it is not necessary to hold back the work on one division in order to proceed with the other. The Government has undertaken work that will require expenditures that make the appropriations for this canal seem trifles, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier told a deputation last week that additional works that will require $200,000,000 did not frighten him. The Trent Canal was under way before these other immense undertakings and if the Government wished it could give this very large section of the Dominion the benefit of pushing forward its completion to the Georgian Bay as well as to Lake Ontario.

The Liberal Government has not been hampered in this matter. The Conservatives, after they undertook the work, had to battle with the Liberal Opposition, but the Liberals are given the support of the other party. Yet the prospect is that, after waiting for the finishing of the Lake Ontario outlet, there will be no preparation for the completion of the other section, and that there will again be the delay caused by surveys and disputes as to route. We have had enough of these aggravating delays. The route of the Georgian Bay division should be settled, and the contracts let and proceeded with so that the full benefit of the waterway may be obtained at the earliest possible time.

CENTRAL SMITH FARMERS' CLUB

Schedule of Meetings for Winter Season--Interesting Debate at Last Meeting

The meeting of the Central Smith Farmers' Club was held on Tuesday last, Dec. 13th, and was one of much encouragement and help to all present. A keenly contested debate furnished some friendly rivalry, the subject being:

"Resolved, that it is more profitable for the farmer to raise the heavy horse than the light one."

The leader for the affirmative was Mr. Wm. Telford, jr., and for the negative Mr. Jos. Tully. The negatives were declared the winner.

A short program in connection with the meeting made it more interesting. The schedule for the winter meetings has been arranged and is given herewith:—

For January the subject is "Orchard Work and Rural Mail."

February—"Silos and their Construction."

March—"Poultry."

April—"Dairying."

These subjects should prove of great interest to all who attend, as the farmers' clubs are doing a lot towards making the younger farmers good talkers and debaters.

His Favorite Opiate.

Ushers in theaters handle some peculiar people during a season, but the experience of the employes of a Chestnut street playhouse was a puzzle for some time. A well dressed, middle aged man would secure an end seat in the front row almost every evening. He would tell the usher if he fell asleep he was not to be disturbed until after the show. No sooner would the orchestra play the overture than the ushers would notice that the man was asleep. At the close of the night's entertainment some one would rouse the sleeper and he would leave with a polite acknowledgment. One night he explained his strange behavior:

"I suffer from insomnia," he said. "The only relief I get is when I sit close to the drummer in an orchestra. There is something in the rhythmic beating of the drum that soothes me to sleep."—Philadelphia Times.

Found a Place.

The billposter had one poster left and no conspicuous place to put it. He stood on the corner and wondered what he should do with it. Presently an Italian woman carrying a big load of wood on her head passed by.

"Better than a Broadway electric tower for my business," said he.

Paste brush and paste were requisitioned, the poster was clapped on the perambulating wood pile, and for fifteen minutes the ever curious Broadway crowd stopped, turned and even followed to learn something about the commodity that was advertised in that novel manner.—New York Sun.

HOW THE NAVY IS RUN

RANKS AND GRADES IN ORGANIZATION OF GREAT SHIPS

Old Office of Lord High Admiral Has Given Way to a Body Called the Lords of the Admiralty — Under Them Is Naval War Council, and Under That Committee the Admirals of the Fleet.

Once upon a time our navy was ruled by a lord high admiral, a fine old title resplendent with many of our greatest maritime achievements, says a naval expert in a recent article. This ancient office is now represented by the Lords of the Admiralty under the headship of the First Lord, a civilian member of the Government, impersonating the national control of the navy, and responsible to the King and Parliament for the entire naval machine. This responsibility may be described as embracing the building of the required types of ships, the appointment of efficient captains, and the bestowal of honors and rewards upon the proper persons. He, in fact, sees that the policy of the Admiralty is directed in accordance with the policy adopted by his party towards the international situation.

His chief instruments are the Naval Lords of the Admiralty led by the First Sea Lord, who is his adviser touching all matters relating to the efficiency of the navy as a fighting machine. He has the right to appoint officers to positions of second in command, and in effect largely influences all other appointments. Should the readiness of the fleet for war on its mobilisation ever fail in emergency, his would be the supreme responsibility. His understudy is the Second Sea Lord, who must be ready to step into his shoes if required. His special responsibility is for the manning of our ships and the training of our sailors, and he may make appointments up to the rank of navigating officer. We then come to the Third Sea Lord, whose duty is the control of shipbuilding, the designs of our ships, their progress and completion as well as the provision of guns and machinery. Below these a junior lord is in charge of transport and coaling, a civil lord of contracts and building, while a permanent secretary deals with the staff of the department and a Parliamentary secretary with finance.

The organisation of our navy for war has recently been supplemented by the creation of a new body which is to be known as the Naval War Council. While its functions will be largely analogous to those associated with the general staff of the arm its constitution will differ materially from that of the latter. Its standing members will be only three in number, comprising the First Sea Lord, the Director of the Naval Intelligence Department, and the director of a new department to be known as the Naval Mobilisation Department. The latter will now take over all the duties hitherto devolving upon the War College at Portsmouth and upon the Intelligence Department.

Its duties will embrace the preparation and working out of plans for the conduct of war with every possible antagonist and the disposition of our fleets and squadrons in accordance with the strategical schemes decided on.

At this point we leave the administrative for the active arm serving branch, whose chiefs are the leaders of our battle fleets, full admirals, vice-admirals, and rear-admirals—the general officers, lieutenant-generals, and major-generals of naval war. Superior to these are the admirals of the fleet—the field-marshals of the navy—who are generally officers on the retired list. To the hands of our admirals is committed the safety of the realm. Thus the admiral commanding at the Nore guards the mouth of the Thames, the east coast, and coasts of Scotland. The admiral holding the Portsmouth command keeps watch and ward in the Channel from beyond Dover to Torbay; whence the safety of our shores round Land's End and up the west coast is ensured by the admiral in command at Plymouth. These commands are the plums of the service. A fourth admiral is entrusted with the care of the Irish coast.

Vice-admirals take supreme command of a fleet and of an important foreign naval station. The rear-admiral acts as second in command of a sea-going fleet, or may be first in command on a foreign station of lesser importance.

The success of an admiral in any operation of war will entirely depend upon the efficiency of the captains commanding the various fighting units of his fleet. More than ever in these days of mammoth battleships crammed with gigantic engines of destruction will "the captains courageous" of our navy exercise a determining influence upon the issue of battles.

A captain's authority, power, and responsibility, especially when in command of a big ship, altogether transcend those of a colonel in the army. In a vessel carrying, say, 800 men, all confined within a small space, adamantine discipline is indispensable. The captain afloat, therefore, maintains the state of an almost sacred autocrat—a sort of Dalai Lama of the sea—living and messing alone apart from all his subordinates. Acting through his first lieutenant or commander he is responsible that the King's regulations and Admiralty instructions are observed throughout his ship. His further promotion to admiral is determined by seniority, but he may remain a captain from fifteen to sixteen years.

Every rank in the navy has to sustain a heavy weight of responsibility, and probably the commander is more burdened than any. His post is no sinecure, and he has few moments of leisure. He seems, indeed, to be a portion of the machinery which is always in most active operation. Not a detail of the interior life of the ship escapes him.

There are three grades of lieutenants—the sub, the junior, and the senior lieutenant.

Australia's Hinterland.

The one problem in Australia which really overshadows every other, says an English paper, is that of the huge rich, unpeople northern territories—not only that section of the north which is at present controlled from Adelaide but the whole of northern Australia. It is an even greater problem than that of immigration, which to some extent forms a part of it. Here are enormous stretches of well-watered land capable of growing wheat, vast grazing areas, auriferous belts, rich tropical lands, innumerable natural products, deep rivers, and fine harbors. The portion known as the Northern Territory contains little more than 1,000 white inhabitants; the rest is populated on the same scale. There is need for a very rapid awakening of Australian opinion upon this vital issue.

Wanted to Be a Sacrifice.

One of the strangest petitions ever received by a police magistrate has been presented at Calcutta. A young Bengali, with his forehead covered with heavy caste marks, entered the witness-box during the hearing of applications, and handed to the magistrate a stamped paper praying for an order to have his life sacrificed before the goddess Kali for the benefit of the Government, and also for the people of Hindustan. It added that the comet which had been appearing nightly in the heavens was a very bad sign, and the petitioner who signed himself Prani Nath Sadhoo, wished to become its victim. The magistrate declined, and told the Bengali to go home and pray to avert the evil happenings which might follow the comet, as that might prove more efficacious than the loss of his life.

Australian Military Training.

The compulsory training of lads in the Commonwealth between the ages of fourteen and eighteen years will probably commence on or about January 1st next. The only persons who will be exempt from the new system will be those who live at long distance from convenient centres of population. The Commonwealth is to be divided up into districts for the purpose of the training. In each of these districts there will be a militia area officer, who will be assisted by two permanent staff sergeants. The staff sergeants will be in charge of the drill instruction, and the militia officer will carry out the administrative work. It is proposed to appoint the militia area officer next month, and they will then be required to attend a special school of instruction.

FROM A SOUTH WINDOW

IN CANADA

"Love, Laughter and Life"

CHEERFUL GIVING IS CHEERFUL LIVING

There are some shelves piled high with things that I can ransack without leaving my cosy seat at this sunny window where I write—they are the shelves of my memory. To-day I dusted my mental card index and looked for poor old Christmas Spirit. My, but it had the ragged edges. For years and years it has been brought forth at this season, and every time it is the old advice: "Give freely."

And, after all, what more is there that can be said?

The same expressions may not be given in all countries, but in Canada we strike a good average.

Ontario people do not differ very much from the men and women of Nova Scotia, while, at the other extreme of our land, the people are preparing to celebrate Christmas very much as all other Canadians.

The spirit is practically the same—one of cheerfulness, one of whole-heartedness.

I have no use for those pessimistic persons who preach day in and day out before the gladsome Christmas and lament that times have changed and that most of the giving is for appearance's sake.

I don't believe it.

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," they tell you, and then give the opinion that they're about the only cheerful givers left.

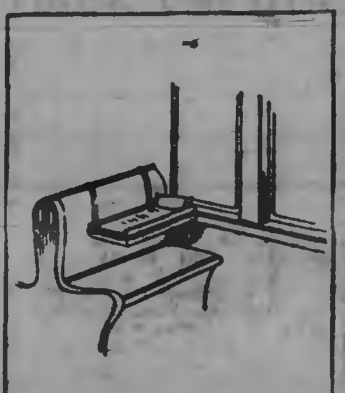
Cheerful giving is the only way to express the true spirit of Christmas. Of course it is. But then, everybody knows that; and, I believe, everybody is a cheerful Christmas giver.

The true Canadian woman doesn't need to be preached at. She knows that cheerful giving is cheerful living—she has the real Christmas spirit.

So be more than a cheerful giver this Christmas. Be an optimist! Believe your friends and neighbors are also cheerful givers.

INFANT'S TRAVELING COT

The problem of what to do with baby on a long railroad ride has been solved by a Californian man. He has devised a collapsible cot, which can be hung on the back of the seat in front and in which the child can sleep in peace and comfort—for himself, his parents and the other passengers. This cot or berth consists of a bottom to support a tiny mattress and hinged sides, which fold down upon it when not in use and open up for supports when the cot is in use. Around the whole affair goes a metal hanger frame from which arises two U-shaped hooks, which hook over the back of the seat ahead and support the little berth without in any way interfering with the occupants of the forward seat. As this article takes up little room when folded, it will be found a blessing by mothers who have to take infants on long trips, as it can be adjusted in a few moments and the little one allowed to take his rest without encumbering his parents.



SOME IDEAS FOR BAZAARS.

Which Will Help to Increase the Interest and Also the Proceeds Novel Suggestions

This is what some one has called the "open season" for bazaars, and the promoters are looking for fresh ideas. The two or three following, which have been suggested, may help in the way of inexpensive stalls, at which nearly all the proceeds are clear profit.

It is not at all difficult to devise a puzzle stall, at which all sorts of curious original puzzles may be sold, and which may be combined with a series of competitions connected with them. Some people are particularly clever in inventing conundrums; others can be compiled from various sources. These may be typewritten on cards and sold for small sums. The purchase of the card at the same time entitles any one to compete for a prize, and to have answered all the puzzle questions entitles the first solver to an award. At the stall may also be sold "jig-saw" and such like puzzles, the contributions of the handy boy and his box of tools.

"The old farmhouse" is a variant of the housekeepers' stall. In addition to home-made bread, cake, jams, etc., in one part of the stall, have bottles of polishes, pastes for cleaning silver and brass, furniture polishes, made from the old recipes that used—with much muscular force, but you can't supply this—to keep the old-fashioned furniture shining like a looking-glass. A rather interesting feature would be patterns of the marvellous patchwork quilts of the old farmhouse—the "log cabin," "fox and geese," "double T," "flying dragon," etc., as many different patterns in patchwork blocks would make quaint cushion tops, and would no doubt sell well. They could be made in less time and with less expense than the ordinary embroidered cushion cover.

teiiiiiiiiiii A shrdlu eacoin cmfwyp rdl

A recipe stall, combined with some other idea, should bring in a fair amount. Friends are asked for their favorite recipes for candy, toilet preparations preserving, cooking, or crocheting, as the case may be. The directions should be written clearly, or typewritten, and mounted on cards or bound in paper books. Useful cards for the kitchen, provided with loops of tape to hang up, are well worth the few cents asked for them if the recipes are tried ones, each card containing a series of dishes.

REDUCED DEATH RATE.

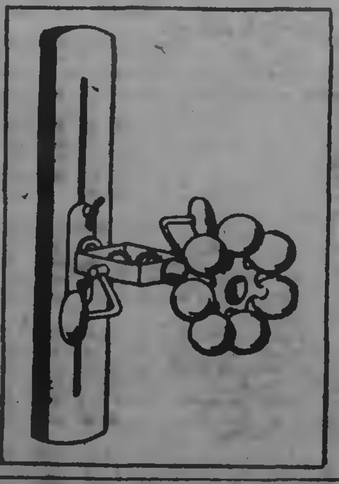
What Nathan Straus Did for Babies of New York City

Mr. Nathan Straus, of New York, said that the old city of New York, now the borough of Manhattan, had established a new record in the saving of the lives of babies. Notwithstanding unusually severe periods of intensely hot weather the past summer, there had been fewer deaths of children under five years than in any preceding summer, and for the first time in the history of the city the summer mortality had fallen to a rate less than 50 per thousand per annum. When he first undertook to protect the babies of New York from milk-borne diseases by supplying pasteurised modified milk in 1892, the summer saw the dying of 6,812 children under five years, making a rate per thousand per annum of 136.1. With the steadily increasing use of pasteurized milk there had been a steady decline in infant mortality, until the summer just ended showed only 3,900 deaths in a population of children larger by 125,000 than that of 1892. In other words, in 1892, 964 children out of every 1,000 survived the summer while in 1910 there were 988 who escaped death out of each thousand. In his practical experience the saving of children from milk-borne diseases warranted the assertion that the pasteurization of milk supplies in our cities, under careful health department supervision, would infallibly reduce the number of cases of infectious diseases and save the lives of babies. In no way could this association save so many mothers from grief and loss of their little ones as by hastening the time when the milk-borne diseases would be as rare as the plagues that medical science had practically abolished.—N. Y. Medical Record.

AUTOMATIC MASSEUR

Subject Turns Handles and Revolving Balls Knead Stomach

There is no longer any necessity for paying an expensive Swedish massage artist several dollars every time you want a massage. A machine has been invented which, it is claimed, will do the work just as well and cheaper in the long run.



This machine is fastened to an upright, which in turn is fastened to a platform, so walls need not be marred. A wheel with large leather covered knobs on the ends of its spokes projects a foot or so, and this is revolved by turning two handles. The patient, or subject, stands in front of the wheel with his abdomen just touching the wheel which, by the way, can be adjusted to a height to suit the user. He then turns the handles and the wheel revolves, the balls passing over his stomach and kneading it in a way to stimulate the circulation of the blood and impart healthy action to the liver and other organs. Another use for this device is for the reduction of adipose tissue and the consequent reducing of a too generous waistline.

NEWSBOY PROFITS.

A Good London "Pitch" Brings Its Owner Big Returns.

The smart street newspaper-seller usually earns more money than the average clerk or mechanic. This surprising statement was made recently by the head of the publishing department of a well-known London newspaper, who furnished some remarkable figures concerning the profits made by street newsboys, and incidentally revealed a curious feature of the newspaper-selling business.

While there are hundreds of youths who obtain copies of the morning and evening papers direct from the offices and secure the full profits, there are hundreds of others who are supplied by middlemen. That is to say, one man will go down to the office, buy enough papers to supply, say, a dozen youths, jump on his bicycle, and take them to the particular locality in which he has taken a stand or worked up a connection.

A short distance from a certain railway station every morning will be seen a man with piles of the various London newspapers busily engaged in supplying over a dozen boys who stand outside the station to sell the papers. These boys are actually employed by the news vendor, who pays them salaries ranging from $2.50 to $5 a week; and after all expenses are paid he makes a profit of over $15 a week for himself.

"Is it surprising," the publisher remarked, "that youths avoid shop and factory life when, by working from 5 a.m. until 9 p.m., and again, say, from 4 or 5 p.m. until 8 or 9 p.m., they can earn between $10 and $15 a week. I am referring now more particularly to the boys who are lucky enough to get pitches outside stations. Of course, there are hundreds of other boys who do not make anything like that amount, but even the youngest reckons on making $2.50 to $3 a week.

"Pitches outside stations are exceedingly valuable, and it is no uncommon thing for a man to pay anything from $100 to $500 for the privilege of selling his papers there. Many of these middlemen scarcely do any work at all. They secure a good pitch, employ an assistant for about $6 a week, and leave the running of the concern to him, and a very profitable business it is, too."

Is 110 Years Old.

New Zealand has an interesting old pioneer in Henry Burling of Waikanae. Henry is 110 years of age, and came from England in 1840. Just to show the young fellows how to do it in the small township where he resides he opened the football season last year by "kicking off" at the opening game. Mr. Burling and his grandson both draw the old-age pensions. His eldest son is eighty-five, but cannot draw the pension as he is too well off. The grandson is well over sixty-five.

Wireless In Polynesia.

The Australian Government has decided to adopt the recommendations of the conference of representatives of the Admiralty, the Commonwealth, New Zealand, and Fiji for linking up the British islands in the Pacific by wireless telegraphy. The scheme provides for the establishment of high-power stations at Sydney, Doubtless Bay (New Zealand), Suva, and Ocean Island, and medium power stations in the New Hebrides and the Solomon Islands, all to be controlled by the Government.

Where "Cranford" Was Written.

To lovers of that English classic "Cranford" this picture of the house in Manchester, England, where Mrs. Gaskell wrote her inimitable story will doubtless be of great interest.

The centenary of Mrs. Gaskell's birth was recently celebrated at Knutsford, Cheshire, the English village which furnished the author with character studies for "Cranford," in which she reproduced to the life the everyday existence of the "maiden ladies and widows of limited means" who formed the social life of the village.

Going Motoring.

Have you seen the new knitted hoods with border and ties that are brought round the neck, cross in front and tie low at back? They are cone shape like the caps of early Tudor reign.

Another quaint motor cap of velvet folds with brocade or cretonne border in lighter tone, ornamented on each side with a huge velvet colored button mold, is peaked like the caps of colonial days.

A close fitting motor bonnet for cold weather is of fine colored beaver with the brim turned back on the fulled crown to a depth of five inches and studded on edge with small silk rosettes.

SUSTAINED BAD FRACTURE

Had Leg Caught in a Pulley at the Peterboro' Cerial Works—Is Progressing Favorably

On Saturday morning Mr. Isaiah Fair, 84 Aylmer street, who is employed at the Peterborough Cereal Company, sustained a painful fracture of the leg. In some manner he became entangled in one of the pully-blocks, and was unable to extricate himself quickly enough to avoid injury. He was taken to Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance, and on inquiry at the hospital to-day the Review was informed that he was progressing favorably.

"Annie Laurie"

William Douglas' song, "Annie Laurie," is known to every one as a classic and in constructing a play around the love affairs of its heroine, Douglas Flattery, has also been successful in producing a classic. Dealing with the times and period of the 17th century, the plot is both stirring and romantic, which gives to the theatregoers an opportunity of seeing in their home town a beautiful Scotch drama which is interesting from the historical incidents connected with it and the romantic heart interest that abounds.

David Lithgoe, the star of this attraction, is a well known young romantic actor. He appears in the role of Robert Reid, the Scotch volunteer. The press of the entire country has been unanimous in the praise of his handling a very difficult part which, if in the hands of a less capable actor, would suffer in comparison.

He is ably supported by Miss Dorothy Lyons, a most capable actress in the title role. A correct scenic production lends its important part to the whole, and a rare dramatic treat is in store for those who see the play at the Grand when it will be produced in its entirety on Thursday next, Dec. 22. Plan opens to-morrow morning.

LOYALTY TO THE CITY HELPS TO MAKE CITY BETTER

A Series of Articles Directed to the Buying Public, and to Doing Trade At Home.

The Daily Review will publish a series of articles which are printed in the interest of our merchants, dealers and the public generally. They are designed to combat the influence of the literature sent out by the city department stores, and which preaches the doctrine that better value and lower prices are the perogative of the departmental stores of the large centres.

The interests of a community are illustrated by the old spartan bundle of sticks. United, the community progresses, because each citizen helps another. Our business places cannot be made bright and convenient, and the service prompt and satisfactory if the trade is not extended. Every dollar sent out of the city is a dollar less to exchange for goods with the local merchant. He does not want charity. He does not court favor. He wants the opportunity to do business on a business basis, and almost always can, and will supply goods of equal value at no greater cost to the customer than from the department store.

The attention of merchants and purchasers alike is directed to these articles. There is much that can be learned from their perusal.

If any reader thinks the arguments advanced are not sound, a letter addressed to the editor of the Daily Review will be gladly accepted, and the argument in rebuttal made public.

The series will begin immediately and attention is invited to the following foreword—

"The Twentieth Century Belongs to Canada," is a phrase often used now, and we take great and pardonable pride in our country's progress. In agriculture, in mining, in railroad construction and in commerce, enormous strides have been and are being made. There is an era of progress and prosperity in store for the present generation of Canadians that has not been equalled by any country in the world. To profit by it and make the best possible use of it, it is essential that every Canadian should realize and perform his personal duty. But individual opportunity entailes individual responsibility and it is to this point we wish to draw special attention.

We propose to print a series of sermonettes, which will appear regularly in this space, for the purpose of directing the consideration of our readers to a few points of our social and business life wherein this individual responsibility has been overlooked or forgotten, and to show that what benefits the community will redound to the benefit of the individual and vice versa. Loyalty to our country carried to its logical conclusion will impel us to be also loyal to our town and our neighbors. Loyalty to our country will help make Canada a greater and a better nation, and to benefit every town in Canada. Loyalty to our town will help to make it a better place to live in, and benefit every individual in the community.

In this series we may have occasion to criticize rather severely the actions of some of our townspeople, but we wish it to be understood that it is meant in the kindliest spirit. Many people do things from sheer thoughtlessness which are really unprofitable to themselves and harmful to the community, and we believe it will only be necessary to call their attention to the facts for them to acknowledge the justice of our criticisms. It will be a pleasure to pay just tribute to many others who have given such matters serious thought and who show a public spirit and genuineness in all their doings that is worthy of Peterborough. They also show a marked amount of hard common sense, in that they realize the saving of money and time which results from their local patriotism. Our special reference is to the folly of some folks who have developed a habit of doing their buying and selling away from home, as contrasted with the wisdom of those who do all possible business with their friends and neighbors. We believe the former to be unwise and unprofitable, while the latter is wise and profitable, and in this series we shall endeavor to show reason for the faith that is in us. If these sermonettes put a few of our misguided citizens in the way of saving money for themselves, and at the same time benefiting the public we shall feel amply repaid for our trouble.

INFLUENCE OF MUSIC

A successful meeting was held in the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon. The Rev. C. Carpenter took for his subject, "The Influence of Music." In an interesting address he said that music was inherent in all to some extent, that all nature was full of it. It could be heard in the humming of the insects, in the rustling of the leaves, and in that almost universally pleasing song of the birds. But perhaps more especially in the murmur of the sea. To a person living near the sea always finds the sea music fits in with that persons mood of feelings. No two days are exactly the same—ever varying, ever changing—for all the world like the course of a man's life. Standing on some distant headland the roar of the breakers sounds like the music of some tremendous choir. There is much more music than we can grasp, but it is possible, in some future time, when free from our present limitations, this great chorus may swell up to our ears in music we can understand. The influence of music is greater than it is possible for us to contemplate. From the earliest times we read of instruments of music. The Bible speaks often of them and even the wildest nations have their rude instruments of music to-day, even if it be but the "tom toms" of Africa. And although these may sound to us harsh and discordant, we should remember that music is ever changing, and that what gave delight to the ancients, would not satisfy us to-day. We can appreciate only what we are educated to appreciate. Music has a fashion, and changes because man's moods are changing. Grand old gregorian and other music, are not appreciated to-day, but the tendency is rather towards what is called the barrel-organ type. Something, with a roll and a swing. And as music reflects the conditions of the mind it is deplorable that the "rag-time" system of music should be so popular, to the neglect of really good music.

Music suffers from the incompetence, and the want of feeling of some exponents, a response to the music deep down in the human heart, is necessary to enable music to accomplish its complete mission. Most of the compositions that have touched humanity are written in the minor key, illustrating the fact that there is much sorrow in the world. Music is the great soother of suffering and sorrow. More sympathy and consolation can be put into the human voice by song than by mere speech. If we are happy we whistle or sing. Saul, the epileptic, was soothed by music and even the lower animals are touched by its influence. In the old religious or oratorio music the pictures of the Bible are brought before the senses so vividly that one feels to be in the presence of a genius.

Composer and executant must be truly great in character to bring out the full influence of good music. Sin mars perfection and sin and music are not computible. Music appeals to man's subconsciousness or his second self and brings out the best that is in the hidden man.

We must try to interpret the hidden music of nature, and in all reverence, endeavor to reach the mind of our Maker.

A discussion followed.

Mr J. H. Sawers sang "Ora Pro Nobis." Mr. A. Boystrom accompanied in his usual efficient manner. Next Sunday there will be a Christmas singsong.

PARK STREET PASTOR GIVES ADDRESS TO BOY SCOUTS

"Fear God, honor the King, honor all men, live the brotherhood," — that is not exactly the way the text reads in I Peter, 2nd chapter, 17th verse, but it is the way Rev. W. C. Riddiford, yesterday morning at Park Street, presented to the boy scouts and members of the boys' departments of the Y. M. C. A. That is the motto the boyscouts are expected to live up to. In other words it is the ethical flag of this young and rapidly growing movement.

Mr. Riddiford is chaplain of the local scouts movement, and his address while of great value to boys in general was of special value and interest to the scouts.

They attended service en-masse under the direction of Scout-master, Hodges, and Boys' Secretary, Tate, of the Y. M. C. A. On the march to and from the church, the Scouts' buglers headed the parade and played stirring calls.

Mr. Riddiford's address was simple and forcible. He loved the boys he said, and when the time came that he was to cease to be a boy he wanted to cease to be at all.

He traced the organization of the scout movement by general Baden Powell. The fundamental idea of the movement was that the boy, properly trained, would make the best and most useful man. The objects of the movement were self knowledge self reliance and self control. The realization of these qualities meant the living up to high ideals, and by clear and particularly appropiate illustrations from the Bible, the speaker showed how these manly virtues could be cultivated to a full and Christian development.

As an example of self reliance and self control he cited the example of David's duel with Goliath. Goliath was big but David had the power of God behind him, and with the power of God behind them, the boys could put to death at all times the Goliath's that approach them in their daily lives.

DISTINGUISHED PREACHERS AT KNOX CHURCH YESTERDAY

The evening services of the new Knox church were continued from last Sunday, yesterday, when two distinguished preachers, and men of strong personality and marked oratorical power, gave inspiring addresses during the day. In the morning Rev. J. D. Morrow, of Toronto, spoke at a mass meeting for men at nine o'clock. Mr. Morrow, from his wide experience with men, and by his remarkable platform presence, is able to deliver a splendid message, and he made a strong plea for temperance in his morning address. Large numbers of men were present.

The regular service in the morning was conducted by Rev. Dr. Law, of Knox College, Toronto, who was recently called from Scotland to become the professor of the New Testament at Knox College on his reputation as a scholar, author and preacher. This was his first visit to Peterborough, and his discourses yesterday made a strong impression on his hearers.

Professor Law chose three texts, only one of which, however, is used here. It was Psalm 68, chapter 29, verse: "Because of Thy temple at Jerusalem shall kings bring presents unto Thee."

The thought that he endeavored to bring out was that our bodies should be symbolical with the Temple of the Holy Ghost, and with the church. A temple is supposed to be the veritable abode of the Deity, a residence and abiding place.

Just as intercourse with one's fellow-men is precipitated by going to a friend's house and engaging in friendly conversation, so it is with God, there must be some place to go where a man may hold communion with God. In the Old Testament the temple was the literal dwelling place of the Deity. To the pious Jew the temple was no other than the House of God and the very gate of Heaven. But God intended that the holy of holies should be in the heart and conscience of mankind. Think of conscience with its mystic sense of right and wrong. It is so with the rest of the body. Every part of it shows that it was intended for the dwelling place of God. The temple has been abused by men, but yet there is nothing to be compared to it when God has driven out the intruders, and when He sets up His mercy seat and altar in the human heart. Then the heart of man contains what the heart of God intended it should contain. But often we shut our ears to the voice of conscience and keep God away. It is then that God does not find much opportunity of visiting you and showing salvation.

Then the glory of spiritual religion is that you don't change with your circumstances you can take God with you wherever you go, into all the varied experiences of life, politics, business and professional life, etc.

In the new Jerusalem, of which the Bible speaks, there is no temple, because the temple has gone forth and covered the place. There is no Lord's Table in that place, because every table is the Lord's. Then again what is religion. It is not doing this or that, or one thing to-day or to-morrow. It is a spirit in man that manifests itself in every thing he does. A perfectly religious man is never irreligious. He carries the atmosphere of the temple about with him. Our great duty is to build up the temple in this world of ours, and to make it as much like Heaven as possible. We can make one contribution for the good of the world by living righteous and exemplary lives ourselves. Every one of us is a factor in life, and if we live the life of a Christian effectually we shall lift up some part of God's world nearer to Himself.

Rev. Prof. Law concluded his address with a strong plea for people to live more earnest and exemplary lives.

In the afternoon Rev. J. D. Morrow again addressed an open meeting of the Sunday school children and their friends.

Prof. Law occupied the pulpit in the evening also, and delivered a strong, forcible sermon.

At the morning service Mrs. G. B. Hughes sang very effectively and with much feeling. The pastor also read a letter from the Presbytery to the Building Committee, thanking them for their energy and activity in erecting a new church.

Unique Floating Bridges

The current issue of the Technical World magazine contains a cut of the floating bridge at Chemong Lake, which is described as an "odd structure on a Canadian lake, which rests on floats of logs anchored with stone."

The following article appears on the same page as the cut—

"Lake Chemong, one of the Kawartha lakes series in the highlands of Ontario, is crossed by a bridge that the municipality built after a rather unusual plan. It is a floating structure with a framework of logs which rests upon the water, anchored at intervals with stone, and floored with double planking. The bridge has a draw, and thus serves all the purposes of a more pretentious structure. It is a mile long, has been in use for fifteen years, and has proved very satisfactory, both in service and from a wear and tear point of view.

"Another floating bridge at Capalino, near Vancouver, B.C., has this difference, that it floats in the air. It has no moorings, except at the ends and, therefore, swings freely, every motion of the body communicating itself to the structure which, of course, is used for foot traffic only. It is built on the swing cable plan, and substantially floored. The bridge is 410 feet long, and hangs in the air 200 feet above a roaring mountain torrent, through a wild canyon. It is quite safe however, and affords a good example of simplicity in suspension bridge construction, although it is more of an oddity than a pattern demonstrating practical principles.

Mr. James Doris, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, yesterday read his report of the debate in Belleville recently, and it was decided to form the league. It will be comprised of the following teams: Trenton, Sacred Heart, T.A.S., Belleville and Ennismore.

A trophy will be offered as an incentive towards making the debates more interesting.

A TRIBUTE

(BY MRS. ANNIE M. KNOTT,) Associate Editor of Christian Science publications, personal student of Mrs. Eddy, former member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, and a teacher of Christian Science.

It is the testimony of Holy Writ that love is stronger than death and at this hour Christian Scientists are proving the truth of the inspired saying. Their beloved and revered Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, has left the earthly scene of her untiring activity in the service of God humanity, and in the solemn hush which follows their human sense of loss they realize as never before the depths of their love for this noble and true hearted woman whose life of devotion to Truth has meant so much to unnumbered thousands of lives that were in deepest darkness until the light of Christian Science dawned upon them. Poorly indeed would they prove their understanding of her teachings did they at this hour yield to any unreasoning sense of sorrow. Mrs. Eddy has ever insisted that God, not man, is "the centre and circumference of being," the Principle and Life of all, and to this eternal fact they will cling until the goal of spiritual being is reached and the deathless life proved by Christ Jesus is attained. Mr. Eddy's discovery of the healing and saving power of divine Truth was brought to a densely materialistic age, but in spite of this it has aroused mankind to lay hold upon all that the Bible promises. To-day, after nearly half a century of arduous and unselfish toil on her part, the Scriptures are a mighty, life-giving power to multitudes who before the coming of Christian Science knew them only as the letter that killeth.

With the temperament of a seer, Mrs. Eddy has always chosen to be alone with God in pondering the solution of the great problems of being, and as a result of her comunings with the Mind that governs the universe she has shown the utmost wisdom in directing the activities of the rapidly-extending Christian Science movement, its success being due to her wonderful ability so to present the truth as to inspire those about her with something of her own faith in God and her sublime courage in working for the triumph of good over evil in every phase of human experience. Her followers can now do no less than defend the heritage of truth which she has left them, until it sets all men free.

Mrs. Eddy has glorified the teachings of Christ Jesus in making them a living power to-day as truly as 1900 years ago, and to her belong His words of commendation: "Well done, good and faithful servant . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." —Christian Science Monitor.

THE BEST STOVE AND HARDWARE COMPANY

FISHERY INSPECTOR CONDEMNS OIL DISCHARGE INTO RIVER; TAINTS PASTURE HE SAYS

"In my opinion the oil discharge from the gas house does as much damage to the farmers' pastures along the Otonabee as the sewage in the river." said Fishery Inspector Watt to the Review.

He stated that when the water subsides in the spring oil deposits are left on the river fronts and on low lying pastures.

By reason of this the grass is rendered unfit for the cattle and horses, Mr. Watt states.

"I've seen oceans of it floating on Rice Lake," he said, "and I believe it will have a serious effect on the rice crop."

Mr. Watt thinks the Monaghan and Otonabee councils should petition the Provincial Board of Health to have this matter remedied at the same time that they petition against the city sewage being emptied into the river.

He said that he couldn't say for certain that the fish were injured by the oil. He requested the department to have the oil discharge prohibited by way of protecting the fish, but was informed that the fish weren't affected as the oil floated on the surface.

THE LATE MISS REID

A bright young life was summoned home on Sunday afternoon at one o'clock, when Miss Margaret Reid, daughter of Mr. Alex. Reid, passed away after an illness of scarcely two weeks' duration. She had been ailing with pneumonia, but the direct cause of death was heart failure.

The late Miss Reid was only twenty-one years of age, but in her brief life she won for herself the love and friendship of all with whom she became associated, and it will be long before her host of warm friends will realize that she has been called away. Possessed of a warm, affectionate disposition, full of cheerfulness and delighting in performing acts of kindness, the late Miss Reid endeared herself to a large circle of acquaintances.

In Christian work she was always foremost in promoting the Master's cause, and in St. Andrew's church her departure will leave a severe gap which will be very difficult to fill. She was secretary of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavour, and a faithful member of the choir, and in other religious work was zealous and devoted to the promulgation of Christ's kingdom.

For the past few years she was employed in the millinery department of Robert Fair & Company, and was highly esteemed by her fellow-employees.

To a family of seven brothers and two sisters and her father and mother the deepest sympathy of the entire community is extended in their hour of bereavement. They are James, of Banff, Sask.; John, of Bennorsperry, Idaho; Matthew, of Wool Hollow; Walter, of Manitoba; Robert, Ernest and Edwin, at home, and the two sisters, Harriet and Annie, also at home.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence, corner of Smith and George streets, at 2.30 to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. J. G. Potter will be present from Montreal and will conduct a short service will be held at the house at 2.15.

BEST WINDOW ONE OF THE BEST

(Hardware and Metal).

The two window dressing competitions announced by Hardware and Metal in October, to close on December 1st, were successful in bringing out a fair number of photographs of sporting goods and fall hardware windows, and the result of the awards are announced this week. In addition to the four cash prizes, two special prizes are given in the fall hardware competition. Two of the prize winning photos are reproduced this week, and the others for which prizes have been awarded will be published at times when the goods displayed are seasonable.

KITCHEN SCENE IN WINDOW.

R. P. Best's display arranged for the Best Stove and Hardware Co., Peterborough, for Thanksgiving week, was decidedly original in its composition, and in addition to being "the "talk of the town," and a constant source of amusement, many sales of ranges were directly traced to the window.

The window as dressed to represent a kitchen, a range being set up, and by means of a gas connection a kettle was kept sizzling on the stove. This put action and life into the display, and it was made more realistic by placing a dummy figure of a man in a sitting position at the kitchen table, with his breakfast before him. Sitting on the table, too, was the alarm clock which had aroused the man from his slumbers, it being an "Ironclad," which "rings to beat the band." As W. D. Campbell, of the Best Company, says: "The window was a distinct success, as it brought a considerable number of customers into the store."

BLACK YEAR FOR PRIZE RING—16 FATALITIES

Chicago, Dec. 17.—In all the history of the prize ring, from Tom Cribs' time down to the present, there has never been recorded in a single year anything approaching the number of deaths directly due to boxing contests that have occurred thus far this season.

The death at Presque Isle, Maine, last week of Billy Dunning, one of the few boxers who could point to a draw with Jack Johnson, the world's heavyweight champion, made the sixteenth fatality of the prize ring in 1910, while there are at least two other boxers now lying at death's point in hospitals, one being the veteran Andy Daly, famous ten years ago.

These fatalities of the prize ring have extended from ocean to ocean and as far south as Bluefields, Nicaragua, where a corporal in Uncle Sam's service met his death in a friendly contest with the gloves. In the past two or three deaths in a season from boxing have been sufficient to attract general attention, while for many years not a single prize ring fatality has been reported. The total of sixteen to date in 1910 is unprecedented.

LIST IS LONG.

The following is a list of the fatalities to date:

Max Landy, 22, of Boston, participated in bout at Brockton, Mass., and was found dead in bed; died January 31st.

"Ginger" Williams, heavyweight, of Visalia, Cal., fractured skull in fall following knock-out blow; died in Fresno, Cal., Feb. 22nd.

Tommy McCarthy, 20, of San Francisco; skull fractured at base of brain from fall in bout with Owen Moran; died April 20th at St. Mary's hospital, San Francisco.

Gilbert Ternour, 17, of Hackensack, N. J.; injured in bout with Frank Kelser; died April 30th

A. D. Russell, of Fresno, Cal.; fell unconscious in bout with William J. King; died March 17th.

Robert E. Gilbert, 29, of Waco, Texas; neck fractured in bout; died July 15th.

"Kid" Fisher, 22, of Lahoma, Okla., died in eleventh round of bout at Mepo, Okla, October 15th.

BILLY BREEN AS TRAINER

For the Intermediate Team—Executive Decide to secure Him

At a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club Saturday night it was decided to secure the services of "Billy" Breen to train the intermediate team, if such is possible.

Mr. Breen is in Toronto at present, and a reply from him as to the proposition will be received in the course of the week

His acceptance would greatly please the fans, and help the team a whole lot in the long trip to the intermediate mug.

He has been connected with the local club in other years when the silverware came this way, so here's hoping for the best.

Newmarket Wants No Rough Stuff

The boxing bout between Charlie Christie and Will Turley, of Toronto, scheduled for Friday night at Newmarket, did not take place. The prospect of a professional battle alarmed the good people of the town to such an extent that Mayor Pearson cancelled the permit for the use of the town hall, and the town band refused to accept an engagement for occasion, with the result that the promoters declared it off for the present. The lads were to box ten rounds, and it is not likely that either of them would have been unable to go to work the next day, or even to eat a good supper after the division of the gate at the end of the proceedings. The Newmarket Era, however, was fortified with a list of fatalities in the ring during the past year that induced it to discourage pugilistic exhibitions "in our midst."—Toronto Globe.

SPORT TALK

Belleville Intelligencer—From Buck Irving it is learned that in addition to Dunsome, who is in the city, the following players have been signed and agree to play on the professional hockey team here—Sanford, Cross, Doherty, McDonald, McMillan and Oromett. It is expected that all the players will be here during the early part of next week and active practice began. The colors selected are the same as Belleville has had for some time, namely, red and white.

A number of the members of the intermediate team last night had an excellent practice. They are getting in good shape and will no doubt give a good account of themselves when the time arrives for the opening of the series.

A schedule of games for the Bankers' Hockey League was drawn up at a meeting held at the Bank of Montreal Saturday afternoon

Y.M.C.A. SPORT

The Y.M.C.A. Snowshoe, Toboggan and Ski Club was organized Saturday evening and elected the following officers for the season; — President, Sandford R. Hall; Vice-President, Mr. C. Sisson; Secretary, J. J. Thompson.

The first outing of the above club will be held to-night (Monday) to the Jackson Park slide, to which every member of the association is welcome, leaving the building at 7.45 p.m.

The intermediate leaders meet to-night at 7 p.m. for special work, and it is important that every man be on hand early.

Owing to the holiday season the wrestling class will be discontinued until after the holidays, when it will be continued as usual every Monday night at 8 o'clock.

The Junior Pyramid Club will meet as usual to-morrow at 4.30, every member is requested to be present.

A good turnout of the intermediate "Gym" Class is requested for Tuesday night, in order that we may get out work in good shape for New Year's night.

In the Bowling League the Midgets meet the famous High Rollers on Tuesday evening, and if "talk" goes for anything the pins will surely fly.

HOCKEY IN PITTSBURG

Hasn't Very Bright Outlook for This Season—International Authority is Needed.

No more glaring example of the imperative need of an international governing body in hockey, says an American sporting writer, one which will be empowered with the same unrestricted authority enjoyed by the national commission in baseball, can be had than the deplorable situation in Pittsburg.

There is to be no hockey in what once was one of the most active centers of the sport in the United States during the coming season.

This is not due to any lack of interest in the sport. The fans of that city want hockey, but they want professional hockey.

Up until last season they have been educated to and fed on the faster and more exciting play of the salaried puck chasers, and when they were deprived of this style of game and offered the amateur game last year they could not expect to be as satisfied with it and thrive as substantially on it.

It was made necessary to offer them amateur hockey because of the lack of some one body which would have jurisdiction over the players both in that country and in Canada.

Back in the season of 1908-09 hockey in Pittsburg started particularly early, and a number of the professional players in Canada figured that they could pick up some easy coin in that city for a couple of months and then just as soon as the season opened in Canada pack their kits and leave the Pirate promoters in the lurch.

This was predicted long before it happened, and just as soon as the big league season in the Dominion started the majority of the players beat it back. There were a few who had the decency to stick it out, but it was necessary for several of the teams to borrow reserve players from the rest of the clubs in order to finish out their schedules.

The players can hardly be blamed for taking this advantage of laxity on the part of the promoters of the game. The life of a hockey player is but very short at best. The game is too strenuous for them to last long, and they are going to grab all the coin they can while the grabbing is ripe.

It is time, however, the writer goes on to say, that the promoters in that country at least—Canada doesn't have to worry as much about it as yet—should get on the job and make overtures to the Canadian officials concerning the forming of some sort of substantial alliance whereby the player guilty of jumping his contract could be blacklisted and a holdout could be dealt with as they deal with him in baseball, by not permitting him to play with any other team.

In Canada they have trouble with contract jumpers, but they are never troubled for the want of players. There are hundreds of them to be plucked. Of course they are not all classy, but Pittsburg could not get any kind.

Among the Middleweight Boxers of of Great Britain

Tom Thomas, of Penycraig, was boxed out of the middle-weight championship of Great Britain by Jim Sullivan, of Bermondsey, at the National Sporting Club, London, last month.

The result astonished nearly every one but those who had a due appreciation of Sullivan's great boxing ability, and the fact that Thomas had been so careful in his matchmaking that he had never previously had a serious trial given to his abilities as a boxer, were mindful of the fact that Sullivan might take Lord Lonsdale's belt.

SOME AUTO DONT'S

So many folks buy automobiles when they don't really know they're doing it. That is to say, they know they want cars, but the particular sort they buy they haven't a great deal of real reason for acquiring. There was a "Don't" list made up by "The Automobile" not long ago that contained a great deal of sage advice on the buying and maintenance of machines. It went like this:

Don't decide before you see the car whether or not you will like it; the wish should not be father to the thought.

Don't look with a prejudiced eye; you might as well not look at all if you refuse to see.

Don't let some other pair of eyes do the looking for you; what is the matter with your own? Moreover, the other eyes might be near-sighted.

Don't look at the paint on the body while you are thinking of the carburetor.

Don't examine the striping on the wheels while you are wondering whether or not a magneto is used in the ignition system.

Don't become fascinated with the brightness of the lamps and forget to observe the method of lubrication.

Don't spend all your time admiring the straight lines of the body; the cooling system remains to be looked at.

Don't go hunting around for a place to put your baggage until you find the place where the tools are stored.

Don't just glance at the place where the tools are supposed to be; count them; give a thought to the character of them; a bundle of wire is worth about a nickel; credit the kit with all that it has in its makeup, but no more.

Don't try to figure out where the spare tire is to be stored on the car; let the maker of the car dispose of such details for you.

Don't assume that the lubricating oil can be carried in your hand; let the maker of the car provide a place for it.

Don't usurp the position of designer of the automobile that attracts your notice; buy a car that has been designed.

Don't assume that a car that looks bad is good. True, beauty is as beauty does; equally true, beauty is an outward sign of an orderly interior.

Don't fool with the carburetor and after you put it out of joint assume that it is no good; the chances are that it is as bad as you make it; the equal chances are that any other carburetor will be in the same fix after you get through tinkering with it

OLD-TIMER IN THE RING

Was Jem Mace—Interesting Story of His Life

The first record of Jem Mace, the famous old-timer who died last week, is that when a young man he was the proprietor of a travelling booth. This he moved from place to place to various fairs, race courses, and public gardens in England. In those days he played a violin. His art in that respect was at least tolerable—and he supplied refreshments to the hungry when he was not handing out fisticuffs to those who failed to pay up. At that time Mace was known to put up his fists with anyone for a side bet of a pound or a guinea.

When Mace was in America in 1896 for his bout with Mike Donovan, he had this to say regarding his life and career:

"Hi'll be 'anged if I know what was the first fight I fought. I fought every Sunday at Beeston. Everybody fought. We worked on the farm all week an' on Sunday we fought. You 'ad to fight in them days. If a lad met another goin' down the lane he made a mark on the dirt wi' 'is foot and then the other lad ups and wipes it out wi' i's foot. Then they was at it. On Sunday we was fightin' all day. We'd go 'ome wi' sore 'eads and a few coppers in our pockets, and Monday mornin' we went farmin' again."

Mace did not begin his ring career till he was about twenty-four years old. His first opponent was a man named Slack. He whipped him in nineteen minutes. Bill Thorpe, who had not been defeated, met Mace on February 17th, 1857, and Mace won in the eighteenth round. This victory placed Mace in the front rank as a pugilist, and he soon was called to the London prize ring, where he disposed of opponent after opponent.

Mace's most famous fight was with the champion Bob Travers, who had won many battles. The men fought two days. The first session of milling was interfered with by the police at the end of six rounds. The next day they resumed fighting. After the fifteenth round, Mace, who had been slow to show his quality, began to gain headway over Travers, and he knocked the champion out in the twenty-seventh round.

In 1860 Mace was declared champion of the world. In 1862 Tom King challenged Mace, and they fought a forty-three round fight in January, the decision going to Mace.

Then for the next ten years he was unbeatable. He earned so much money that he had at one time $850,000. But Mace was a poor manager, and after his wife died his money ran away from him. He became destitute, and last year he had to apply for an old-age pension. In England there is an old-age pension which allows five shillings a week to every person who is over seventy. On this $1.25 weekly gratuity he lived up to the time of his death.

Mace's last appearance in America was on December 14th, 1896, when he boxed Mike Donovan, the one-time great middleweight champion of the Broadway Athletic Club. Donovan, during the early session of the bout, threw out his left, and caught Mace sharply on the jaw. Jem stopped short in his boxing and help up his hand. "'Old on a minute," he cried. Then he drew out a handful of false teeth, tossed them to his seconds, and proceeded with the bout.

Dr. Vincent of the University of Chicago, was chosen president of the University of Minnesota.

"THE SWEETEST OF ALL THE CHARITIES."

Will You Help It In Its Hour of Need....?

THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN

COLLEGE STREET, TORONTO

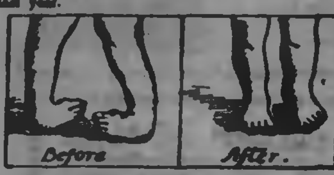
READY FOR MOTHER.

Appeals to Fathers and Mothers of Ontario on behalf of suffering children.

This Institution did more work in 1910 than ever before. Total In-Patients 1,224. Of these, 783 were from the city and 441 from the country.

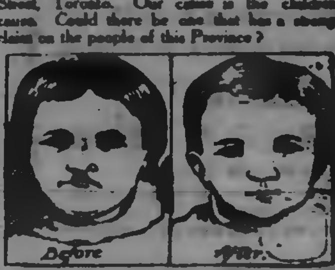
Since its organization, the Hospital has treated in its cots and beds 46,837 children; 12,370 of these were unable to pay and were treated free.

There were 60 cases of club feet corrected last year.



THE HOSPITAL IS A PROVINCIAL CHARITY.

The sick child from the most remote corner of Ontario has the same claim as the child living within sight of the great House of Mercy in College Street, Toronto. Our cause is the children's cause. Could there be one that has a stronger claim on the people of this Province?



Perfect results in Harelip cases. 18 infants were relieved of this terrible deformity last year.

If the Hospital is to continue its great work, it must appeal to your pocketbook as well as to your heart. Let your Dollars be messages of mercy to the suffering little children of Ontario.

Please send your contribution to J. Ross Robertson, Chairman, or to Douglas Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, The Hospital for Sick Children, College St., Toronto.

CLEVER RASCALS.

Robbers of Naples as Daring as They Are Resourceful.

SCHEME OF ONE LONE THIEF.

Masterly Manner In Which This Audacious Rogue Pilfered a Church Furnishing Shop and Corded Up Its Too Confiding Proprietor.

His name was Signor Domenico Doctor Dolchinetti, and he was host in Rome. For a scholar with a degree he enjoyed his meals rather unrestrainedly, but after the spaghetti and capretto had disappeared he used to slow his pace over the finocchio con vino and to straighten his back, wipe his mustache and begin his stories.

"Napoli? Si, si! Naples? Bella citta, beautiful, beautiful! And what thieves are they in Naples! It is the one city where you cannot lead a donkey through the streets."

There did not seem to be much connection between these, and our puzzled looks said so.

"Perche? You dare not lead. You must take him by the tail, for when the unsuspecting peasant leads an ass laden with panniers or onions or wood into Naples before long he happens to glance back, and, behold, all is gone—produce, panniers, pack saddle, all filched. Thereafter he takes the ass by the tail and steers him through the streets that he may watch constantly.

"Poi—it is all organised. Some years ago the leader of the robbers was the captain. Everybody knew him. When anything was stolen from one, one went not to the police, but to the captain.

"There was a little music master came home one day and found his piano gone, a whole piano, and no one in the house could say how, when or where it went. The little man was distracted.

"Then he took heart and went to the captain and stood before him with his hat in his hands. He was just a poor music teacher. His piano was all he had in the world. He— 'Go,' said the captain. 'At 6 this evening you have your piano.' And about the time of the service that afternoon a wagon came to the little man's door, and four men heaved out a piano, which they set in its accustomed corner; then they drove off without a word.

"Poi, the music man, went again to the captain's house and began to thank him and to fumble about in his pockets, saying that he did not have much, about 20 lire, all his savings—22 lire perhaps. 'What—twenty-two lire!' yelled the other. 'I, who am rich, whom men call the captain—22 lire to me! You poor'— And he kicked him down the stairs.

"But the most remarkable robbery was done not by the band, but by a Neapolitan single handed.

"One day there drove up to a church furnishing shop an equipage with two prancing horses and a liveried coachman and halted before the big windows full of precious finery. A beautifully dressed little signor alighted and asked to see the proprietor. He said he had a cousin who would the next day be ordained bishop and he desired to purchase appropriate gifts. First he would see a crozier. The proprietor fetched a superb crozier of silver, the crook of it gold, wonderfully chased and overwrought with carving.

"'How much?' asked the well dressed man.

"'Five thousand lire, signor.'

"'Good! Tie it up and put it in the carriage. And let me see also a miter. And again he chose the costliest, one frosted with silver arabesques and beaded with pearls. He sat down to write a check for 8,000 lire altogether. But, no; he would see also a bishop's ring. 'How much was this one?'

"'Two thousand lire, signor.'

"'Good!' And that, too, went into the carriage with the miter and crozier. Finally this princely customer would buy a complete vesture and decided on a figured alb broidered with cloth of gold from shoulder to foot. 'Only,' he doubted, 'will it fit? But stay,' he said to the shopman; 'you are a big man, almost as large as my cousin. See if the garment will fit you.' So the proprietor put it on and stood clothed in magnificence from cravat to ankle.

"'Good! Beautiful! Only the waist. My cousin happens to be enormous of girth. Suppose you put your arms at your sides, and I shall fix the girdle to include them. That will about equal my cousin's waist.' So he buckled the belt tight about the proprietor's wrists and moved back to survey the effect. 'Bravo! Bellissima! Most beautiful!' he cried. 'And now, signor—buon giorno!' He skipped through the door, into his carriage and whirled downtown.

"At that 'Good day' the proprietor let out one awful yell and bounded into the street. 'Thief!' he screeched. He crashed into astounded people, tripped in his golden skirts, rolled and could not get up again.

"People would not touch him, kicking and frothing and trying to point —'Thief, thief'—would not even look in the direction of the vanishing carriage. Finally the police grabbed him, discovered that he was insane and a robber and bustled him to prison. Poi—they let him go next morning."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"ROBIN ADAIR."

Famous Love Song Had Its Original In Eighteenth Century.

"Robin Adair" is one of those old-fashioned love songs which has lived for more than a century, and has retained its popularity probably more by reason of its pretty and plaintive melody than the words written by Lady Caroline Keppell. It is old-fashioned, for it must be confessed that a lady of to-day would scarcely lay aside her modesty to the extent that did Lady Keppell, to tell Robin how much she was enamored of him. In spite of what may be the feeling of a young woman in love at present, she would hardly dare to address the object of her affection in such endearing terms and then publish that confession to the world. She affirms that the "town was dull without him," the "assembly stupid," and that she can "ne'er forget him"; she prayed for him, tried to make him jealous by confessing that "many had made love to her," and ended by begging him to "come to her heart again."

It was nearly a century and a half ago since there lived in Dublin a young Irishman named Robin Adair. At the time he was studying for the medical profession in that city, and, getting into some sort of trouble, the exact nature of which is not clear, he was compelled to leave the city. He started for London, but on arriving at Holyhead he found that his purse would not pay for the journey by coach, and so he set off on foot. He had not gone far when he came upon an overturned carriage, the owner of which happened to be a well-known lady of fashion.

The lady had received some slight injury, and our medical student proceeded to exercise his art in having her set right. Presently the journey was resumed. Robin having a place in the carriage bound for London as that happened to be the lady's destination as well as that of Adair. Arriving at the metropolis, Robin found himself in the possession of a check for a hundred guineas and an invitation to visit his fellow-traveler as often as he pleased. With the money placed at his disposal, he completed his medical studies, and soon acquired an excellent practice.

One night Robin was at a dance given by his benefactress, where he met Lady Caroline Keppell, second daughter of the Earl of Albemarle. On both sides it was a case of love at first sight; but its course was naturally far from smooth. On the part of the lady's family the idea of such a mesalliance was not to be thought of, and every means was taken to disillusionize her. She came home, and a residence at Bath was tried. It was all to no purpose.

What's this dull town to me?
Robin's not near.

At last the union was reluctantly consented to, and in The Grand Magazine of Universal Intelligence those who are interested may to-day read the following chronicle of the event:—

"February 22nd, 1758.

"Robin Adair, Esq., to the Right Hon. the Lady Caroline Keppell."

Shortly after the marriage Adair was made Inspector-General of Military Hospitals, and later on, the King having taken a fancy to him, he was appointed Royal Surgeon-General and Surgeon of Chelsea Hospital. Adair lived until 1790, but Lady Caroline died many years before in giving birth to her third child. A son of the union, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Adair, died in 1855.

The tune to which "Robin Adair" has always been sung is of Irish origin, having been composed by Gerald O'Daly, one of the native harpers, and first associated with a song entitled "Eileen Aroon." Its popularity in England dates from the second half of the eighteenth century, about which time it was much sung by Tenducci, the Italian vocalist.

Origin of the Safety-Pin.

An historian of invention tells us that to the wails of a long-suffering infant we owe the boon of the safety-pin. Here is the story: A little boy, named Harrison, an English blacksmith's son, had to look after his baby brother. The baby often cried, and its tears were usually traced to pin punctures. The boy nurse tried a long time to bend the pins in such a form that they could be used with safety to his brother's flesh. In this he failed; but his father, the blacksmith, perceiving the utility of the idea that the lad had been at work on, took it up on his own account and eventually turned out the safety-pin that is in use to-day all over the world. Whether the safety-pin would have still remained in oblivion but for the tormenting of one little English baby no one knows, of course.

Will Need Forbearance.

Speaking at Cape Town recently, Mr. Malan, South Africa's Minister of Education, said that the smooth-working of the Union required from everyone restraint and toleration. Otherwise they would be laying up for themselves not union, but a gall. The two great principles which must be observed, were—firstly, the equality of the two predominant races, and the equality of their languages; and, secondly, the recognition of the Union as an integral part of the Empire. In that spirit the Government would work.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

You are safe in rejecting the article offered as "just as good."

MEMORIES OF GREAT MEN.

Some of the Late Goldwin Smith's Reminiscences of Celebrities.

In his short paper of reminiscences of "My Social Life in London," in the November Atlantic Monthly, the late Prof. Goldwin Smith manages to introduce his impressions of an astonishing number of the notable personages with whom he was more or less intimately associated. It was an epoch of his social life, he says, when, at the dinner table of Sir R. H. Inglis, he first met Macaulay. "Of all English talkers that I ever heard, Macaulay seemed to me the first in brilliancy." The historian's characteristic habit of monopolizing the talk was, to Prof. Smith, "all exuberance, and not assumption or ostentation."

One could understand how he was a bore to other talkers. He evidently was to a great talker who sat next to me. He would seize upon a theme and dilate, with copious illustration, from a marvellous memory. Mention of the exclusive respect of the ritualists for churches in the Gothic style led to an enumeration of the fathers of the early church who had ministered in churches which were not Gothic. A question about the rules of equestrian statuary led to a copious dissertation proving that nature was the only rule. I have seen a whole evening party kept listening in a ring to an essay on final causes and the limits of their recognition, with numerous illustrations.

Prof. Smith recalls, too, the brilliant society which gathered at the salon of Lady Ashburton, for whom he had the greatest respect and admiration. Of Carlyle and Tennyson he writes:

Carlyle was always there. He was a great favorite of Lady Ashburton. His talk was like his books, but wilder; in truth, his pessimism was monotonous and sometimes wearisome, though he could not fail to say striking things, still less to use striking words. One summer evening we came out after dinner on the terrace. There was a bright moon, and for a few minutes we all looked at it in silence, each probably having his own thought. At last a voice was heard: "Puir auld creature!" Whether the moon was an object of pity in herself, or because she was doomed to look down on human affairs, I failed to divine. Tennyson was there. I adored the poet, and should have liked to be able to worship the man. His self-consciousness and sensitiveness to criticism were extreme. They asked Tennyson to read some of his own poetry aloud. This he was understood to be fond of doing. But to the general disappointment he refused. At his side was sitting Carlyle, who had been publishing his contempt of poetry. Immolating myself to the public cause, I went over to Carlyle and asked him to come for a walk in the grounds. While we were gone the reading came off.

Melton Prior's Brusqueness.

The late Melton Prior, for many years artist and war correspondent of The Illustrated London News, was well-known to many Canadian newspaper men. As was stated in the despatches after his death on Nov. 2, he had reported with pen and pencil twenty-four wars and revolutions, and had worked in almost every part of the habitable globe. In girdling the earth he frequently crossed Canada, east and west, his last journey having been made at the time of the Russo-Japanese war. In addition he had filled two important assignments in this country, which were fortunately missions of peace. The first of these was in 1878, when he came to Canada with the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise to sketch and write about the receptions accorded the first royal personage sent to Rideau Hall. When the present King, then the Duke of Cornwall and York, made his official visit to Canada in 1901 he came on a similar mission. As an artist he did not possess the highly finished style of the modern pictorial expert who seemingly tries to make his work look as photographic as possible. His pictures were sketchy, vivid and racy of the events depicted. His writing was like a series of verbal snap shots. Personally he was what is colloquially known as a "character." Probably there never was a man so absolutely free from the restraints which convention imposes on more timorous souls. He had deliberately cultivated a certain brusqueness of manner which he alternated with a Falstaffian joviality. If a man bored him he would tell him so. The writer has heard him address an ancient and fat-headed person who was pressing unwelcome attentions on him in this wise: "Condemn your soul, sir; you bore me, sir. Go away from me, sir." Yet withal he was the kindest hearted man alive, and felt it keenly if the object of his brusqueness took umbrage and failed to see that no offence was intended.

The New Wizard of the Soo.

William Charles Franz of the Soo—is a new name in Canada; and Franz at the Canadian Soo is a remarkable man. Recently a gathering of notable public men, both Canadian and English, did honor to Mr. Franz in a banquet at the city that was founded by Clergue the wizard; the city that now has 15,000 people, seven thousand of whom are employed in the consolidated works of the Lake Superior Corporation, financed by British capital.

Mr. Franz is the general manager of the works, which in their astonishing variety and range of output are among the marvels of modern Canada. The wizard era of F. H. Clergue who, looking for cheap water power, discovered the great plexus of raw materials that makes the Soo the most remarkable industrial small city in Canada, was followed by a series of lapses and reorganizations; later by a great fire. But the Soo works of 1910 are greater even than were dreamed of in the days of Clergue Mr. Franz is the most powerful man in the Canadian Soo. When a youth he had a dog, a rooster and a gun; also a pocketful of rusty nails. He is now manager of a corporation whose property is valued at $35,000,000.

Richard Watson, of Moore township, had his hand mangled in a corn shredder, and it had to be amputated.

Our Lady of Our Snow

I am your Lady of the Snow, my minister's acts look hazy:
They aim to be my father's foe, by the way they plan their navy:
My father has been good to me, my ships have sailed upon the seas
As free, as free, as free can be, without a single penny-fee.

I am your Lady of the Snow, I dread a separate navy:
Which aim to be my father's foe, my minister's acts look hazy;
They say if war should come to be, against my father on the sea:
They might help him, or they might not, is this to be my father's lot.

I am your Lady of the Snow, and I love my father's navy:
It has nursed me since long ago, I feel myself quite a lady:
If I should leave my father's side, my ships would suffer far and wide;
I could not be my father's pride, all seems to me like suicide.

Bigamy Charges Today

Magistrate Edmison, County Crown Attorney Wood and Mr F. D. Kerr are in Havelock to-day.

His Worship is hearing the evidence in two bigamy charges.

The Other Half.

A man owes 4 cents. He pays 2 cents one day, 1 cent the next, one-half cent the next, and so on, one-half each day of the debt. Now although on the fourth day he only owes owes one-quarter of a cent, if he should be endued with the gift of immortality and he should continue to pay the debt at the same ratio, he could never pay all of it. There would always remain that half of the former day's payment, provided he had counters small enough to make the payments.

BANK FORCED TO CLOSE; FARMERS' CANNOT MEET CLEARING HOUSE BALANCE

General Manager Travers Announces Suspension of Payments and Blames it on the Trial at Lindsay and the Comments of Judge Harding.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—The Farmers' Bank of Canada, with head office in the Stair Building, corner of Adelaide and Bay streets, this city, suspended payment at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

At three p.m. yesterday W. R. Travers, general manager of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, notified the clearing house, in writing, that his bank would not be able to pay its balance, which was $20,000. Hence the bank closed its doors.

As to the clearing-house, its members will be called together to-day and all the items cleared from the Farmers' Bank of Canada yesterday will be sent back to the banks sending them in, and these banks will return them to their original holders. The situation will then be as if the clearing had not taken place.

To-day the Bankers' Association will come into the situation and will appoint a curator for the Farmers' Bank of Canada, under the provision of the Banking Act, which reads:

"The (bankers') association shall, if a bank suspends payment in specie or Dominion notes of its liabilities as they accrue, forthwith appoint a curator to supervise the affairs of such bank."

Duncan Coulson, vice-president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, Toronto, was notified of the suspension of the bank yesterday afternoon, and, said: "The Bankers' Association will appoint a curator to-morrow." He could not say who the curator could be. It is said elsewhere that a prominent member of the staff of the Bank of Commerce would be put in charge of the suspended bank. John Knight, secretary of the Bankers' Association, left Montreal last night for Toronto.

Why did the bank suspend payment? The press saw General Manager W. R. Travers at his beautiful home, 20 East Roxborough street, last night, and asked him, "Why did your bank close its doors?"

Mr. Travers, without heat, but with careful deliberation, replied, "The remarks of Judge Harding from the branch at Lindsay, where three ex-employes of the Farmers' Bank are on trial for conspiracy, were so damaging to the credit of the Farmers' Bank that confidence waned, and throughout the province among our 26 branches, the notices of demand for funds on the part of depositors were so great that we saw that to be fair to all and to give preference to no creditors, it was necessary for us to suspend payment.

"Hence, I expect that the ill-advised attitude and the uncalled for criticism of Judge Harding, in the Lindsay case, has precipitated the situation so far as the Farmers' Bank is concerned, and its doors are closed."

"If you were given a free hand could you pull the bank out?" Mr. Travers was asked.

"If I am given a chance," replied he, "to take care of the assets of the bank, and especially of the Keeley mine, which I understand and highly value, I can pay 100 cents on the dollar and have a profit."

"What I would like would be ninety days of hard work, in co-operation with the curator, in order that the Farmers' Bank might resume business. If I am given some latitude, with my intimate knowledge of the assets of the bank, I know that within the ninety days I could straighten things out and have sufficient funds on hand to pay every creditor. My ambition is to put the bank into such shape that it can resume its position."

Want Their Own Language.

Winnipeg, Dec. 20.—English-speaking Catholics have for some time been dissatisfied over the way St. Boniface College has been run. They claim that English is subordinated to French, and that it is impossible for their sons to secure proper education at St. Boniface. The trouble came to a head recently when St. Boniface College threatened to withdraw from the University of Manitoba if the university established an Arts College with a teaching faculty.

An English-speaking committee of Winnipeg residents now wants the establishment of an English Catholic College in affiliation with the university, and has applied for land for a site. The idea is to establish a college similar to the one in affiliation with Oxford for English Catholics. This has called forth a vigorous protest from the French Catholics and a lively controversy is in progress.

Breithaupt Disqualified.

Berlin, Dec. 20.—A bomb was thrown in the municipal camp here yesterday when it was announced that A. L. Breithaupt, one of the mayoralty candidates, was automatically disqualified. He is a member of the collegiate institute board, of which he was chairman for two years, and the Municipal Act provides that any member desiring to enter the Town Council must resign ten days previous to nomination. Mr. Breithaupt failed to resign, and had not done so when he was shown the provisions of the act. At present Mayor Hahn is the only candidate in the field.

Federenko Goes Free.

Winnipeg, Dec. 20.—Swava Federenko, the alleged Russian political refugee, was released from custody yesterday morning, and Edmund Howell, representing the Czar, announced that no further efforts would be made to take Federenko back to Russia. The case has been before the courts for the past four months and the attempt of the Russian authorities to get Federenko to answer political crimes has cost over $50,000.

BILLPOSTERS TAKE ADMIRABLE STAND

Rockland, Maine, Dec. 20.—The Boston fishing schooner Matiana was wrecked on Bay Ledges, near the Fox Islands Sunday night, and is a total loss. The crew of fifteen men, including Capt. Edward Bishop, put off in five dories, and after coming ten miles, reached here yesterday.

Drowned In Bath Tub.

Ontario's Gift to Col. Pellatt.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—A letter has been sent by Sir James Whitney, Premier of the province, to Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, A.D.C., C.V.O., colonel of the Queen's Own Rifles, asking him to accept, on behalf of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Queen's Own Rifles, four volumes of press clippings relating to the visit of the regiment to England a few months ago, and containing a record "of the many stirring and patriotic occurrences arising out of the visit and connected therewith."

"The Government is of opinion that, representing the Province of Ontario, it is its duty to express, when occasion offers what it believes to be the feeling of the poolpe of the province with reference to the undoubted patriotism and self-sacrifice displayed by yourself and every member of the splendid military organization of which you are the head," says the letter. "Actuated, therefore, by the feeling which I have indicated, we ask you to accept as a slight indication of it these four volumes containing the record—the very creditable record—of the memorable visit of the regiment to England during the past summer.

(Signed) "J. P. Whitney."

The press clippings are magnificently inserted, illustrated, indexed and bound; they are most comprehensive, embracing the newspaper criticism of the whole world. The four beautiful volumes will be placed amongst the archives of the Queen's Own Rifles, where it is needless to say, they will be highly prized.

A Cruel Fraud.

Kenora, Dec. 20.—Frances Paree, a native of France, was committed to the jail here for three months on Saturday, on a charge of false representations.

He called at a house in town early that morning, where a child was ill, and, representing himself as a priest and a physician, administered medicine of his own preparation and bestowed his blessing on his departure.

The serious illness of the child later and his acceptance of a $5 fee led to his exposure and arrest.

Mine Explosion.

Fairmont, W.Va., Dec. 20.—Two miners were killed by an explosion of gas in the Middleton mine of the Consolidated Coal Co., ten miles from Fairmont, yesterday. The explosion was local, and while much damage is reported to the mine, none of the other miners were injured. The bodies have been recovered.

TEN PERSONS ARE KILLED

Explosion in New York Destroys Property Worth $500,000.

New York, Dec. 20.—The very heart and backbone of Manhattan Island were shaken yesterday morning by a terrific explosion of illuminating gas in the auxiliary power house of the Grand Central station. Nine persons, two of them women, were killed, 125 were injured, and property was damaged to the extent of $500,000.

Four workmen, who are missing, are believed to have perished, and 96 of the 125 injured were removed to hospitals. Of these, eight may die.

Traffic on the New York Central Railroad ceased entirely for some hours and was disorganized for the rest of the day, but the new station itself, now in process of construction, was not damaged.

The dead are: Nicolo Gatucci, laborer; Patrick Jordan, laborer; E. B. Livermore, Pullman car inspector; C. McMarrow, laborer; Edith Offner, stenographer; Mary B. Pope; Charles Roberts, expressman; Frank Etagg, watchman; John Ryan, laborer.

The injured include laborers and other employes of the railroad, pedestrians, bystanders and others in the vicinity of the accident. A passing surface car, carrying seven passengers, was lifted from its trucks and hurled into an automobile running alongside. Four of the seven passengers were killed outright, but the chauffeur of the motor car was only cut and bruised.

The full amount of property damage is as yet unavailable, and may exceed the rough and conservative estimate of $500,000.

The force of the explosion ran north and south for two miles along the ricky ridge that is the backbone of the island, and east and west for a mile. Foundations were jarred, walls were shaken out of plumb, windows were blown in by the thousand, ceilings came crashing down on the heads of those beneath, and the pavements were littered with pulverized glass that topped the shoe soles.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The accouchement of Queen Mary is expected in March.

An unknown man in Toronto yesterday took poison and died.

A Calgary jeweler was robbed of $800 worth of precious stones.

Hon. W. S. Fielding is expected back in Ottawa this week. His health has greatly improved.

Etobicoke farmers raised a fund of $1,800 for William Tomilson, whose buildings were destroyed by fire.

Prof. Haultain said in Toronto that the value of Canada's mineral output would exceed that of agriculture.

The last of the British pollings too kplace yesterday, and will be declared to-day.

Mr. F. F. Pardee, M.P., was given a very flattering reception last night by his Sarnia fellow-citizens.

William Dickenson was killed by a buzz-saw near London, Ont., and Norman Kimball received injuries that may result fatally.

Ex-President P. Roy of the defunct St. Johns, Que., Bank is dead at the Hotel Dieu, Montreal, whither he was removed some weeks ago.

Approximately the revenue of the Toronto Customs House for this year, ending Dec. 31, is expected to exceed $14,000,000, which, as far as proceeds are concerned, will make it the biggest year in the history of this port.

It is rumored at Ottawa that Sir Louis Jette, Chief Justice of Quebec, may retire. Hon. Mr. Brodeur is mentioned as his probable successor, and Dr. Beland, M.P., would in that case join the Cabinet as Minister of Marine.

Auto Fee Goes Up.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—The Provincial Secretary's Department has increased the license fee for automobiles from $2 to $4 a year. The increase will go into effect on Jan. 1 next, and, including tourists' machines, will apply to nearly 7,000 motorists. The increase is due partly to the tardiness shown by many owners in renewing their fees each year. The markers were unchanged from year to year, and detection was thus more difficult. By the new regulations the fee of $4 will include two new markers which will be of enamel and a different color from those of the previous year. The extra fee will apply only to renewals, for under the old regulations it cost $4 when the car was first registered and given a number.

Far-Reaching Patent Changes.

Berlin, Dec. 20.—The Government yesterday introduced in the Reichstag an amendment to the law of patents, by which the authorities are given power to rescind a patent after three years, in the event that the article is manufactured chiefly outside Germany or the colonies.

A provision of the amendment makes it possible for the authorities to compel a patentee to license another person to develop his patent, should the holder not make use of it himself.

Mr. Fielding Worse.

Toronto, Dec. 20—An intimate friend of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, said yesterday: "I am afraid Mr. Fielding will never appear in the House of Commons again."

This is taken to mean that Mr. Fielding's physical condition is worse, not better, since his sojourn in the United States.

WINNIPEG CAR RIOT

Strike Sympathizers Throw Coal at the Trolleys—Five Arrests Made.

Winnipeg, Dec. 20.—The first real disturbance of any size since the street railway strike was declared took place shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon, and as a result five men are in the police station.

The first of the trouble took place near the western city limits, when a belt line car was subject to attack by strike sympathizers and many windows therein were broken.

It was on Logan avenue west, near the corner of Nena street, that the worst trouble took place. Thirteen cars had been sent out by the company, in response to a message, for the purpose of bringing the C.P.R. workmen from their work to the city. I front of the Stock Exchange Hotel fully 1,000 workmen strike sympathizers had congregated, apparently waiting for the cars to arrive. A shower of coal and other missiles caused the passengers and crew to vacate the cars. The work of destruction was carried on until every window in the thirteen cars had been broken, and one car had been derailed by a boulder placed on the track.

Matters were assuming a bad appearance when the police arrived in automobiles and with drawn batons dispersed the crowd, making five arrests. The damaged cars were taken back to the barns, escorted by policemen. A crowd of 200 men again collected, and some missiles were thrown, but the police had very little difficulty in dispersing them. None of the car men were hurt, but cries of "scab" were frequently heard.

Crushed In His Skull.

Detroit, Dec. 20.—Frank Kniffen, aged 35, a street car conductor, formerly of Simcoe, Ont., was killed while he slept in his home, 375 Lemay avenue, Fairview, early yesterday morning, his skull being crushed in with an axe which had inflicted six frightful wounds. His wife, Nellie Kniffen, who also came here from Simcoe, is held at police headquarters, and forms a pathetic picture with her four children, who are with her in a cell.

The axe with which Kniffen was killed was found in the shed about thirty feet behind the cottage. The blood had been washed off the blade, but there was plenty on the handle. There were footprints in the snow from the kitchen door to the shed. The police measured them, and found they fitted Mrs. Kniffen's shoes exactly.

The police say she was insanely jealous of her husband, and feared he was going to place her in an asylum.

Yesterday morning at about 5.30, Mrs. Kniffen went to a neighbor's and told them that her husband had died. The neighbors called the police.

Mrs. Kniffen's story was that she heard moans from her husband about three o'clock in the morning, but did not explain why she didn't summon aid. Dr. Lounsbury, who has been the family physician four or five years, said there is no doubt that Mrs. Kniffen has been insane four years. On occasions she ran up and down in front of the house screaming, with her hair flowing in the breeze. Mrs. Kniffen had often accused her husband of flirting with other women. A month ago she left him and went to Simcoe. He followed her there and brought her back.

Five Hundred Dead In 'Quake.

West Colon, Dec. 20.—Despatches from La Libtertad, Salvador, received here yesterday, declares that earthquake shocks throughout Salvador have subsided after causing at least five hundred deaths on islands of the Pacific coast. The sinking of a large island in the Illepango Lagoon, off Salvador, drowned 200 persons, many of these having fled from smaller islands. Scores of small islands slid into the sea when the earth tremors began last Tuesday, the outer group beyond the Lagoon disappearing first. As the shock increased, whole groups, formerly two or more small land patches, were hurled into the ocean and the natives fled towards the main land. Most of these took refuge on the larger Lagoon Islands.

Descriptions of the sinking of Illepango Island reveal the desperate dash of the natives for the high ridge of land as the island slowly settled into the ocean. The whole population was thrown into hysterical excitement and the dash for fishing boats on the shores, resulted in the death of numerous men and women, only the strongest getting possession of the boats and survived. In the scramble for small boats the crafts were wrecked and made unseaworthy.

Abolished Fraternities.

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 20—The Board of Education yesterday formally abolished the five fraternities and five societies in the high schools, on the ground that they "promote exclusive and undemocratic class distinctions, fix premature and artificial social standards, detract seriously from the regular work of the school, stimulate extravagant habits, and involve a burdensome expense."

Michael Cudahy's Estate.

Chicago, Dec. 20.—Michael Cudahy, founder of the Cudahy firm of meat packers, left an estate worth $10,000,000, according to the will which was filed yesterday. Of this $9,000,000 is in personal property and the remainder is real estate.

Lulu Glaser Wants Divorce.

New York, Dec. 20.—Another stage romance was wrecked on the rocks of matrimony yesterday. Ralph Herz, the actor, admitted that his wife, Lulu Glaser, had left him and that she wanted to get a divorce.

BANK MEN ACQUITTED

Charge of Conspiracy in Lindsay is Dropped.

Lindsay, Dec. 20.—A. B. McGill, former manager, and J. L. Coulter and J. J. Fleury, ex-employes of the Farmers' Bank of this town, were yesterday afternoon declared not guilty of the charge of conspiring to defraud the bank. The verdict followed upon the announcement of N. F. Davidson, K.C., who has been acting for the prosecution, of the intention of the authorities not to press the case.

Mr. Davidson, after stating the new facts that developed in the case during its progress, and the effect of the adverse rulings of the court as to evidence necessary to prove the crown's case, proceeded to say:

"This puts the case in a position where I considered it my duty to discuss the whole situation with the attorney-General's Department when in Toronto, and I am now free to exercise my best discretion on the whole situation and to adopt the only course which seems reasonable and proper."

After very fully and carefully outlining the exact position of the crown and detailing the effect of the rejection of certain evidence and of some newer evidence that developed, Mr. Davidson concluded:

"I therefore take the responsibility of offering in further evidence in any of the courts, and of now consenting on behalf of the crown, to a verdict of not guilty being returned and being forthwith entered upon the records of this court."

M. K. Cowan, K. C., who with Thos. Stewart of Lindsay, represented the defendants, asked leave to make a few remarks, which the judge permitted.

Mr. Cowan began to review the evidence of the crown and to call attention to its alleged weakness, and when Mr. Davidson interrupted and called attention to the unprecedented action, stating that the crown would not have consented to withdraw the case if it had known that the counsel for the defence would have referred to the matter in such a way.

Judge Harding said the verdict was being recorded by the clerk, and he saw no reason why Mr. Cowan should not be allowed to make a few remarks. His honor also made a few observations after directing the jury to acquit the prisoners. He said the defendants left the court without any stain on their characters. Then he spoke of the honesty of all the witnesses save one, and particularly emphasized "the honest frankness" of Chief Accountant Fitzgibbon.

Had a Bad Temper.

Goderich, Dec. 20.—That the said John F. Vanstone came to his death by beating at the hands of his father, George Vanstone, before 10 o'clock on the night of Dec. 15, in the Town of Goderich."

This was the verdict rendered by the jury after fifteen minutes' deliberation yesterday afternoon, after hearing the evidence into the murder of Freddie Vanstone, who was beaten to death with a broomstick by his father.

Since George Vanstone has been imprisoned in the jail here for the murder of his little son Freddie he seems to be entirely indifferent to the awful position he is in. He is unconcerned with visitors, and has eaten hearty meals and slept well ever since his incarceration last Thursday night. The officials of the jail say that the man is absolutely not responsible for his terrible crime, or else he would act otherwise.

Popular opinion, however, is against Vanstone; everyone thinks that he was not goaded on to commit the crime by an insane frenzy, but was influenced entirely by his temper. Men in the neighborhood had frequently been called in before the day of the tragedy to remonstrate with the husband in one of these tantrums, but could do nothing with the man. The sounds of screaming children and of blows were common sounds issuing from the house.

P.A.Y.E. System Must Go.

Toronto, Dec. 20.—Abolition of the P.A.Y.E. system was the result of yesterday's meeting of the Ontario Railway Board with representatives of the Toronto Railway Co. and the city. The company agreed to the board's suggestion that the new system should be continued only on the large new cars that have the proper receptacle for fares until, on a month's time the board can take evidence respecting a suitable style of car for a standard for the Toronto service, the city and the company engineers to consult together in the meantime.

The company also met with a reverse in the criminal courts when the grand jury of the Sessions Court returned an indictment charging neglect and maintaining a common nuisance, growing out of the killing of two small boys recently and the overcrowded cars generally.

Poured Whisky Down Rat Holes.

Chatham, Dec. 20.—License Inspector French has returned from Tupperville, where he and two constables raided a blind pig, operated by a man named Armstrong. They broke into the Tupperville Temperance Hotel and caught Armstrong in the act of pouring jugs of whisky down rat holes. Armstrong made his escape, but a warrant will likely be issued for his arrest.

Must Not Discriminate.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Judge Richardson of the Superior Court yesterday decided that the superintendent of public buildings of Boston in awarding contracts has no right to discriminate in favor of a firm which employs only union labor, and has enjoined the carrying out of a contract given to a firm not the lowest bidder.

BUCHANAN VERY VAGUE; CAN TELL LITTLE ABOUT PERSONS IN OXFORD CASE

Investigation in Inquiry at Woodstock Develops the Fact That the County Paid $2,007.80 for a Road Which Rightfully Belonged to it.

Woodstock, Dec. 20.—That Oxford County was saddled with the expense of buying out the Ingersoll, North Oxford North Zorra and East Nissouri gravel plank roadway at a cost of $2,007.80, when it should have come into possession of the Township of North Oxford through default of the owners to keep it in proper repair, was brought out yesterday afternoon by E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., who is prosecuting the Oxford County graft enquiry.

This, amongst about a dozen other charges, are held against M. T. Buchanan, who was chairman of the "toll roads" committee of the county council in 1904, for explanation. Although the county valued the roadway at only $500 and voted that sum towards its purchase Buchanan, it appears, brought the committee down to Toronto and closed a deal for $2,007.80 with one Robert Tate, who was purported by documents of assignment to be the owner. The existence of this man Tate, Mr. Johnston doubted, and finally told Buchanan so. Forgery and personification by somebody is suspected by Mr. Johnston, and he has been informed by private detectives that a man can be produced from Chicago who will substantiate this belief.

There is a missing link in the title this man Tate held to the road. A lady in England named Elizabeth Cartwright held a mortgage against the property. Isaiah Danks of Chicago claiming power of attorney for her, executed the sale of the mortgage to R. J. Bowman of Chicago, who again transferred to Robert Tate, "merchant" of Toronto. The one document of the whole outfit is missing, namely, that giving Danks the power of attorney for Mrs. Cartwright and the title to the land is incomplete without it. This, the senior counsel suspects, was a forgery.

"Who was Mr. Tate?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"The owner of the road."

"But, who was he?"

"Roert Tate."

"How did you know he was Robert Tate?"

"Only because I had business with him."

"What was he in Toronto?"

"An accountant."

"Where was his office?"

"In Toronto," was the stubborn answer.

Mr. Johnston talked sharply to Buchanan, who finally slid into another groove that a man named Mills had informed him that Tate owned the road. He was just as vague about Mills; had met him in Toronto, on the street, did not know what street.

An agreement was produced in Buchanan's handwriting, dated April 5, and witnessed by John Blake.

"Who is John Blake?" asked the lawyer.

"I don't know."

Despite dozens of questions and suggestions, Buchanan couldn't recollect how the deed and affidavits of the executor was drawn up in the office of Rowell, Reid, Wood & Gibson, Toronto.

NOT FIFTEEN WHEN FIRST MARRIED

So Mother Testified of Her Daughter Who is Charged With Bigamy---First Husband Deserted Family and was not Seen Again

The preliminary hearing of Harvey and Hannah Ellis, who are charged with bigamy, was held at Havelock yesterday, before His Worship County Magistrate Edmison.

County Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution and Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for the defence.

Seven witnesses were heard, two of which were the parents of the woman.

ADMITTED TO BAIL.

The accused were admitted to bail, and will appear before the county judge for trial. The amounts were $500 and two sureties of $250 in each case.

FIRST MARRIAGE.

Hannah Rebecca Clapper was the maiden name of the woman. She was married to John Edwin Clark at Havelock, on the 9th of March, 1895, by the Rev. C. H. Coon. At that time, so Rev. Mr. Coon testified at the hearing yesterday, her age was given as eighteen.

The mother swore positively that her daughter's age on the occasion of that marriage was under fifteen.

SECOND MARRIAGE.

The next marriage took place at Marmora, by Rev. J. E. Moore, on October 24th, of this year. The parties, who are now to be tried for bigamy, were married on that date.

The first wife of Harvey Ellis died some time ago.

HUSBAND DESERTED HER.

The children of John Edwin Clark were taken from his wife during the investigation by the officers of the Children's Aid Society, and brought here to the Shelter. The mother claims that for a period of from ten to twelve years before her marriage to Harvey Ellis, in October last, she had not seen her first husband, and that he had not contributed one cent during all that time to the support of his children.

She admits that at various times she heard reports about him, but that was all.

COULD MARRY AGAIN.

Some time ago, she says, legal advice gave her to understand that she could marry again, on account of her husband's desertion and absence of seven years.

WINNIPEG RIOTS GETTING SERIOUS

Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, Dec. 20.—Rioting in connection with the strike of the street car employees here is becoming so widespread and serious that a deputation of citizens to-day asked the mayor to station a company of militia in the city.

However, many citizens are in sympathy with the strikers and are wearing badges marked, "We walk for a square deal."

Three cars were derailed last night and the strike-breakers were compelled to flee. The strikers parade the streets every day.

IMPORTED CHINAMEN FOR CANADIAN RAILWAY LABOR

Mr. George Manning, of Vancouver, is in the city for a few days on a visit to his brother, Mr. Ed. Manning, 658 George street, of Cressman's, and came east on a very novel and unusual errand. Mr. Manning, who among others, was appointed to take charge of two hundred Chinamen who came directly from China and were landed at Vancouver. The celestials were there entrained and taken right across the continent to Montreal, and thence to Halifax, N.S.

The Chinamen, on their arrival at Halifax, were distributed to various centres, where they will be employed on the railroads and in Government work. Mr. Manning reports a very uneventful trip, having no trouble on the way with his large charge. He has only been in Vancouver about one year, and will return in about a week, after renewing old acquaintances in this city, where he is extremely well known.

BY-LAWS WILL BE DISCUSSED

An interesting meeting of the Board of Trade will be held to-night at eight o'clock in the City Council Chamber. The Bonner Worth and Dittman bylaws will be discussed and other matters of importance and interest will also be taken up by the Board.

The general public is invited.

THE BIRTH RATE

At the annual meeting of the British Medical Association in London the falling off in the birth rate in Great Britain was discussed, and the figures were considered alarming. Thirty years ago 35.4 births were recorded for every thousand of the population, and in the last three years the average went down to 26.6. In Ontario the number of births per thousand of population, according to the last Government report, is 25.5, below the three years' average in Great Britain, which caused the comment in the Medical Association.

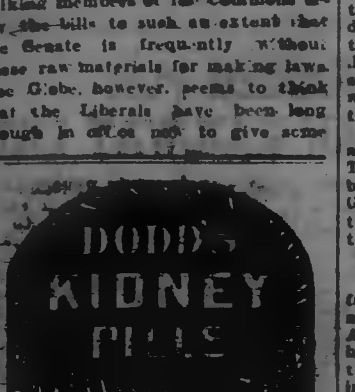
In France the rate is 20.1 births per thousand inhabitants, but in Germany it is 23.4. If the figures for Great Britain are such as to cause alarm, Ontario has something to think about.

SECOND CHAMBERS

Britain is not alone in discussions as to the constitution of the second chamber of the Legislature, for on this side of the Atlantic the question is receiving more or less attention in Canada and the United States. In Britain the subject of reform is more advanced, for all parties agree that there must be a change, although they do not agree as to what form the change will take. Lord Rosebery takes the abolition of the hereditary principles as being a fact accomplished, not because a law has been enacted abolishing the hereditary right to legislate, but because all parties are of one accord in saying that it must go. The great majority of the peers now sit in the House as hereditary peers—that is, they have inherited the right or, having had it bestowed upon them by the Sovereign, they will transmit it with their titles. The minority is composed of Irish and Scotch peers, chosen by the peers of Ireland and Scotland to represent them and two archbishops and twenty-four bishops. With the abolition of the hereditary right to a seat in the House, an entire change will take place, but upon what lines is not known, as the Government has not developed, or at least divulged, a policy on that point.

In the United States the Senate is composed of two senators from each State. This gives the smaller States a more than proportionate representation, comparing their population with that of the larger States. But that is not what has caused the question of the constitution of the Senate to be raised. The senators are elected by the State Legislatures, and there is a demand for their election by direct vote of the people. In every national platform of the Labor party since 1892 there has been a plank demanding this, and in the Presidential campaign of 1904, 1906 and 1908 there has been such a plank in the Democratic platforms. A writer in the North American Review believes that at no distant day the question promises to become one in the national politics of the United States.

In Canada the Senate goes on quietly with its work which the senators complain is not heavy enough, for the talking members of the Commons delay ~~the~~ bills to such an extent that the Senate is frequently without these raw materials for making laws. The Globe, however, seems to think that the Liberals have been long enough in office now to give some attention to redeeming their promises for a reform of the Senate. It advocates the abolition of life senatorships, but whether the question will be taken up by the Government, and if so, what they propose as a substitute, remains to be seen. Some Liberals go further and express a preference for the abolition of the Senate. This would, no doubt, be opposed by the Maritime Provinces. When Confederation was established the then Dominion was divided into three groups, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and each was given equal representation of twenty-four members in the Senate, with a view of affording special protection for their respective interests, and when the Maritime Provinces object to the accordance with the constitution to destroy the Senate in which they have this advantage in representation. The Liberals were very emphatic in their demands for Senate reform when in opposition, but exceedingly slow in taking up the question when in office, and they will probably allow it to remain in background still.



EDITORIAL NOTES

Lord Minto has been made a Knight of the Garter, the highest order of British knighthood. Canadians will be pleased that the former Governor-General has been thus distinguished.

The House of Lords is not as obstreperous as our Senate. The Peers refused to pass some laws, but the Senators refuse to be bound by a law which they helped to enact, and ignore provisions of the Civil Service Act in the payment of some of their officials. Let us hope that they will not compel a general election on the question.

The Ottawa Journal says:—"Some Ottawa people felt eight or ten years ago that the assessment rolls ought to be published in pamphlet form, and got their way. The result was a bulky volume which cost a considerable amount of civic money, and we understand that an excited public subsequently made demands for two copies."

WORST CROP SINCE 1810

Insects Destroy European Vineyards - Wine Output Will be Small

Estimates as to the European output of wine show that the 1910 season has been disastrous.

Excessive humidity in the early spring and summer engendered every form of destructive insect life, which blighted and withered the grapes. In many vineyards, especially those of France and Germany, few perfect bunches were to be seen.

A ONE-TENTH CROP

In the more northern wine-growing of Europe, the quantity is so insignificant that the quality of 1910 is commercially of small importance. It is said that the year is the worst since 1810. In Germany, along the Rhine and Moselle, there will barely be one-tenth of an average crop. In the Champagne and Saumur districts in the Burgundy and Chablis districts of France the vintage is positively a blank. In Cognac no brandy will be distilled this year. In the Medoc and other districts of Bordeaux, more favored than any other part of France, there will be little more than one-third of the average quantities of claret and Sauterne made.

PORTUGUESE AVERAGE

In Austria-Hungary, the crop is estimated at one-third, and in Italy not much more than one-half. In Sicily there will be about two-thirds of an average from the old vines, but the young vines, planted since the invasion of phylloxera, are producing well, so that the island's total crop will probably be as in 1909. In northern Spain and also in the south and sherry districts there may be from a half to three-quarters of a crop.

The Portuguese yield is nearly average, and the quality is good. Thousands of tons of grapes have been sent from Lisbon to France and Germany, whose idle presses will thus have been occupied and the duty on imported wines escaped.

OUTSIDE EUROPE

Outside Europe, crops have been fairly good. Madeira's vintage is nearly average, and of good quality. Algeria has an excellent vintage both in quantity and quality, while the wines have doubled and in some instances trebled in value. Fifty years ago Algeria produced no wine. Now the output is nearly 200,000,000 gallons annually. Nearly all this is consumed in France, where it is in greater request and more highly appreciated than many of the cheaper home productions. Being grown in a French colony, this wine enters France duty free.

How Parties Have Altered

The Many Changes in the Complexion of the Government Since the Election of 1868

It was not until after 1868 that more than two parties were known to the House of Commons, though even then the Liberals were sub-divided into Whigs and Radicals. In 1870, however, the Home Rule movement was started in Dublin and soon gained considerable support, with the result that in 1874 fifty-six Home Rulers were elected to Parliament, this number being increased in 1880 to sixty-three. The contest of 1885 saw the Home Rule party eighty-six strong, the leader being Mr. Parnell. In the spring of the following year Mr. Gladstone declared himself in favor of Home Rule, and a general election followed, the Liberals going down to defeat.

MR. JOHN REDMOND
Leader of the Irish Nationalists

The new Parliament consisted of 316 Conservatives, 192 Liberals, 77 Liberal-Unionists, and 85 Nationalists, as the Irish Home Rulers were called. The Liberal-Unionists worked cordially with the Conservatives, hence the latter carried on the government of the country for six years. An effort to bring the Gladstonians and Unionists together failed, but the relations between Mr. Gladstone and the Nationalists continued cordial. A decree made in the Divorce Court proceedings instituted against Mr. Parnell disturbed the tranquility of the Nationalists, however, fifty-four of the eighty-five revolting against his leadership. Mr. Parnell, who had gone farther with the Home Rule scheme than Mr. Gladstone was prepared to endorse, died in 1891, and was succeeded in the leadership of the Nationalists by Mr. John Redmond.

The general election of 1892 soon followed, the Liberals making great gains, as the following figures show: Conservatives, 268; Liberals, 275; Liberal-Unionists, 46; Nationalists and Parnellites, 81.

The Liberal and Nationalist alliance held well together, but in 1894 Mr. Gladstone resigned and was succeeded by Lord Rosebery. Upon the defeat of his government in June of that year on the Ammunition question in Committee on Army Estimates, Lord Rosebery resigned, Lord Salisbury then forming an administration. His Cabinet as ultimately constituted consisted of nineteen members, of whom fifteen were Conservative. The dissolution of 1895 marked the disappearance of Mr. Gladstone from Parliamentary life.

The general election of that year gave the Unionist coalition a majority of 152, the various units of the Commons having the following strength: Conservatives, 340; Liberals, 177; Liberal-Unionists, 71; Nationalists and Parnellites, 82.

Rosebery Steps Out

Lord Rosebery continued to lead the Liberal party until 1896, when, as a result of the agitation arising out of the Armenian atrocities, he resigned, and was soon followed by Sir William Harcourt, who led the Liberal Opposition in the Commons. Eventually Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was chosen to succeed him, and led the party through the session of 1899. The Boer War of 1899 directed attention to South Africa, the general election of 1900 turning almost altogether on that question, whether it had been just and inevitable or the reverse, and whether the Government's policy as to the settlement should be upheld. The result of the election was an endorsation of the Government of Lord Salisbury, Conservatives having 334, Liberals 186, Liberal-Unionists 68 and Nationalists 82. The Government majority was therefore 134.

Lord Salisbury resigned on July 11, after nearly fourteen years as Premier, Mr. A. J. Balfour accepting the post as Prime Minister on July 12. The years 1903-1904 were taken up chiefly with the Fiscal Question, Mr. Chamberlain's proposals, though generally endorsed by Mr. Balfour, causing much difference of opinion among Ministerialists. In September, 1903, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Ritchie, Lord George Hamilton, Lord Balfour of Burleigh and Mr. Arthur Elliot resigned, being quickly followed by the Duke of Devonshire. Mr. Chamberlain wrote that he had resigned that he might devote himself to explaining and popularising the cause he had at heart. In May, 1904, the Liberal-Unionist Council was re-constituted and carried a resolution in favor of Fiscal Reform. The Council also opposed Home Rule. At the end of November, 1905, as a result of a long series of Liberal victories at the bye-elections, the Government majority was only 69, compared with 152 in 1895 and 130 in 1900. Mr. Balfour in 1905, speaking at Newcastle, said he believed all Unionists could agree on the Fiscal question. The policy he described as (1) Retaliation, to remove the restrictions in foreign markets on British industries, and (2) the calling of a free conference and the attempt to deal in a permanent and satisfactory fashion with a closer commercial union of the various members of the Empire. He added, "I have never been, and am not, on the Protectionist side." Mr. Balfour resigned on December 4th, 1905, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman formed a Government on December 10. The general election of January, 1906, was watched with great interest.

A Liberal Sweep

The Liberals swept practically all the great towns of the country except Birmingham, Liverpool and Sheffield. In fact there was a great electoral revolution, such as had not been seen since 1832. The majority of the new members were Free Traders who probably had a majority of 376 over the supporters of Fiscal Reform. Lists published after the elections classified 16 of the 156 Unionists as Free Traders 36 as adopting Mr. Balfour's official programme, and 102 as followers of Mr. Chamberlain's policy of Tariff Reform. On February 15th, shortly after the election, the Unionists carried a vote of confidence in Mr. Balfour as leader of the party. Early in 1908 illness compelled Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman to resign the position of Prime Minister, and Mr. Asquith was at once entrusted with the reins of government. A feature of the changes he made was the promotion to important posts of some of the younger men of the party, some of whom, notably Mr. Lloyd-George and Mr. Winston Churchill, were in the forefront of the election campaign in December and January last.

Fight With the Lords

Among the larger measures undertaken by the Asquith Ministry were the introduction of old-age pensions, the settlement of the education controversy and the reform of the licensing laws. The third question was vetoed by the House of Lords, which lent great vigor to the demand of the Liberal party for some curtailment of the power of the Peers. This agitation quickly reached a climax when the Government's Finance Bill of 1909, familiarly known as Lloyd-George's Budget, which occupied 57½ days in the Commons, was sent back by the Lords "until it had been submitted to the judgment of the country." Shortly thereafter Mr. Asquith announced the dissolution of Parliament, and the election of January, 1910, followed.

This produced four distinct changes in the composition of the Commons, which the Pall Mall Gazette sets forth as follows:

1. It deprived the Liberal Government of an independent majority;
2. It re-introduced an an Opposition of Normal Parliamentary strength;
3. It diminished the influence of the Labor party;
4. It brought about a definite and substantial cleavage in the ranks of Irish Nationalism.

Rev. J. D. McLaughlin, pastor of the Galt Baptist church, has resigned.

J. ALLEN BAKER

A Canadian Who Has Become a Champion of Public Ownership of Public Utilities in London

Prominent among Canadians who will sit in the new British Parliament is Mr. J. Allen Baker, a member of the London County Council. Mr. Baker is a native of the Bay of Quinte district and was educated at the Trenton Collegiate Institute, Trenton, Ont. At the age of twenty he entered his father's firm, having its headquarters first at Kingston, Ont., and later at Windsor, Ont., and Detroit, Mich., and was ultimately removed to London, England.

When in 1894, Lord Rosebery on becoming Premier, resigned his seat in the London County Council, of which he was also chairman, Mr. Baker was elected to succeed him in the representation of East Finsbury. He won the "greatest victory for the cause of the people of Finsbury ever known," as he put it, at the bye-election in June, 1905. He had been Finsbury's County Council representative and unsuccessful candidate in 1900. It was just at this juncture that a syndicate of South African mining capitalists, prominent among whom were Alfred Beit and the late Cecil Rhodes, was strenuously endeavoring to get control of the streets of London for traction purposes, and the matter had already been referred to the Council's Highway committee for consideration. When finally this committee's report recommending the granting of the franchise asked for, on terms favorable to the syndicate, it encountered Mr. Baker's vigorous opposition. He laid before the council such a mass of practical evidence, including a full copy of the then recently made agreement between the City of Toronto and the Toronto Railway Co., showing the immense value of traction franchises, that the committee's report was referred back for a further consideration. This resulted in a desired delay, and soon afterward the London County Council elections returned a progressive majority favorable to public ownership of public utilities. Since that time, as chairman of the Highways Committee, notwithstanding tremendous opposing difficulties, Mr. Baker has been a leader and champion of public ownership of public utilities in the world's metropolis, and has achieved remarkable success when the obstacles to his work are taken into account.

ONE MAN TO SHOW FOR $300,000

Since 1902 the St. Louis Browns and the Cardinals have spent for recruits an average of probably $15,000 each annually. In that time the teams have averaged 20 new men per season. Each year, besides those given extended trials, a number of youngsters are experimented with, just to see what's in them. In ten years the two teams have tried out close to 400 men, and yet Ed. Konetchy stands alone as a man of exceptional value developed out of this small army of questionable talent, costing nearly $300,000.

TWO BUILDERS OF MANITOBA.

Robert Ironside and Thomas Duncan Were Two Who Helped,

Two men who died recently in the eastern part of this continent were intimately connected with the upbuilding of the Middle West of Canada. The first was Mr. Robert Ironside, of Montreal, and the second, Mr. Thomas Duncan, Canadian Immigration agent at Syracuse, New York.

Mr. Ironside has been called "Canada's Cattle King," and, as the Montreal end of the great cattle exporting firm of Gordon, Ironside, and Fares, the title was not inappropriate. Both Mr. Ironside and Mr. Duncan entered the Manitoba Legislature in 1888 on the Liberal side, when Greenway swept the province with his national school issue. Mr. Ironside was an implement, grain, and cattle dealer from Manitou, and Mr. Duncan was a blacksmith from Morden, both towns being in Southern Manitoba. Both were big, muscular men, active both in body and brain, but here the resemblance ended. Mr. Ironside was essentially a man of business, who apparently like to sit and dream dreams, and then plan in the quiet of his office for the carrying of them out. He was not fond of talking in public, and seemed to be rather doubtful of those who were. Parliamentary life was irksome to him, and after one Parliamentary term he retired to attend to his own great interests. One day he said to the writer: "I hate sitting in this stuffy chamber listening to talk. I'd rather be out punching steers." That Mr. Ironside dreamed dreams and punched steers to some purpose is shown by the fact that it was not very long after that before the business turnover of the firm with which he was connected was considerably larger than the amount handled by the Treasurer of the Province of Manitoba. Though he was undoubtedly a great business man and a successful one, yet he always seemed more ready to listen to what other people had to say than to give his own views. He had a curious way of asking apparently whimsical questions, but when you thought them over afterward, you would see that it was only just his curious way of looking at life. When the business of the firm got so large as to necessitate some one living in Montreal to look after the shipping, Mr. Ironside moved there, and Mr. Gordon remained in Winnipeg to deal with the ranching end.

Mr. Duncan was a man of different temperament. When he first appeared in the House, some of the Opposition thought they would have some fun with the blacksmith from Morden, but they were badly mistaken. He had built upon his early schooling by diligent reading, and when he came to answer them, they found that he had the classic works of English literature, and particularly those of Scottish literature, at his command. Particularly could he quote Burns most aptly. He developed into a ready speaker, and, while not eloquent, nobody ever doubted that Tom Duncan meant what he said, and this, no doubt, had much to do with his success as the exponent of the advantages of Canada in various immigration fields.

In the death of these Southern Manitobans Canada loses two good citizens, who, in their several ways, did much to build up Canada.

The Two Charlies.

Among those who came in contact with the railway officials of Canada there are no better known pair than "Charlie" Macpherson and "Charlie" Foster, of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Both men hail from St. John, N.B., where they did their first work for this great railway corporation. Each in turn went from St. John to Toronto, where each made a "hit." Mr. Macpherson went to Winnipeg, where he has repeated his Toronto success. A few years later, Mr. Foster went from Toronto to Vancouver. Now comes the announcement that the passenger traffic of the West, recently in charge of Mr. Ussher, is to be placed wholly under the two "Charlies." Macpherson will manage the lines between Fort William and Revelstoke, and Foster all traffic west of that point.

Urbanity, courtesy and good-fellowship are the qualities which distinguish these two successful officials. At the same time, each has shown his ability to handle large business in a large way. The man with urbanity does not always have exceptional ability, and the capacity for much hard work, but when he does he is a winner. Each of these men fulfils the higher conditions. The public has always had the confidence in them which is again so clearly exhibited by the C.P.R. executive in making these latest promotions.

Her Gain—His Loss.

"Lady," said the fortune-teller, shuffling the cards for the fifteenth time, "in addition to there being something for the house, a little money, a letter, and something better, the Fates decree that you will visit foreign lands, that you will mingle in the court life of kings and queens, and that, conquering all rivals, you will marry the man of your choice—a tall, dark, handsome gent, of distinguished ancestry—in fact, a peer of the realm."

"Will he be young?" queried the fair visitor, clasping her hands together eagerly.

"Young," fawned the fortune-teller, "and rich."

Excitedly, the fair visitor clutched the seer's arm.

"But how," she cried, "am I to get rid of my present husband?"

A True Gift For Fiction.

In a New Brunswick village a town character who preferred emphasis to the verities was a witness in a petty trial involving an auger. He positively identified it as the property of the parties to the suit.

"But," asked the attorney for the other side, "do you swear that you know this auger?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long have you known it?" he continued.

"I have known that auger," said the witness, impressively, "ever since it was a gimlet."

Easy.

"Say, I've bought a motor car."

"Oh, that explains it."

"Explains what?"

"I'd been wondering what became of your watch and your diamond scarf pin."

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

WHAT IS A LADY?

What is a lady? Oh, not a pert miss
Greeting her friends with a smirk and a kiss,
Calling them "angel" and "darling" and "dear,"
Always affected, and never sincere!
Dressed to perfection, rouged, perfumed and curled,
Known not beyond her own frivolous world;
Courted by many, but honored by few,
Pitied and shunned by the honest and true!

Learning false arts at "Frivolity's School,"
The toast of the rake, and the fop, and the fool;
Flaunting her beauty at concerts and balls,
Skating-rinks, operas, afternoon calls!
Singing "slang songs" in unmusical tones,
Or whispering foul scandals with "Dear Mrs. Jones,"
Whose lips sweetly murmur, "I thought it was so!"
Whose heart cries, "The idler! I wish she would go!"

Tattling, backbiting, all the long day,
Shedding no blossoms of truth on her way;
A poor silly butterfly, foolish and vain,
Shrinking in terror from sorrow or pain.
Where is the sweetness, the womanly grace,
That giveth a charm to the homeliest face?
Not in this "Leader of Fashion," and so
She is no lady, dear girls, you must know!

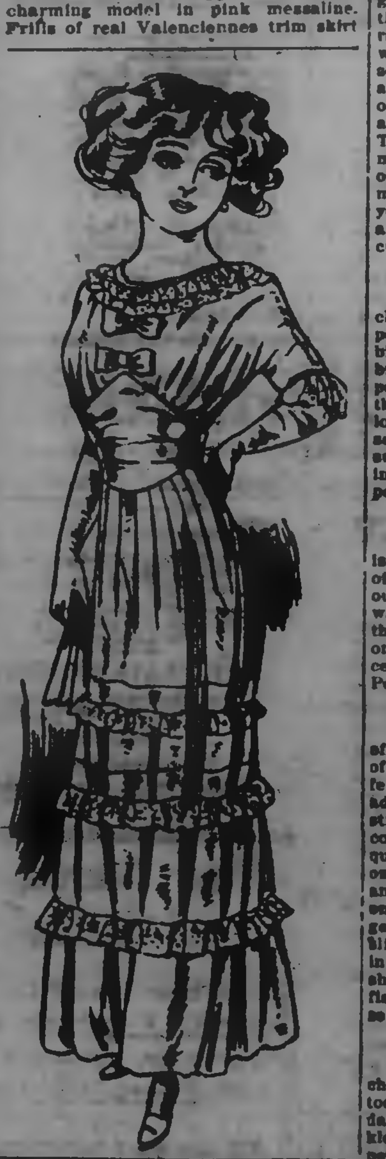
What is a lady? An angel of light,
Toiling for others from morning till night!
Modest, retiring, wise, thoughtful and kind,
Gracious, benevolent, pure, and refined!
Bearing her gifts to the cottager's door,
Honored and loved in the homes of the poor.
Too sacred her smiles for the fool or the rake,
Though wise men and true men would die for her sake.

Dignified, sensible, patient, and brave,
Simple and natural, tender and grave!
Greeting the weary with soft, loving words,
The friend of the children, the flowers, and the birds.
There is love in her glance, there is balm in her smile;
Her lips breathe no scandal, her heart knows no guile;
By the side of the cradle she trills her sweet song,
Busy, industrious, all the day long.

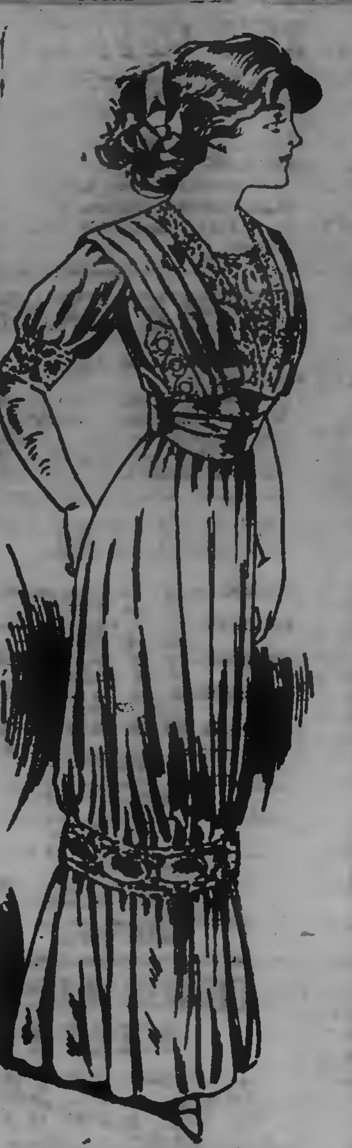
What is a lady? A blessing to life,
All worthy the title of "mother" or "wife";
Trained in the school of religion and truth,
A comfort to age, and a guardian to youth.
Black, brown, or golden-haired, she must be fair,
Empress or peasant, her life is a prayer,
Be she in satins, or home-spun arrayed,
This is the lady that Nature hath made.

PRETTY DANCING FROCK

For the holiday dances, the college girl needs pretty, simple evening frocks and we suggest to-day a charming model in pink messaline. Frills of real Valenciennes trim skirt at intervals below bias bands of the silk, put on as indicated. A double frill of lace finishes the neck of the otherwise plain bodice, made kimono style, and the high-shaped girdle is of the material.



Ellen Ash, tried in the County Court at Belleville, was sentenced to a year in the Mercer for bigamy.



SIMPLE PARTY FROCK

Extremely simple and appropriate is a gown of this type for a young girl. Any of the soft, inexpensive silks will answer admirably. A pretty combination is a pale yellow silk, with white lace and girdle of light blue silk.

ENGLISH DISHES

Bonita Pudding

Quarter of a pound of castor sugar, two eggs, two lemons, six sheets of gelatine. Beat the sugar and yolks of the eggs together until quite smooth, then add the grated peel of one lemon and the juice of two. Put the gelatine to dissolve in a tablespoonful of hot water, and whilst it is dissolving, beat the whites of egg to a stiff froth. Now add the gelatine to the other ingredients, and lastly add the beaten whites. Whisk it well together until it begins to set, then pour into a glass dish and decorate with whipped cream, cherries, and angelica.

Currant Snow with Custard

Half a pound of loaf sugar, two whites of eggs, two ounces of best currants, three-quarters of an ounce of gelatine, one lemon. Rub the sugar on the lemon, and put it, with the currants, into a stewpan, with a pint of water and the gelatine. Stir until dissolved; then strain in the lemon-juice and let it get cool. Whisk the whites of eggs stiff, add this to the mixture, and continue to beat until it thickens. Then turn at once into a wetted jelly mould, and, when properly set, turn out into a dish. Prepare a custard made with half a pint of milk, two yolks of eggs, one ounce of sugar, and a little lemon-rind and serve with the currant shape when cold.

Tomato and Blackberry Jam

The blackberries should be picked clean, dry, and sound. Allow half a pound of tomatoes to every pound of blackberries, and one pound of coarse brown sugar to every one and a half pounds of fruit. Crush the tomatoes through a sieve coarse enough to allow the seeds to pass into the preserving-pan, add the blackberries and sugar, and simmer for an hour, keeping the mixture well-stirred. Put into pots when cold.

Spanish Steak

One pound of steak, one large Spanish onion, four tomatoes, three ounces of macaroni, one ounce of flour, one ounce of butter, one pint of stock or water, salt and pepper to taste. Put the butter in a saucepan and let it one hour. Dish up with meat in the centre, macaroni and tomatoes round. Pour the gravy over.

Lemon Solid

Half an ounce of gelatine, one pint of milk, half a pound of sugar, the rind of one lemon. Boil all together for a few minutes, strain, and cool a little; add three yolks of eggs (beaten), stirring all the time. When nearly cold, add juice of lemon. Stir frequently and pour into mould when just oni, broken up small, and simmer for and let it boil. Put back the steak, add onion, tomatoes cut in halves macarget quite hot; slice the onion and fry slice on to a dish, put a little milk into the baking-dish, and give it a shake over the fire, then pour over fish. Place the oysters round and serve.

Aberdeen Eggs

Three eggs, one dessertspoonful of chopped parsley, three rounds of toast, salt and pepper. Grease three dariole moulds with butter, and sprinkle the inside with parsley, salt and pepper. Put an egg into each mould, without breaking the yolk, and place in a saucepan containing enough water to reach halfway up the moulds. Steam very gently for about six minutes; then turn out on the pieces of toast, and serve hot.

FAMOUS STAR GROUP.

The Constellation Orion in Legend and Literature.

The constellation Orion is mentioned in the literature of all ages. In Egypt it represented Horus, the young or rising sun, in a boat surmounted by stars, closely followed by Sirius, which was shown as a cow. It has also been found sculptured on the walls of Thebes 5,000 years ago. And on the men of that early time it shone down from the same position and with the same brightness as it does on us today, a striking example of the unchangeableness of the heavens.

From the days of the early Hindus to the present the constellation has for some reason borne always a stormy character. Allusions to its direful influence are found everywhere among the classic writers. Thus Milton wrote:

> When with fierce winds Orion arrived
> Hath vexed the Red sea coast.

The loss of the Roman squadron in the first Punic war was ascribed to the fleets having sailed just after the rising of Orion. The group has also been employed as a calendar sign, its morning rising indicating the beginning of summer, its midnight rising the season of grape gathering and its early evening rising the arrival of winter, with its attendant storms. In recent times the group has always represented a great hunter or warrior. Its present title came into Greek astronomy from the Euphrates and originally signified the light of heaven.

BABY TURTLES.

They Know Just What to Do and Do it Without Guidance.

Just so soon as a baby turtle emerges from the egg off he scuttles down to the sea. He has no one to teach him, no one to guide him. In his curious little brain there is implanted a streak of caution based upon the fact that until a certain period in his life his armor is soft and no defense against hungry fish, and he at once seeks the shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armor undergoes the hardening process.

Whatever the young sea turtle eats and wherever he eats it—facts not generally ascertained—one thing is certain, it agrees with him immensely. He leads a pleasant sort of life, basking in the tropical sun and cruising leisurely in the cool depths.

Once he has attained the weight of twenty-five pounds, which usually occurs within the first year, the turtle is free from all danger. After that no fish or mammal, however ravenous, however well armed with teeth, interferes with the turtle.

When once he has withdrawn his head from its position of outlook into the folds of his neck between the two shells intending devourers may struggle in vain to make an impression upon him.—Harper's Weekly.

The Roar of China's Ducks.

Tourists in China are always surprised by the number of ducks they see. There are more ducks in China than in all the rest of the world. Their voices are a familiar sound in every town and country spot of the seacoast and the interior of the vast empire. Even in the large cities ducks abound. They dodge between the coolies' legs. They flit squawking out of the way of the horses. Their indignant quack will not unseldom drown the roar of urban commerce. Children herd ducks on every road, on every pond, on every farm, on every lake, on every river. There is no back yard without its duck house. There is no boat, little or great, without its duck quarters. All over the land there are great duck hatching establishments, many of them of a capacity huge enough to produce 50,000 young ducks every year. Duck among the Chinese is a staple delicacy. It is salted and smoked like ham or beef.—New York World.

you do not have to work close to the stove, which is usually far from the window. You can work where you wish, and be warm. You can work on dull winter days in the full light near the window, without being chilled to the bone.

The Perfection Oil Heater quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap, put in like a cork in a bottle, is attached by a chain. This heater has a cool handle and a damper top.

The Perfection Oil Heater has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged and can be unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

CHINESE MISSIONS

A Christian missionary, who has spent twelve years in China, has come back to tell the people of America and Europe that that country cannot be Christianized, and that all the energy expended in efforts towards that end are wasted.

No doubt can exist as to the bona fides of Rev. August Bach, whose name is known in religious circles the world over. But we prefer to attribute his conclusions to the discouragements met with in a particularly difficult district rather than to the general attitude of a heathen nation. It is only a year ago that the movement was started on this continent for the raising of a fund which should compel the heathen world to recognize the superior merits of the religion of Christ. Because one missionary has failed, and become discouraged, surely that great effort is not to be regarded as certain of defeat.

It is now costing Europe and America many millions of dollars annually to carry on the work in Asia and especially in Eastern Asia. So much has already been spent that if the work is now abandoned all so far invested will be lost, and it is to be hoped that the white feather will not be showwn to any such extent. Let us win, or fail for an amount which will show our sincerity.—Vancouver Province.

The annual Christmas Cheer will be taken at the meeting in St. Paul's Church, Wednesday evening. The boys are asked to bring a potatoe and the girls an apple.

Liquor at Weddings

The Attorney-General has ruled that the serving of liquor in synagogues and at wedding feasts is not inconsistent with the liquor act, providing the feasting takes place where the wedding is solemnized. This interpretation of the law will geratly relieve a large section of the Hebrew population of the Province.

PRIMROSE WINS ALIMONY SUIT

Geo H. Primrose last week explained to Supreme Court Justice McCall, of New York, why he thought his wife should not be allowed $250 a week alimony pending the trial of the separation suit which she has brought against him. Mrs. Primrose declared that he made $20,000 a year and that in 1907 he was possessed of as much as $700,000.

The court granted only $20 a week. Mr. Primrose stated that his assets are only $50,000. Besides, he said, Mrs. Primrose has property of her own, in addition to what he has given her, and he never abandoned her. On the contrary, when he wanted her to go with him from their too expensive establishment in Mount Vernon to a less elaborate home in the West she refused. In deciding for the lesser allowance, Justice McCall gave it as his opinion that Mrs. Primrose had been treated generously by her husband.—The Clipper.

LONGSHOREMAN SUFFOCATED AT KINGSTON

BRING OUT THE BELLS

There are a few drivers in the city who will meet with some trouble if they do not comply with the city by-law. The infraction of the city by-law referred to is with regard to having sleigh bells. Within the past few days a few drivers have been noticed going around the city without the bells, and the guilty parties who do not jingle the bells will be summoned to police court. It is to be hoped that the tinkle, tinkle, tinkle of the bells will be heard on all sides in the future. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

Driving, in the winter, without bells is a very dangerous practice. A cutter might very easily come up against a person at a street corner before it can be noticed.

TRIBUTE FROM "THE BEACON"

Stratford Beacon.—The death of Mr. Charles Raymond, editor of the Peterborough Review, at the early age of 38 years, is a regrettable loss to Canadian journalism. For, though he had his weakness, he was a genius in the penning of what has been termed "human interest" sketches. For some years his daily articles in the Toronto Star were fine features, appealing to the sympathies of the reading public even more strongly than do the somewhat more flippant "poems" of Walt Mason.

Chaplain Attended Band Practice

The last rehearsal of the 57th regimental band was held in the band room last night. Rev Canon Davidson, the Chaplain of the regiment, attended the rehearsal, and was an interested listener.

At the conclusion of the rehearsal he expressed himself as highly pleased with the entertainment it had afforded him. He also congratulated the band on the excellence of the concerts given by them, and on their high standing in Canada as a musical organization.

Some musical numbers contributed also to the enjoyment of the evening. A vocal solo by Messrs. R. F. Downey and Fleming was well given. Miss E. Pringle was accompanist. Mr. R. J. Kidd acted as chairman.

Mr. G. E. Fleming, of Lethbridge, Alta., is in the city for a few days on business. He is a brother of Mr. D. R. Fleming, Gilmour street. Mr. Fleming, when seen to-day by the Review, stated that things are in a fairly prosperous condition in that city just at present, and the prospects are that it is on the verge of a wave of prosperity, never before experienced in its history. Mr. Fleming is in a position to say, as he is engaged in the real estate business in Lethbridge, representing F. C. Lowes & Co., financial brokers.

His company is at present engaged in building two sub-divisions to the city, one of which is known as Fairmont. The climate when Mr. Fleming left was very mild, although they experienced some cold weather a short time ago. He will be in the city for two or three days.

GAVE CHARMING RECEPTION

The many Peterborough friends of Mrs. L. B. Elliott (nee Miss Howson, of Norwood) will be interested in the following account from the Calgary Herald of a post nuptial reception given by her—

Mrs. L. B. Elliott (nee Howson) held her post-nuptial reception yesterday afternoon and evening at her pretty new home, 1027 Fourteenth avenue west, and throngs of her friends made their way to welcome another of the summer brides.

Mrs. Elliott wore her lovely wedding gown of cream liberty silk, en traine, embroidered in seed pearls with yoke and sleeves of carrickmacross with a surplice bodice effect, pleated girdle, with a cabuchon of pearls and falling in directoire lines over a fashionable overdress of embroidered chiffon.

The polished tea table was centred with a shower of pink carnations and ferns in a tall cut glass vase over a beautiful centrepiece of lace. Candles, with pink shades threw a rosy glow over the handsome cut glass and silver.

The assistants were, Miss Mina Norton in brown satin trimmed with cream lace and embroidered net with brown hat to match; Miss Sanderson in champagne satin with hat of bon-ton lace trimmed with white plumes; Miss Eileen Eyres in amethyst silk trimmed with white lace and black beaver hat, and Miss Fraser in pale blue silk muslin de soie with large white hat.

In the evening Mr. Elliott and Wm. R. Howson, Mrs. Elliott's brother, received with her. The assistants were, Miss Helen Howson in a fashionably braided gown of champagne colienne and large black satin hat; Miss Sanderson in a pale pink satin gown and large white hat; Miss Calder in a light colored taffeta gown and a very becoming hat; Miss Wigmore in cream silk colienne and large black hat; Miss Cobbledick in a rose satin costume and mink turban; and Miss Anna Howson in an all-over white embroidered gown. Little Marjorie Dando, a fairy in white and pink made a sweet door attendant.

Carnations, Roses, Lilies Violets, etc. MASON'S FLORAL EMPORIUM, Water St.

A SPLENDID RECORD

McMaster University Again Victorious in Debate

The Debating Society of McMaster University, Toronto, met the Society of Knox College last week in debate, and the judges declared that both in the matter of argument and style they were compelled to declare McMaster Society the winners. This is the fourteenth time that the students of the Baptist University have crossed swords in the arena of argument with the young men of other universities in the intercollegiate series, and on every occasion the McMaster men have been victorious. This is all the more remarkable since this series of debates has covered a number of years, and those who took part in the earlier contests are long since away from the university and taking part in the battle of life.

BREEZY BITS OF BRITISH NEWS

(By Percival G. S. Webb)

A serious colliery accident has occurred at the Kemberton pit of the Madeley Wood Company's colliery near Shifnal, Shropshire, involving the death of four men and three youths. They were being lowered down the shaft when the cage fell to the bottom, a distance of 370 yards, with great force, instantly killing the occupants.

This month has proved the wettest for many years. Many parts of the Old Country are flooded, while the number of shipwrecks round the coast have been extraordinary and have been attended with the loss of many lives.

Forty thousand pounds damages was done by fire at the premises of Messrs. Boyes and Co's wholesale drapers, Hark.

Up to the end of November 30th, [illegible] British emigrants have landed in Canada in 1910.

The Clyde Trustees have unanimously accepted the offer of Messrs. John Brown and Co., to contribute £10,000 towards the cost of the early completion of the intended widening of the river adjoining and immediately below their yard.

Employment agencies in London must now be licensed by the County Council registration.

By their victory over the Rangers Aberdeen have for the first time in their history taken four league points in one season from the famous Brox eleven.

HAND CUT IN PRACTICE

Cyril Greene, while practicing with the intermediate players at the rink last night, had his head seriously cut, and several stitches had to be used on the wound.

THE TURF

One of the biggest sales in horseflesh during the winter season was consumated last week, when Ed. Whitla, superintendent of the Patchen Wilkes stock farm, Lexington, Ky., disposed of Miss Stokes, two years old, record, 2.09 1-4, and holder of the world's record of 2.19 1-4 for yearling trotters, for $20,000.

The sale was effected through Lou McDonald, and it is understood that David F. Luke, a merchant of New York, is the purchaser. The price paid is the largest for a twoyear old trotter in recent years.

Miss Stokes has been a sensational trotter almost from the time she was weaned. She was bred at Patchen Wilkes farm, was sired by Peter the Great, 2.07 1-4, and her dam is Tilly Thompson, by Guy Wilkes (2.15 1-4.)

The mare will be shipped to Memphis with the rest of the McDonald string, and prepared for her stake engagements. She is eligible to all the futurities.

The farm residence of Mrs. W. Smyth, near Markham, was totally destroyed by fire.

PUCKLAND

Ben Dusty is to report to the Picton pro team for a game in Port Hope next Monday.

Will the intermediate team have a following of supporters this season? Well rather. Large attendances of fans have marked the practices to date.

The railbirds like the work of Kelly, the dusky youth on the left boards. The Ingersoll boy is in right and looks capable of handing out a few scores.

But doesn't it seem funny that when two goaltenders turn out for practice the shots should be showered on only one. It's somebody's move.

This man Sorrel handles himself at right wing as if he meant it. He checks well and keeps on fighting when he loses the rubber. His shooting makes the net men stick out their chest.

Norm Geale is turning out with Varsity juniors and will likely capture the point position.

Bill Shortt is showing up well, and will not be overlooked when the team is picked.

Lea Dobson should be around somewhere for that doubtful centre position.

The meeting for the drawing up of the schedule for this district in the intermediate series takes place to-day at Trenton.

The juniors will practice to-night between seven and eight o'clock.

Rev. F. A. Stevens of London, Ont. was seriously scalded in Detroit while trying to fix a steam radiator.

SPORT TALK

The four-faced pessimist of the boxing world is in his glory these days. The year 1910 has been a bad one for the champions and ex-champions. More than one crown has slid off a perspiring brow and disaster in general has attended the "royal" members of the Queensberry family. The gent with the ingrown "grouch" maliciously points to these facts and tags his talk with the remark that: "The worst is yet to come."

BATTLING NELSON

Battling Nelson has dropped into pugilistic oblivion. The Dane lost his title to Ad. Wolgast, at Point Richmond, on Feb. 22 last. He has since been held to a draw by a third rater, and knocked out by Owen Moran. Funeral flowers for champion No. 1.

JIM JEFFRIES

Jim Jeffries who had written: "Retired and undefeated heavyweight champion of the world," after his name so often that he could pen the words white blindfolded, was beaten by Jack Johnson at Reno, on July 4, in a one-sided battle, which robbed him of all his prestige, flattened many a bank roll, and soured the public on the glove game. This was the big explosion which made the most noise and did the most damage. More crepe and white gloves.

THE TWO CHAMPIONS

Wolgast and Johnson, the two new champions have fared badly. The little lightweight title holder has twice broken his arm. Johnson's speed has burned a blazing path along the primrose pike. Prepare for the tolling of the bells.

Death made two decisions that can never be reversed. Poor old Joe Gans, former lightweight champion, in his day the idol of the colored race, took the final count at his home in Baltimore. Stanley Ketchel, world's middleweight champion met a tragic finish in the Missouri mountains, the victim of an assassin's bullet.

Even Freddie Welsh, the English lightweight did not escape unscathed. The Pontypridd boxer made the mistake of matching himself against Packy McFarland in London under weight conditions which gave McFarland a great advantage over his smaller opponent. Welsh was given a draw decision with the American welterweight, but the British press "panned" this award for many weeks, the belief being general that Packy had earned the award. The result of this bout hurt Welsh in his country and showed him up on this side of the water as being a poor match-maker.

ATTELL ELIGIBLE

In chanting "the worst is yet to come," the pessimistic party probably has his eyes turned in the Abie Attell's direction. Notwithstanding the "business" tactics employed by the shrewd featherweight champion in making his "safe, sane and sure" ring engagements, there is a growing belief among the real students of the game that Abe's days are numbered, that time will whip him just as it did Nelson.

Abie has held the featherweight title so long that it has grown to be a part of him. Blinky Ben says: "Champions may come, and champions may go but Abie Attell we have with us always" — R. M. Walker, in Detroit News.

THREE POINTS FOR TRY ON FUMBLE

Toronto, Dec. 20. — Several important amendments were made in the Ontario Rugby Football union rules at Saturday's meeting.

Among the amendments decided upon to send the C. R. F. U. for consideration was the following.

In section 4 insert after "a try shall score five" lines four and five "only when the ball is carried over the line by a player of the attacking side. In all other cases it shall count but three without the right of conversion excepting where the ball is secured by a player of the attacking side, behind his opponents goal line and carried into touch in goal or across the dead ball line, when it shall count but one point." The following elected to represent the O. R. F. U. at the Canadian Rugby union: Messrs. W. A. Hewitt, A. R. Denison and E. J. Livingstone, and they were instructed to do all in their power toward furthering the uniformity of playing rules.

When any one tells you that imported beers are worth the price, ask this question:

Why don't foreign brewers charge their Canadian price in their home markets?

That will end the argument. The best beer brewed is just worth the cost of ingredients and production, plus selling cost and a fair profit. Order and you'll get the best beer brewed at normal cost. Try it once and you'll know exactly why "Salvador" is called "The National Drink" by the majority of Canadians.

Salvador (The Famous National Drink)

"Salvador" has been pre-eminent for purity and quality for over 200 years. It is pure, sparkling and refreshing, besides possessing tonic qualities which doctors recommend.

BRITISH SPORT

London, December 9 — There are no signs that the war between the athletic and cycling bodies is any nearer a satisfactory ending. The National Cross Country Union officials are trying to put their organization on a firmer footing, with a view to helping the Amateur Athletic Association in its struggle. This however, is not likely to make much difference, as the real issue hangs on quite another point. The rank and file of cross-country runners are of the artisan class, and the majority would no doubt prefer to compete for cash than for ordinary prizes. Whether they have opportunities of doing so, or are compelled to run as amateurs against their real feelings, depends on the success of the newly-formed National Athletic Union. This body is likely to receive additional support now that the National Cyclist Union has formed an alliance. Now that this has come to pass, athletics will feel more inclined to support the N. A. Union, which, unlike the Amateur A. A., believes in fostering professionalism (as well as amateur athletics,) rather than tolerating sham amateurism.

CHAMPIONS IN FORM

F. C. Neaves, of the Surrey A. C., winner of the National Cross Country championship last March, has been running for several seasons now, but it looks as though we have not yet seen his best. He gave another fine display of speed and stamina when winning the inter-club match between the Hern Hill Harriers and the Pearl Assurance A. C. on Saturday. He simply outclassed his rivals and his individual success partly atoned to the Assurance men for their defeat as a team.

An example of an athlete who performs well both on the flat and across country is afforded by J. M. Hill, of the Queen's Park Harriers. This stalwart Irishman won the half-mile flat championship last July, though there are quite half a dozen better men at the distance in the country. He has lately shown fine form, over field and fallow, and his victory in the Queen's Park Challenge Cup race of five miles on Saturday induces many to think he may prove a better man at the than as a path runner.

A NEW BODY

Before finishing with athletic matters, it may be mentioned that the Amateur Athletic Union of England held its first annual meeting at Manchester on Saturday. The secretary was able to announce that the membership numbers 1,263 and it looks like growing. The union came into being because certain athletes thought it about time that they organized in their own interests. A main object of the new body is to try and end the rupture between the athletic and cycling bodies. The athletic governing body does nothing to encourage athletics beyond the promotion of sixteen championships annually, its chief mission apparently being to discipline athletes, and it is no wonder the A. A. A. has been termed the "Scotland Yard of Athletics."

BOXING

Mr. Hugh McIntosh, of Australia is an enterprising man, and home sportsmen have to thank him for some fistic treats. More are in store for us, and all being well, we shall see Tommy Burns meet the winner of the Bill Squires vs. Jack Burns contest at Olympia early in the New Year. London can well support a really up-to-date boxing arena, and now that Mr. McIntosh has secured the Olympia Annex, we may see some really great fights. The newest venture of the Australian promoter, will be opened on boxing Day with the Lang vs. Jack Burns contest, and Gunner Moir will meet Bomb. Wells there a month later.

Johnny Condon won bantamweight championship honors while in the amateur ranks and since going over to the professional side, he has considerably added to his record. He was flying high when he signed to meet Digger Stanley, the bantamweight champion of England, however, and though he lasted out their twenty rounds bout on Monday, there was no question about Stanley's superiority.

THE MAT

Mail and Empire.—The Morality Department at the city hall is grinding its heel into Tom Flanagan's neck. Yesterday he awarded the contract for displaying the posters for the big Hackenschmidt handicap bout to a local firm and was informed that to show the lithographs was illegal. Flanagan promptly went to the Morality Department and was told that not only could he not put up the posters, but the bout could not be held. There does not appear to be any way out of the difficulty and the Irish promoter is a very considerable sum out of pocket and the wrestling enthusiasts are denied the pleasure of seeing what promised to be the best bout ever staged in this or any other city in Canada.

The Department informed Flanagan that the Hackenschmidt bout was not the particular object of their attack. That bout would have been conducted in a most orderly manner, but the officials took action again wrestling here some time ago, when it was not being properly conducted. The Morality Department could not discriminate, they said, between world's champions and lesser grapplers. Flanagan was out of town last night, and no statement could be obtained from him. He will doubtless stage the bout in some other city in an effort to recoup the financial losses in connection with that which it was proposed to hold here.

BOYS' BANQUET AT THE Y.M.C.A. BIG SUCCESS

A most enjoyable time was spent last night in the Boys' Club social rooms when the junior combined Bible study classes were entertained. A spread provided by the boys and displayed by the Social Committee of the department who are doing a good work towards towards making their social events possible was the first part of the programme and one part that is always enjoyed by all present, after which a splendid programme arranged by the committee, was run off in fine order. Mr. S. Hall acting as chairman, made a few brief remarks and then called on Mr. J. Laing, who needed no introduction, and is a general favorite throughout the association. Mr. Laing gave the boys a most interesting talk on his experiences on the Great Lakes.

Following Mr. Laing, Mr. Galley, who looks after the needs of the Business boys, physically, spiritually and mentally, gave a short talk, which was most interesting and instructive. Mr. Hodges, Mr. Bruce Hamilton, Mr. H. Hall, Mr Tait, boys' secretary, and Chief Thompson, also gave short, instructive and entertaining addresses.

The boys were especially taken with the readings by P. Hamilton. The evening was brought to a close by the boys forming a ring taking hands and singing, Blest Be the Tie That Binds.

Prospects for an increased interest in this work looks good.

BY THE WAY

I want to be an alderman,
  I want to hear the band,
And after New Year's take my seat
  And in the Council stand.

I want to boost the dear old town
  And bring the taxes down,
I want to—when the knocks are passed,
  To wear a martyr's crown.

I want to help in everything
  The Council takes a fling,
And be in with the public,
  When they our praises sing.

I want to take the high vote
  To sit perched up on high.
But just what ward I'll fight in
  I'll answer bye and bye.

"DEAD" PARCELS.

Queer Things That Find Their Way Into Postoffice Lost Department.

The annual report of the Postoffice Department shows that the total number of letters, books, packets, etc., received at the dead letter office was 2,547,749. These included 5,427 letters containing money amounting to $27,206, 3,479 letters containing checks to the face value of $18,044, 460 letters containing drafts to the face value of $171,883, 2,093 letters containing express orders to the value of $47,917, and 3,067 letters with postoffice money orders worth $43,669. Some of the contents of the postal parcels, etc., received at the dead letter office are of a most curious nature. There were 13 suits of baby clothes.

220 blouses.
254 cakes.
12 packages of chewing gum.
24 packages of cigarettes.
1 marriage contract.
8 corsets.
1 ear drum.
2 gramophones.
4 parcels of hair.
88 pieces of maple sugar.
15 pedigrees.
98 shoes.
102 silver watches.
14 artificial teeth, and
6 pairs of trousers.

As usual Ontario does almost as much mail business as the rest of the provinces combined, and Toronto is the leading city of the Dominion in respect of letters handled. The total number of letters posted in Ontario last year was 203,448,000; in Quebec, 85,334,000; in Manitoba, 43,-998,000; in British Columbia, 37,266,-000; in Nova Scotia, 25,821,000; in Alberta, 20,822,000; in Saskatchewan, 18,650,000, and in New Brunswick 17,-500,000.

By cities the reports show the following totals for letters:

Toronto, 1,709,493.
Montreal, 1,063,225.
Winnipeg, 686,051.
Vancouver, 257,381.
Hamilton, 222,921.
London, 146,260.
Halifax, 114,318.
St. John, 111,074, and
Calgary, 125,749.

The people of Canada posted during the year 456,085,000 letters; 46,-104,000 postcards, and 10,465,000 registered letters. In addition the mails handled 14,975,000 free letters on Government business, 87,000,000 pieces of third-class matter, and 7,-000,000 packages of fourth-class matter. The increase in the number of letters and postcards handled was 45,705,000, or a little over 10 per cent.

The rapid expansion of the service involved an increased expenditure of $629,961, but in spite of this the total revenue of $7,958,547 was $743,710 in excess of the total expenditure.

Other figures showing the growth of country area follow: In the number of postoffices there was an increase of 408; in postal notes offices 441; in the aggregate mileage of mail routes, both by land and water, 1,-475,506 miles; in the revenue from the sale of postage stamps, $726,424.

GROWTH OF CANADA.

Her Amazing Progress Is Attracting World-wide Attention.

This is the tenor in which popular American papers are now speaking of Canada. It shows a change of front in the last two decades:

Canada's amazing growth is attracting world-wide attention. Not so very long ago that country was regarded as being one of the lesser elements in the progress of the world as a whole, but now, within a few years, there has come about a change which has placed Canada well toward the head of the list of those countries classed as well-to-do in a material sense. Natural resources have been developed through a splendid system of railroads, homesteaders have flocked in, and on every hand prosperity is evident.

Three great factors in the progress of Canada are agriculture, immigration and transportation, each of which is making a great showing. It means the dawn of a great and mighty nation, and one that is destined to have a great influence in the affairs of the world. In western Canada alone there are 334,000,000 acres of land, only 44,000,000 of which are now homesteaded. With only 12,-000,000 acres of this under grain crop last year about 147,000,000 bushels of wheat were produced. What will it be when all of that immense territory is under cultivation? Is it not evident that Canada will become the bakeshop of the bunch?

That the world is beginning to realize this is shown by the confidence displayed in Canada's future. During the past five years Great Britain has invested $805,000,000 in Canada, mostly in railways, Government and municipal debentures, and during the same period the United States has invested $226,000,000 in Canada, mostly in establishing manufacturing plants. Quite recently French bankers have made known their desire to invest $50,000,000 in Canada this year. The trend of the times is fairly shown in these figures.

One can see plainly why the United States should look to closer trade relations with Canada. The fact that the wheat producing power of the United States has now almost reached its zenith, while the population grows unceasingly, shows that sometime, soon, the United States will have to buy her wheat from abroad. There is no doubt about this being a fact. In the face of a possibility such as this the United States should lay the foundation of her future food supply by meeting Canada squarely and fairly as a nation that has something of untold value to gain, to obtain which the complete sacrifice of present day vantage and ideas would be as nothing compared with cheap food for the next generation, and this one, too.

The Storm of 1905.

The great snow-storm of 1905 will be long remembered. The upper end of Lake Superior was fairly strewn with the stranded. The Western Star went ashore near Apostle Islands; the Corey wrecked on Gull Rock; on Minnesota Point the steamer England came to grief. The life-saving crew rescued the men. At Duluth piers the Metaffa broke her back and nine men were lost. At Lester Park, six miles to the east, the Crescent City went on the rocks. The men laid a hatch across the rail and walked ashore. It was a more convenient wreck than most. The Lafayette, further east, was a total loss, though her engines and boilers were afterwards salvaged. The Edenborn and her tow barge, the Madeira, were put up high and dry. The Spencer and her barge, Amboy, were lost, and the Monkshaven may still be seen on the rocks of Angus Island.

The ill-fated Metaffa had ventured out of Duluth's bottle harbor, but decided to turn back. She headed for the mouth of the canal that leads into Duluth as into a pound net. A strong current was pouring out between the piers, and a cross swirl caught the bow of the Metaffa and flung it to one side. She missed the channel, hit one of the piers, swung around it broadside, and dropped outside the breakwater, where the seas drove her into shallow water. She grounded 100 feet out from the breakwater. Here, within plain view of thousands of people, she was beyond aid. The seas had all Superior and a hurricane behind them, and piled up over the stranded vessel and over the breakwater. Two men in the deckhouse tried to make their way aft, where the others were, and where there was warmth from the boiler. The crowds on shore saw these two men washed overboard and beheld one of them caught in a cross swirl and restored to the deck. He clung there exhausted, and was presently frozen in the centre of a solid cake of ice.

The storm raged all night. When they got out to the Metaffa the next day, they found the water had put the engine fires out. Nine men they found frozen, and they chopped them out of solid ice one foot thick, with axes. As for the Metaffa, her back was broken. They towed her into the dry dock at Superior and took her apart. The machinery was removed and sold.

An Overburdened Hen.

There is a certain hen, residing on a certain small farm on the Hamilton road, just outside the city limits, that is one of the most overburdened of mothers.

Some time ago she hatched out nine beautiful chicks. The same day two incubators which had been at work brought out 175 birds.

The hen, being a poor hand at arithmetic, and possessing an open heart, imagined herself the mother of the whole tribe, and daily she does her best to keep order in the family, and scratch for the 184 little bills.

When she croons to them, a perfect avalanche of broilers races in her direction. When she seeks repose, she is almost smothered under brand new chickens.

When a reporter saw her she was doing her best to get her wings over all her chickens, but in a minute she looked like a well-decorated miniature pyramid of spring fowl.—London Advertiser.

A toy balloon with a tag on it was sent up from Cobourg, and landed on the Adirondack mountains.

A Regiment of Giants.

The awe-inspiring stature of Winnipeg's Highland regiment, which was recently presented with a stand of colors, is not only the subject of pardonable pride on the part of the citizens of the western metropolis, but the provocation of amazement among visitors.

When Gen. Sir John French made his inspection of the battalion, he was accompanied by the most distinguished officers of Canada's militia. Thereby hangs a tale.

Major-General Lessard, each time the companies came swinging by, could not suppress an exclamation of astonishment at their height. Another member of the staff, himself a six-footer, sought to make light of the apparent height of the Highlanders by claiming that their feather bonnets made them look so tall. Captain Ketchen, one of the local officers, however, asked the seventy-two inched visitor to stand up against one of the men. The visiting officer did, and he found himself fully four inches below the gigantic soldier, quite apart from the bonnet, which, to use his own words: "Seemed to be far away above the snow line."

They grow big men on the western plains. "A" company of this regiment does not possess a man less than six feet tall, and there is a liberal sprinkling of giants from six feet three and upwards. This recalls Frederick the Great's regiment of giants.

Tried Himself.

Orillia recently had the unusual spectacle of a magistrate trying a case against himself. Moreover, after hearing the evidence, the police magistrate dismissed the charge.

When court opened on Friday morning, the first case called was that against "George H. Clark, for allowing his dog to be at liberty without a muzzle." The charge was laid by Constable George Reeve, who was acting as day constable in the absence of Chief Reid, on his holidays. The police magistrate, who evidently had an easy conscience, pleaded not guilty. Three witnesses, Messrs. J. D. Knox, A. Clark and C. E. Hewett, were called by Constable Reeve in support of his charge, but all three disavowed any knowledge as to whether or not Mr. Clarke's dog had been wearing a muzzle on the day mentioned in the charge. His Worship thereupon dismissed the case, remarking that he had done his best to comply with the regulations as to muzzling, and if his dog had ever got abroad unmuzzled, it was through accident. Messrs. Knox and Hewett jocularly asked "What about witness fees," but the police magistrate retorted that he certainly was not going to pay them. And so ended a case unique in the annals of Orillia court records.

The Choice of Soap.

Do not stint on your soap. It is the poorest of economy. Bad pimples and ugly eruptions are frequently caused by the use of a soap that is too coarse for the skin texture.

As all skins are not similar, the test of a soap is not its cost or high praises from some of its users, but whether it agrees with you individually. Experiment, then stick to your choice. Frequent changing of soap is bad for a delicate skin.

With the right soap a few precautions are necessary. Do not use too big cakes nor leave it uncovered in a wet soap dish. It absorbs impurities that hurt the skin. The best soaps are harmful if not well rinsed. Note the brown marks left on linen if soap is not washed out and consider that skin is even more delicate.

THE GENUINE ALWAYS SUPERIOR TO THE IMITATION

The experienced buyer never permits the shrewd merchant to convince him that an imitation is superior to the genuine advertised article. In refusing a substitute he protects himself and the manufacturers who have expended enormous sums in giving the public information regarding their products.

Advertised articles have stood the test of public approval on their merits and materials embracing their make-up. The mere fact that they are imitated is competent testimony of their worth.

RESTORING DEAD TO LIFE

The dead are restored to life!

Not in the next world, but in this. This claim sounds rather far-fetched, but it is an actual fact.

Dr. Robinovitch, a Russian woman doctor, is the inventor of a system of electrical apparatus by which this is accomplished. She made the discovery a decade ago in Paris while experimenting on a lifeless frog, but perfected her life restoring apparatus before making her plan public, knowing that the announcement of such a radical departure would be derisively received by both the medical profession and a certain kind of religious people.

However, the restoration of the dead to life is not merely a fanciful dream. It's an established reality, it is said.

But it is well to bear in mind that no claims are made for the restoration to a living state of a body that has been worn away by the ravages of consumption or some tissue-destroying disease.

In case of death by drowning, electrocution and other shocks, positive success is claimed for the system which by means of electrical pulsations, starts the heart moving again, and causes the other organs of the body to sympathy.

Its success or failure will be watched with interest by the civilized human race.

FRUIT IS THE SAFETY VALVE

That Regulates the Body

"Fruit-a-tives" Is The Only Medicine Made of Fruit Juices.

"The Creator, in His wonderful economy, has always constructed with a purpose. He has distributed fruit all over the earth and has caused them to mature at a time when the solid and carbonaceous foods are not needed by the body. The latter only clog the vital machinery resulting in disease, whereas the juicy, stimulating properties of fruit keep the vital forces properly balanced and regulated."

GEORGIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Unfortunately for those who live in Canada, fresh fruit is expensive and—in many localities—almost impossible to get. But everyone can obtain "Fruit-a-tives", the famous tablets made of fruit juices. "Fruit-a-tives" contains the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes—and is the greatest cure in the world for all troubles of Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys, Liver and Skin. In case of disease, and in preventing disease, "Fruit-a-tives" is far superior to fresh fruit.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

IF YOU'RE GOING TO GET MARRIED

(Geo. Wharton James in Physical Culture)

What are you going to marry for?

To own the right to pet a pretty-faced, white-skinned, fluffy-haired doll, or to live in happiness accord, peace and harmony with a woman—a healthy, vigorous, robust, clear-eyed, sweet-mouthed, intelligent, good, noble woman. Are you more anxious to marry a "good figure," a stylish form, made up of corset, pads, springs and dress, high heels and back-hair mattress with a coal-scuttle or beehive bonnet, than a real womanly woman, full of joyousness of health, whose walk is sprightly and step buoyant, whose smile is natural and constant, whose "moods" are always cheerful and one better than another, and who dresses neatly and sensibly, attractively and wisely, neither dowdily nor in total defiance of the fashion, but inconspicuously and well. Do you prefer a fashionable talker—a flashily educated miss who can tell you all the newest French novels, and sing wretchedly in four different languages mangled and torn, and play bridge whist, or whist bridge, or some other gambling game, and come home with worthless prizes won at progressive euchre one who mingles with the best "sassiety," and has nothing to do with vulgar poor folks, or a woman who loves her husband above everything else on earth, and who wants to make a perfect home of her own, cheerful and happy, lively and busy with healthy, strong, lusty babies, coming one after another as fast as wisdom and love desire them and can properly care for them.

My boy, the eye of a fool is caught with powder, frills, fluff, ruff and froth. The eye of a wise man is caught by reality, by health, by naturalness, by love, by maternal and wifely instinct, by goodness. What do you want to hitch up with for the drive through life: a wife or a doll, a mother of your children, or a bridge-whist fiend. Wake up, brother, don't be a fool!

BUT HOW ABOUT THE GIRL?

What has she a right to expect? You are mighty particular as to yourself; how about the other side? How do you measure up, my boy? Take stock of yourself, you cigar and pipe-smoking, card-playing, whiskey-drinking, dyspeptic, drug-doping, selfish, arrogant, conceited male puppy. What right have you to "shine up" to a pure, good, honest, healthy woman, and expect her to "receive your addresses graciously." Your breath is loaded with the stench of tobacco, beer, whiskey, cologne and cloves and spices you vainly thought would "change the atmosphere." Your associates are fast young men, as vile and disgusting as yours is. Your conversation rises no higher than your habits, and you can only talk of your little round of business, of golf, of autoing, of the theater, and card parties, and fast girls. You dress well, of course, for you have plenty of money, but it would not be much to your credit if one found out exactly where it all came from. And as for your morals? Have you got any, further than that you do as you please? Money buys everything.

Yet you have the impudence to expect to marry a healthy, pure, good girl! You dare to aspire to the hand of a clean woman! You deserve to be taken into a bath-house where they have a pneumatic machine that would force pure and cleansing water through every particle of your frame—body, extremities, brain and then be taken to the top of the highest tree and there allowed to remain to sweeten—while the fiercest tempests blow for six months to "air" you, and make you clean. Pouf! how you need it! Only after such an airing, or a better one, ought you to be allowed to come into the same room, or walk in the same street, or live in the same town as a decent, good woman. I believe in men choosing right, but if the women have no one else to choose from than such as you, God help them and the future race.

FALLACIOUS ARGUMENTS ABOUT MAIL ORDER PLAN

We have seen and heard much about mail order houses, and have taken the trouble to look carefully into the matter to see if there is any truth in the statements that these concerns are able to undersell our local merchants for the same quality of goods.

We find that the only case in which they undersell our home merchants is in some unimportant articles of small value and of which every person knows the price. These they sell at cost, or even less, in order that they may induce you to purchase from them the more important articles at full or even inflated prices.

Very few people, except those actually engaged in a particular business, are good judges of quality, and in most cases it is necessary for a buyer to trust the fairness and integrity of the merchant from whom he buys. It can thus be seen what advantage the mail order houses obtain by selling a few small staples, the values of which are generally known, at a low price. In this way many are led to believe that their prices are correspondingly low on more important goods.

The arguments in favor of mail order houses are familiar to all our readers. Briefly stated, they are that these firms buy in larger quantities and consequently at a lower price than the local merchant, and that their turn-over is so much greater than they can afford to sell on a lower margin and still pay dividends on their capital stock. While some of these arguments may seem true, they fall to the ground when considered in connection with the fact that these firms are necessarily located in large cities, here rent and taxes are vastly greater than they are here in Peterborough.

Then there is the question of help. The necessarily exact system entails an amount of labor of which the average person has no idea. The checking and counter-checking, the sorting, shipping, addressing and billing is all necessary and must be paid for.

The small interest on the capital is another will-o'-the-wisp argument, for you will notice that the owners of the capital stock are not workers in the establishment. They are not producers of revenue for the business. Every item of labor and superintendence is paid for, some of the latter at a very high rate. If the smaller merchant who is actively engaged in his own establishment was to allow himself a fair salary for his superintendence, it would be found that over and above this he obtains no greater interest on his invested capital than do the real owners of the mail order houses. In fact, many merchants make no more than a fair salary, without any return for invested capital.

You cannot be an expert in every line, but in the lines with which you are acquainted, experience will prove that you can supply your wants at home in Peterborough just as economically as by sending away. And in cases where you are not a judge of quality, is it not better to trust the word and accept the judgment of your neighbor than that of a soulless corporation that has no interest in you?

Think it over and you will decide that it does not pay and it is not fair to send your money away.

THE MYSTERIOUS MR. TATE IS STILL MISSING

Sons of Late County Treasurer Say Their Father Was Threatened by Buchanan and That He Resigned Because of Counciller's Attitude—All Efforts of Authorities to Find Tate Are of No Avail.

Woodstock, Dec. 21.—It developed yesterday afternoon that Isaiah Danks in the Oxford County graft enquiry apparently had no power of attorney for the late Elizabeth Cartwright of England, and therefore had no right to transfer her mortgage in the Northern Gravel road to J. R. Bowman of Chicago.

E. F. B. Johnston, counsel for Oxford County, produced a statement from Miss Cartwright's Birmingham solicitors, Messrs. Saunders, Bradbury and Saunders. These people state that the lady died July 16, 1898. Her estate was probated Sept. 21, 1908. They knew of $5,100 in Canadian mortgages, but could locate nothing regarding Isaiah Danks.

They state that he did not have power of attorney for her in Canada, and he had not accounted for the mortgage in connection with Northern Gravel road.

Yesterday's enquiry located Danks. He is in Chicago, and Mr. Johnston declared last night that he would ask that a commission be sent to Chicago to take his evidence, and also to scrutinize a lawyer named Sterin, who, it is believed, can throw some light upon the identity of the mysterious, "shadowy" Mr. Tate.

M. T. Buchanan, the main figure in the spot light, made a further promise yesterday to try and produce Tate.

Fred. Vickert, one of the five county councillors who had a seven hour session in the Walker House, Toronto, when the $2,000 deal with Tate was cinched, was probed as to whether he had heard of "graft" in connection with the county's affairs.

"Well, I heard that the county treasurer paid a year's salary to get his job."

Replying to a question from Judge Snider, he said nothing had been done to make sure of the title to the road.

"Would you buy a farm that way?"

"Well, we left everything to Chairman Buchanan."

Witness had opposed paying more than $600 to Tate. Buchanan had urged the payment of $2,000, taking Tate's side rather than that of those who held out for a lower price. Buchanan wanted to pay Tate's prices from the very beginning.

Vickert said at one time it was impossible for a man to get a contract from the county without paying commissions.

J. C. Hegler, Ingersoll counsel for M. T. Buchanan, was put on the witness stand concerning certain transactions that his client had had through him. Witness admitted having known Isaiah Dinks in 1883. He was then inspector of the Bank of London in Ingersoll, which failed in 1880.

Mr. Hegler told of the transfer of the mortgage from Elizabeth Cartwright to a man named Bowman of Chicago. Isaiah Danks had claimed power of attorney for her and witness had executed the transfer. He confessed that he was not certain that Bowman had any interest in the property. Neither did he know of any interest Robert Tate had in it except as secured through the transfer from Bowman. He had never met this man Tate.

M. H. McGee of the Noble Detective Agency, said he had searched all the Toronto city directories for ten years, and interviewed all the Robert Tates, in the hope of locating this man, who is so badly wanted now, but to no avail.

Henry Brown, son of the former county treasurer, now deceased, told of Buchanan having applied a threatening attitude towards his father, when the latter refused to sign the $3,000 check in payment for the road.

"He made my father a proposal," said witness, "and my father answered that he had never been asked to do anything of that kind in all his 36 years' service.

"My father told him that people were sometimes put behind the bars for such things. Buchanan left in anger and secured an order from Warden Lockhart for the check."

Homer Brown, brother of last witness, said his father resigned shortly after this, because Buchanan had threatened his office.

A third son, L. R. E. Brown, said: "I don't know whether I should tell you, but Buchanan threatened he would put me in the penitentiary for telling things my father had said." This witness also volunteered that Buchanan had told him about a year after his father had resigned, that if he would see a couple of men and give them $50 apiece something might be done for his father.

Young Brown said that Buchanan had promised his father that if he would resign he would get him a retiring allowance.

James White, ex-county clerk, swore that he had been told by Buchanan that a grant would probably be made to Brown for his long service, and that a blank bylaw to be drawn up for it, but nothing was done.

John Youngs of West Zorra, an ex-warden, in his testimony declared that he had offered M. T. Buchanan $1,000 if he would raise the price of the Woodstock and Ingersoll gravel road, but he made the offer, he said, in the spirit of a bluff.

The enquiry resumed to-day.

In Grip of Hurricane.

St. John's, Nfld., Dec. 21.—Newfoundland is in the grip of a hurricane, declared to be the worst that has been known here for many years. The storm has been raging for forty-eight hours, and shows no signs of cessation.

THE LIBERALS GAINED TWO

London, Dec. 21.—The returns from the three constituencies, the polling of which on Monday brought to a close the general elections for the first Parliament of King George, were announced yesterday.

James Gilhooly, who, as an O'Brienite, long represented the west division of Cork County, was one of the returned, adding one to the Independent Nationalists' total. In the south division of Kilkenny County M. Keating, Nationalist, was re-elected. In Munro, the Liberal was re-elected over the Unionist, Sir A. Bignold, by 211.

The Government parties have a coalition majority of 126 in the new Parliament. This is two more than the combined advantage over the Unionists in the preceding Parliament.

The final stage of the parties is: Unionists 272, Liberals, 272, Labor 42, Nationalists 73, Independent Nationalists 10.

The total number of votes cast is: Unionists 2,410,049, Liberals 2,280,738, Labor 384,288, Nationalists 129,618.

Artists In Crime.

Boston, Dec. 21.—Silks and laces, hobnobbing with sides of beef, strips of bacon, cans of soup, condensed milk and paint, greeted the eyes of a squad of officers sent yesterday to search the Roxbury home of Mrs. Knadler, 63 years of age, who had been arrested on a charge of shoplifting. There were also musical instruments, vases, steins, manicure sets and a great variety of other articles, the whole collection estimated to be worth more than $5,000. Five trips of the patrol wagon were necessary to remove the goods to a police station.

Later in the day the police arrested Mrs. Knadler's daughters, Margaret, 24 years of age, and Lillian, 19 years, and her son, Frank, 23. The police matron found beneath the skirts of Margaret Knadler a cloth bag, three feet square. A slit in the skirt formed the connection between departmental store counters and the bag.

Government Wins Out.

Paris, Dec. 21.—The Government yesterday successfully maintained its position against the attacks of the Socialists, under the leadership of M. Jaures, who demanded the reinstatement of all the railroad employes who were dismissed in connection with the recent strike. The Government took the position that it was impossible to extend general reinstatement to the men dismissed for insubordination and violence, but it was ready to consider the merits of the individual cases.

The question came up in the Chamber of Deputies, and the chamber sustained the Government by a vote of 405 to 90.

Passed It Anyway.

Milwaukee, Dec. 21.—Victor I. Berger, sometimes called the "Socialist Czar of Milwaukee," was yesterday defeated by the Socialist contingent in the city council when he tried to defeat the passage of a measure to allow a poor washerwoman to use the city water free of charge, which the city attorney has declared unconstitutional.

The council passed seventeen resolutions asking the Legislature, among other requests, authority to erect municipal houses, packing houses and to conduct any public utility.

Dr. Cook Comes Back.

New York, Dec. 21.—Dr. F. A. Cook will return to this city on the steamship George Washington, which is due to arrive Thursday evening. Dr. Cook has not been in the city since his disappearance shortly after the submission of his polar record to the University of Copenhagen.

Life-Savers Drowned.

New York, Dec. 21.—Two men were drowned and three others were saved, all five being members of the volunteer life-saving corps, when a new lifeboat which they were trying out capsized 200 feet from shore at Rockaway Beach yesterday afternoon. The accident occurred in a high sea.

Caught In Trap.

Chihuahua, Dec. 21.—Forty-two wounded Government soldiers were brought in yesterday, confirming reports that the troop train which left here Saturday was shot to pieces in the mountain trap known as Mal Paso, a few miles east of Pedernales. The official report states that the federals lost 21 killed and 10 missing and 42 wounded. The latter include Col. Guzman, who was in command of the expedition. The insurrectors' loss is not known here.

His enemy was on the heights, sheltered by boulders, and poured in a deadly fire. He was unable to use his big guns effectively.

Burned by Molten Metal.

Belleville, Dec. 21.—J. Connell, B. J. Conway, A. Draycott, H. Davidson and R. Moore, employed in the moulding shop of Marsh & Henthornes' foundry, were yesterday all more or less burned by molten metal. The spout of the cupola, where the metal is, blew out.

Judge's Daughter Burned to Death.

New York, Dec. 21.—Burns received when her dress caught fire as she was showing her "Christmas shopping" to her little sister, caused the death here early yesterday of eight-year-old Ethel O'Connor, daughter of Judge X. O'Connor of the municipal court.

FINANCIERS UNRUFFLED OVER FARMERS' BANK FAILURE

Curator Is Put In Charge of Farmers' and If Arrangement Cannot Be Made For a 90-Day Continuance a Liquidator Will Be Named—Shareholders and Depositors Alone Will Suffer—Bills Are Good.

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Apparently the suspension of the Farmers' Bank of Canada had been generally anticipated, for not in Toronto or in those places where branches were located, according to press despatches yesterday, was there any sign of panic or excitement around the offices, except at Allenford, where the farmers of the district are depositors, and many of them congregated around the closed office. At Millbank the Metropolitan Bank opened a new branch office.

The Canadian Bankers' Association took charge of the head office here, and G. T. Clarkson, assignee, was appointed curator, with Daniel Miller, formerly of the Merchants' Bank, as associate.

In case arrangements cannot be made for the bank's continuance at the end of 90 days, the courts will be asked to appoint a receiver for its winding up. Until either one or the other of these alternatives is adopted, those who have deposits with the bank will not be able to get their money, and it will be some time before the actual position of the shareholders will be known. Depositors are not guaranteed, but must depend on realization of assets for their accounts. The note redemption comes first, and other claims after this. The depositors rank as creditors, and must wait for realization of assets before getting payment.

One financial man remarked that the episode was not of much more significance than the Sheldon affair in Montreal, and that except for the shareholders and depositors of the bank, little would be heard of the trouble in a short time. The comparative smallness of the bank's liabilities, a little over two millions, was not viewed as enough to cause any long felt disturbance.

When interviewed with respect to criticisms which had been made regarding his comments about the Farmers' Bank during the recent trial, Judge Harding, Lindsay, said last night: "I really have nothing to add to what I have already said in court; I don't care anything about what the bank says. I did my duty in commenting upon conduct which I thought was highly dangerous, that is for a bank to tie up almost the whole of its available capital in the transaction, and that, a transaction from which they could not easily obtain any money. I mentioned it because I thought I was perfectly justified.

"I think what I said on the bench was perfectly justified by the facts. I did my duty without fear or favor, and care not for the bank or any individual."

Contrary to what happened when the Ontario and Sovereign banks went under, there is no disposition on the part of the other banks to fly to the rescue this time. "That day has passed," a banker is quoted as saying yesterday. "They have stepped in on past occasions when they felt it necessary to insure a certain amount of stability and so help themselves, but nothing of the sort will take place where the Farmers' Bank is concerned."

This, however, does not affect the value of the bills of the bank, which are perfectly good and redeemable at any bank. Provision in the Bank Act is made for the redemption of the notes of any bank which has failed or suspended payment.

Each of the Canadian chartered banks for its circulation has to deposit with the Dominion Government five per cent. of the total amount of its outstanding circulation. This amount is deposited with the Government, which allows 3 per cent. interest to each of the contributing banks. The October bank statement showed that the notes in circulation amounted to $95,983,886. Five per cent. of this amount would be over $4,750,000, against which the bills of the Farmers' Bank in November only totalled $428,490.

Hospital For Port Hope.

Port Hope, Dec. 21.—Monday the Men's Hospital Committee started an aggressive week's campaign to raise $20,000 before Christmas to establish an up-to-date hospital in Port Hope, and from present indications the undertaking will be a huge success. Among the first subscriptions received were $1,000 from H. J. Scott, K.C., of Toronto, a former Port Hoper; $1,000 from J. A. Culverwell, the electric power king, who is a resident of Port Hope, and $500 from R. Mulholland of Toronto, father of Mayor R. A. Mulholland of Port Hope.

Floated the Prince George.

Vancouver, B.C., Dec. 21.—The steamer Prince George was floated yesterday morning at 10 o'clock from Parthia Shoal, at the entrance to Vancouver harbor, where she went ashore in a fog Monday morning. The vessel was apparently not seriously damaged. Three tugs, the Joliffe, Peerless and Nanoose hooked on her at high tide, and after hauling at her for ten minutes, she commenced to move. She came into port under her own steam.

Murdered and Robbed.

Los Angeles, Dec. 21.—One of the boldest and most desperate crimes in the history of Los Angeles was committed early yesterday when two highwaymen held up, murdered and then robbed Martin Cahen at the corner of Grand avenue and Third street. Two hundred citizens joined the police in a pursuit of the bandits.

The Cholera In Rome.

Rome, Dec. 21.—Two deaths from cholera have occurred in the past twenty-four hours. Five new cases were reported in the same period.

SOME POINTS FOR VOTERS

The Bylaws Should be Supported—Three Fifths Necessary

If you don't vote that's one vote lost.

And three-fifths of those entitled to vote, must vote for the by-laws, or they can't be carried.

The by-laws required too, are of course, the Bonner-Worth and Dittman by-laws.

The papers have explained fairly comprehensively the nature of the by-laws, but every ratepayer should read and carefully digest the municipal notices concerning the measures, the natures of both of which are fully explained.

It's to Peterboro to secure the Bonner-Worth industry. It's too good a thing to let slip away.

ONLY FIVE BELOW

Despite that frosty feeling in the air, and the gentle breeze which sent ears, noses and fingers to cover this morning, it was only five below zero, so says the official report.

CROWN GAVE UP THE CASE

County Crown Attorney, R. E. Wood dropped prosecution proceedings against Samuel Davis this afternoon, and His Worship Magistrate Edmison, discharged the accused.

Davis, who comes from Anstruther, was charged with having committed incest, in the month of December, 1909.

The principal witness for the Crown, was the thirteen-year-old daughter of Davis, but her evidence was so uncertain and unsatisfactory that the Crown decided not to proceed with the case.

The children will be taken care of by the Children's Aid Society.

Davis was born in Belmont township and his age is between 40 and 42. He has had no education and can neither read nor write. Some time ago he met with an accident in which he lost three of the fingers of his right hand.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for Davis.

Moffat Woodside, the four-year-old son of Rev. G. A. Woodside, of Owen Sound, fell downstairs and broke his collar bone.

WAS NOT ABUSED

Patient in Sanitarium is Refused Damages.

Guelph, Dec. 21.—At the sittings of the High Court at Guelph, before Chief Justice Falconbridge, the only case was that of Flath v. Hobbs. This was an action brought by George Flath of Grand Forks, North Dakota, against Dr. Hobbs, superintendent of the Homewood Sanitarium, claiming damages for his wrongful and illegal detention in the sanitarium, from Dec. 23, 1905, to Jan. 1, 1906. The plaintiff claimed that he was not insane, and that he was therefore wrongly confined and restrained of his liberty. He was admitted to the sanitarium at the request of his brother, Dr. Flath of Drayton, and upon certificates as to his lunacy, and from Drs. Lucy and Roberts.

The evidence showed that he was decidedly insane and very violent. He was discharged in care of his brother after he had been at the sanitarium a week, and was, subsequently, about Jan. 20, arrested and committed to Hamilton Asylum, as a violent lunatic. He was discharged from the Hamilton Asylum, on the understanding with his brother that he would go back to Dakota.

Since his discharge he has persistently followed up the officers of the institution in which he was confined, and has reported the most extravagant tales of cruelty regarding the treatment of patients in Hamilton Asylum.

These have been investigated over and over again, and found to be delusions on his part. A mass of evidence was taken, including that of the doctors who examined him, and Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons and public charities; Dr. Clarke, superintendent of Toronto Asylum, and Dr. Russell, who was superintendent of the Hamilton Asylum. All these physicians testified that Flath was at the time of his detention in Guelph and Hamilton, a violent and dangerous lunatic, and it appears from the evidence that everything possible was done for him in his interest, that he had received the best of care and attention at the sanitarium, and that only such restraint as was necessary to subdue his mania and protect the other patients and nurses from his attacks was used.

The plaintiff conducted his own case and was afforded every possible latitude by Chief Justice Falconbridge, who patiently conducted the trial, giving the plaintiff every opportunity to put in evidence in support of his so-called claim.

At the conclusion of the evidence, and after hearing arguments from the plaintiff, the Chief Justice dismissed the action with costs.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Deposits in Canadian banks at the end of November amounted to over $840,000,000, as shown in the Government's monthly statement.

Trade returns for the last eight months show an increase in both exports and imports amounting to $72,498,430, or nearly 17 per cent.

Elmer Lepine, a Windsor teamster, shot and wounded his wife and her sister and then fired a bullet into his own head. The women will probably recover.

Josephine Brimacombe was found dead in a room at the Hotel Bristol in Colborne, and there are circumstances leading to the belief that she was strangled.

James Wills, aged about 65, crawled into the purifying room of the gas plant on Queen street, Kingston, and was found at an early hour yesterday morning asphyxiated.

Alexander Memier, aged 61, of Masham, Quebec, while attending a horse at Ottawa, was kicked and badly cut. His jugular vein was opened, causing death in a short time.

James Weber, Niagara Falls, miraculously escaped death at the plant of the Ontario Power Co. when he took hold of a cable charged with 2,200 volts. His hands were frightfully seared.

The Norwegian bark Petra, Captain Hansen, for Halifax from Mediterranean ports, struck at the entrance to Halifax harbor Monday night during a terrific gale and storm. She is a total wreck. The crew got ashore safely.

Norman Kimball of London, who was terribly injured when a buzz saw burst and killed John Dickerson, died in Victoria Hospital. His daughter, Mina, who was to be married on Christmas day, also died very unexpectedly as the result of an operation.

GRAIN GROWERS HAVE NO FLOWERS FOR THE PREMIER

Delegation Issues a Formal Statement Before Leaving Ottawa for Home—It Says That as a Result of Conference the Government Has Promised Some Relief Legislation, But Farmers Will Judge of It Later.

Ottawa, Dec. 21.—The executives of the Grain Growers Associations of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan had another interview with the Premier in his office yesterday morning regarding the terminal elevator question, and the bill to deal with it that has been prepared by Sir Richard Cartwright. It is understood that it is proposed to deal with the terminal elevator question along the lines adopted by the State of Minnesota, which some time ago placed the control of all terminal elevators in the hands of an independent commission which regulates the handling of grain, and prevents fraud in weighing or mixing.

In regard to the tariff it is learned that Sir Wilfrid Laurier assured the farmers that the Government was free to admit that the time was at hand when the agriculturists should receive some measure of relief. He further expressed the hope that this relief would be given as a result of the negotiations between Canada and the United States, looking to the framing of a reciprocity treaty between the two countries.

It is also stated that the conference on the proposed co-operative chilled meat industry was fairly satisfactory.

The grain growers issued the following official statement yesterday afternoon: "We have had several conferences with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright on the terminal elevator situation, the result of which will be that legislation will be introduced into the House immediately after the recess, dealing with this matter, and based on the representations that we have made. We are unable to say whether the proposed bill will be satisfactory until it is introduced into the House.

"The Ministers gave us a very sympathetic hearing on the chilled meat propositon, and admitted that some of the views presented on the situation affecting the marking of stock were new to them. They promised to make full investigation into the circumstances surrounding the marking of the stock.

"We have no assurance that the Government will proceed to build the Hudson Bay Railway, and provide the necessary terminals at Hudson Bay without delay, and that they would retain the ownership of both in perpetuity. The question of operation is left in abeyance for the time being.

"We recognise the reasonableness of Sir Wilfrid's public statement on the tariff that, so long as negotiations were pending with reference to reciprocity, no action would be taken on the tariff."

The delegates all left for home last evening.

CAR STRIKE AT DEADLOCK

Winnipeg, Dec. 21.—Matters in the street car strike, are at a deadlock. The civic committee which is acting as mediator between the two parties, held another conference last evening, as a result of which the time limit for the men to return to work was extended until Thursday. The company absolutely refuse to reinstate the four men whose discharge precipitated the strike, while the men hold that they must do so before the strike will be called off.

Meanwhile, the company appears to have any number of men and new ones are being trained every day. The service was discontinued early last evening, but during the day most of the cars were in operation. There were several instances of trouble, but these were not of a serious nature. No cars are being run in the district where Monday night's riot took place. The company say they will give the preference to the men up to Thursday.

Banquet at Queen's.

Kingston, Dec. 21.—The Engineering Society banquet at Queen's last night was a fine event. The speakers included Lieutenant-Governor Gibson, T. W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, Toronto; A. B. Wilmot, M.A., professor of mining and geology, Toronto; Mortimer Lamb, secretary Canadian Mining Institute; J. G. G. Kerry, consulting electrical engineer, Toronto; H. E. T. Haultain, professor of mining engineering, Toronto University; H. W. Sothman, chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Commission, Toronto; J. W. Kynock, chief engineer of the Canadian General Electric Co., Peterboro; J. W. Weller, chief engineer of the Welland Canal; R. W. Leonard, president Coniagas mine, Cobalt; A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, Ottawa.

Hotel Lost 2,198 Pieces.

Toronto, Dec. 21.—Anthony Mitchell of Todmorden was found guilty of theft of 1,747 pieces of silver and 453 pieces of china from the King Edward Hotel by a jury in the quarter sessions yesterday. The jury was out for some time, but returned their verdict shortly after 7 o'clock. Mitchell was remanded to be sentenced.

After the jury had been out for an hour, they returned to ask whether they might find the prisoner guilty of wrongfully retaining articles. Judge Morgan told them that this would be equally as serious an offence as that charged in the indictment.

Triple Murder Negro Jailed.

Durham, N.C., Dec. 21.—Three charred bodies, found in the ruins of the burned home of J. L. Saners near Hecter, twenty miles from here, on Monday night, and strands of a girl's hair discovered in a pool of blood, led to the arrest of Nathan Montague, a young negro, on charges of criminal assault, murder and arson.

LABORER ENDS LIFE

Toronto, Dec. 21.—"If God Almighty should call me to-night, I leave my insurance policy to my landlady for money owed."

This will was found in the room of Joseph Pike at 14 Alexander street last night by Mrs. Mary Jackson, with whom he boarded at that address. She was attracted to the room by the gasping of the man, who died shortly afterward from carbolic acid poisoning, before Dr. Robertson of College street, arrived. This was at 11 o'clock and at 11.30 he was sent to the morgue dead and the chief coroner notified.

Pike was an Englishman, 65 years of age, and leaves a family in Nottingham, England. He was a laborer and worked at odd jobs about restaurants. The policy is for $70 and is in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. He asked that after his indebtedness to his landlady was discharged that $20 be applied to two other debts.

Express Offices Report a Record Business

The Express Companies report a record business this week, so far, with prospects that the rush will increase from now on, till Saturday. The Canadian General Electric Company are doing considerable shipping also, including some very heavy shipments. There are excellent facilities at both express offices and depots for handling shipments in a ready and satisfactory manner.

Fatality at Fire.

New York, Dec. 21.—Two early morning fires in the upper part of New York City resulted yesterday in the death of one man, a watchman, the serious injury of a fireman, who fell forty feet to the roof of an adjoining tenement, and property damage estimated at $250,000.

The first fire, in a six-storey brick factory building, had just been rebuilt after a fire which eight months ago swept through its interior, leaving little but the heavy walls. The second fire, one of New York's rare "four alarm" fires, was in a five-storey factory building at West 125th street and Morningside avenue. The chief danger in the blaze was that it might communicate with an adjacent dyeing and cleaning establishment, a low building, where several hundred gallons of gasoline were stored.

SIR C. D. ROSE

He Took an Active Part in the Construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway

Sir Charles Day Rose, elected to the Newmarket Division of Cambridgeshire, thus recording a Liberal gain, was born in Montreal on August 23, 1847, receiving his primary education in the High School of that city. He had the reputation of a bright and industrious student, also gaining considerable fame as an athlete, for some time holding the record for the half-mile on snowshoes. He had not a little of the military spirit, and rose to a captaincy in the Montreal Garrison Artillery, serving with that corps at Trout Run in repelling the Fenian invasion of 1870. Devoting his attention to finances, he entered the banking form of Thornton, Rose & Co., London and New York, gradually working his way from position to position until he finally succeeded his father therein. His great financial ability also found scope in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, being one of the leading members of that company for several years. He is a director of the London & Brazilian Bank, the International Bank of London, and other concerns. Sir Charles carried his fine sporting instincts into mature years and is a prominent member of the English Jockey Club, having won with his horses some great events on the English turf, including a 2,000-guinea race at Newmarket, 1886. In 1893 he took to yachting, and in 1895 issued a challenge through the Royal Victoria Yacht Club of England to sail a series of matches for the America's Cup in 1896 with the cutter yacht Distant Shore, which challenge was accepted, it was subsequently withdrawn.

A CIRCLE OF FRIENDS

It is not many years since Britain stood alone among the powers, without an ally, in a position of "splendid isolation." Since that there has been made the alliance with Japan, the entente cordiale with France, a much better understanding with Russia and at least a matrimonial alliance with Spain. The only powers that help aloof were Germany and Austria. And if the report is true that exchanges have been initiated between Britain and Germany with the object of demonstrating that there are no opposing interests which should prevent an understanding between them, the circle may be completed by friendliness between these nations taking the place of the distrust that has so long existed. Germany has been the nation that especially prevented the Peace Conference at The Hague accomplishing more than it did, and if a good understanding is established with Britain the opposition of Germany to some of the peace measures, such as the limitation of armaments, may be less pronounced.

A DISAPPOINTED DEPUTATION

It may well be as is reported, that the delegation of one thousand farmers who waited upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, were dissatisfied with his reply. They made several demands, and in regard to none of them did the Premier express compliance. As to the Hudson Bay Railway he said the Government were prepared to go on with it, but that Government ownership was not in his line, and although he might go that far he held out no hopes of Government operation. Yet it was Government operation that the deputation wanted. As to the tariff, the Premier would promise nothing, except that negotiations were pending with the United States and that there would be no tariff revision this year. Nor did he consent to the demand of an increase in the British preference and free trade with Britain in a few years. The matter of terminal elevators would be dealt with, but in the Government's own way.

The members of the deputation were justified in feeling disappointed and chagrined. Sir Wilfrid had declared that he was a free trader. He advocated free trade intercourse with the United States and told the western people that he would bring about free trade as they have it in England. The free traders in the deputation had reason to feel that they were going to interview one of themselves—one who had pointed out the free trade road to them, and who probably only needed some prodding to go further on the road. But they found a waverer. The Premier talked about difficulties, differences of opinion and inopportunity, and his talk might have carried weight with his interviewers if it had not been loaded with his former ardent free trade utterances.

In this matter Sir Wilfrid has had another touch of his efforts of former days affecting his present attitude. The free traders could appeal to him with his own arguments, as the Nationalists use the same line of appeal in Quebec as the Liberals used when they were in Opposition and attacked the Conservatives for being too British or imperialistic.

The Nationalists not only adopted the talk of the Liberals, but also adopted the Liberal pictorial efforts and reproduced their cartoons. Sir Wilfrid must be anxious for someone to protect him from his own past, but he should have remembered that what one sows he shall also reap. So long as the anti-imperial agitation helped him he was satisfied to receive the benefit of it, and it is only when his friend Mr. Bourassa has become dissatisfied and used it against his candidate that he sees anything wrong about it.

THE BONNER-WORTH CO. BY-LAW

The meeting of the Board of Trade last evening discussed the proposition of the Bonner-Worth Co. by-law, the details of which are given in our report of the meeting.

The by-law should be carried. The proposition is a reasonable one and should have the endorsement of the ratepayers in general as well as the property owners and leaseholders who alone are entitled to vote on the by-law. While the ratepayer—as a ratepayer only—is debarred from casting his vote, his voice and his approval will go a long way to help establish faith in those who will decide the fate of the proposition at the polls.

The project is one of moderate claims and of moderate beginnings, the very best class of proposition. Instead of putting all energy into securing the location here of large industries, the gaining of a number of smaller concerns is much better. All the eggs are not put into one basket.

Just in proportion as the smaller industry is given over to the making of goods of what might be termed a light weight character—such as in the present proposition—the matter of freight charges and power charges assume less importance, and the advantages of the location as a distributing centre become greater.

Berlin has a large number of factories, such as button making, in which a car load of material will last a long time, and to which the relative freight and power charges bear a small proportion in the finished goods. This plan is a good one to emulate. The speakers at the meeting were and are right.

As the majority required to pass the by-law is a three-fifths one, it will call for earnest work to have it carried. When the terms are fully understood, and they should be made widely public, the difficulty of getting a sufficient majority should diminish. All should lend a helping hand.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Toronto dropped the office of Commissioner of Industries when Commissioner Thompson resigned, but there is a movement to revive it which is receiving strong support.

A prominent United States lawyer who has devoted time to industrial matters says the railways of that country lose a million dollars a day by mismanagement. The railway managers have replied by offering him large recompense if he will tell them how the saving can be made. If he does there will surely be—a reduction in rates? Oh, no—an issue of railway stocks to absorb the saving.

When you are voting this year, consider whether it would not be a good plan to have the municipal elections held on New Year's Day every year.

A HANDSOME CHRISTMAS BOX

The great advantage of the purchase of Canadian Government annuities for their children should appeal to all parents, for the annual payments are so small that provision for their future may be made with little if any, present sacrifice. For example, an annuity of $100 payable at 60 may be secured for a boy who was 5 last birthday for an annual payment of only $.75, or less than 10 cents a week, or for a total sum paid in of $261.25. In the event of the death of the child before he was 60, all the money that had been paid in with 3 per cent. compound interest, would be refunded to his heirs. When the boy arrived at an age when he was earning for himself, he could carry his own contract to completion at a rate far below what he could have obtained at his then age.

It is the custom of many parents to spend on their children at Christmas time amounts which at other times of the year they feel they could not afford, and too frequently are the purchases made of no lasting or permanent benefit. Would it not be a better plan to start each child on the road to the purchase of a Canadian Government Annuity, and continue the "Box" every Christmas until he was able to carry it for himself? The child, if he lived, would remember with gratitude Santa Claus' visits.

The following extract from a letter received from the manager of one of Canada's leading insurance companies shows what he thinks of the annuities proposition.

"In discussing the system of Government Annuities with my friends from time to time I have frankly stated that in my opinion the benefits offered for the rates charged are exceedingly liberal, and that I do not know of any institution which could possibly afford to offer terms so advantageous. If the general working population of Canada were able to realise the favorable basis on which annuities could be secured from the Government, there would be very few among the thrifty and thoughtful who would not take advantage thereof."

Information as to how the purchase may be made and of the cost at any age will be supplied you at the Post Office, or by the Superintendent of Annuities, Ottawa.

STARVING ANIMALS AND CRAZED WIFE

Kept Vigil Over Dead Body of Hudson Tunnel Laborer

(Special To The Review.)

New York, Dec 20. — Charles Kenny, a middle aged laborer, who worked for the Hudson tunnel builders, fell ill late Monday of an acute form of dropsy and took to his bed at No. 302 Third Street, Hoboken. His wife, Ida, fifty-four years old, sent word to their son, Emil, who lives at No. 22 Barrow Street, Manhattan, asking him to come to them. Emil, who is one-legged, reached the cottage on Monday night.

His father did not seem dangerously ill, and Emil, who has a family of his own, came away after securing his father's claim check for $18.50. It was yesterday before the son had an opportunity to cash the check. Late last night, with the money in his pocket, he made his way back to the home of his parents. He tried the knob of the front door. The door was barred on the inside. He knocked and knocked, but the only answer from within was a strange whining growling sound.

BREAKS IN DOOR

Young Kenny put his shoulder to the door and broke it in. As he entered his mother sprang from a bed in the corner. Clutched to her breast she held two half-starved, struggling cats. She dropped the cats to the floor and made at her son menacingly. She was half clad and terribly emaciated. Her gray hair was hanging over her face.

A third cat and four bony, famished dogs were ranging the two rooms of the house. Of his father Emil Kenny saw no sign.

In terror he backed away from his mother, fending off her attacks with one of his crutches. He reached the door, slammed it behind him, and hobbled off to find help. Two blocks away he came upon Policeman Clark, and Clark accompanied him back to the house.

As Clark pushed in, one of the dogs sprang at his throat. The policeman kicked it and the brute, too weak to keep on its feet, rolled into a corner and lay there.

BODY ON BED.

The woman had returned to the bed and was again holding her cats to her bosom. The body of her husband lay beside her. Its condition showed that it had been attacked by the starved animals. There was no fire in the place and no food. In the opinion of an undertaker, whom Clark called in, Kenny had been dead since Tuesday.

Mrs. Kenny struggled against removal, but she was too weak to offer much resistance. She was bundled into an ambulance and carried to Police Headquarters. Her mind was entirely gone. She did not recognize her son. She had apparently lost the power of speech and she fought against taking nourishment, although physicians said it was evident she had eaten and drank nothing for days.

Old-Time Actor Dead.

Pittsburg, Dec. 21.—The body of a man who died at the Allegheny General Hospital last Thursday night, and which has been unclaimed at the Pittsburg morgue here, was identified as that of Gilbert Sarony, the old-time actor. The identification came through a letter from Mrs. Sarony, his wife, in Brooklyn, who had been quietly informed by some friends in the theatrical profession that the body in the morgue, and which was likely to be buried in the Potter's Field, as an unknown dead, was that of her husband.

should always be used where several people sit, because it does not strain the eyes of those sitting far from it.

The Rayo Lamp is constructed to give the maximum diffused white light. Every detail that increases its light-giving value has been included.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp. You may pay $5, $10 or even $20 for other lamps and get a more expensive container—but you cannot get a better light than the Rayo gives.

This season's Rayo has a new and strengthened burner. A strong, durable shade-holder keeps the shade on firm and true. Easy to keep polished, as it is made of solid brass, finished in nickel.

HE WHO WAITS.

Wooed and Won His Bride as a Poor Young Man.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

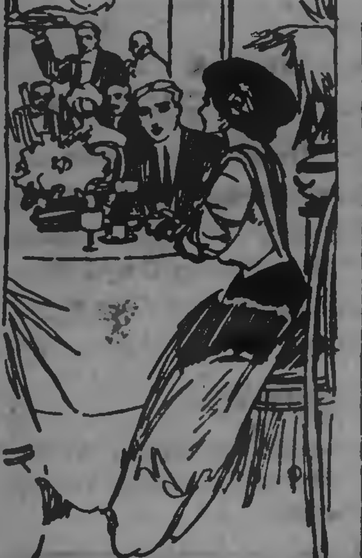
"Yes," said Fred Livingston as he skillfully threaded the maze of tables in the hotel dining room and led his mother and cousin to desirable places in a cool corner, "I rather pride myself on having found rooms for you here in the Crag House. They claimed they were filled to the brim, but I jingled my purse, the eagle screamed, and they passed the trick. How do you like it, Stella?"

The girl, half smiling at her cousin's rattling talk, was idly watching the gay scene of which she was a part.

"It's lovely, isn't it, Aunt Ju?" murmured the girl in a low tone that she might not interrupt Fred, who was ordering the meal. "I wonder if we will meet any acquaintances here."

Mrs. Livingston patted her stiffly arranged white puffs, pushed in a loose hairpin and twinkled her earrings with a slight toss of her head. "I trust we shall not meet any undesirable acquaintances," she said significantly.

Stella Hewitt flushed rosily, and her pretty teeth closed on her red lip. "To borrow Fred's simile, I suppose desirability is gauged by the scream of the eagle on the dollar."



"WHO WERE YOU SMILING AT, STELLA?"

"Vulgarity is not wit," returned her aunt tartly.

Fred turned a rubicund, good natured countenance toward them.

"Wrangling again?" he asked cheerfully. "What about now?"

Mrs. Livingston stared coldly at her son, and Stella merely acknowledged his question with a contemptuous little smile.

"Did you notice the chap that took our order?" asked Mr. Livingston, no whit abashed by their coolness.

"You mean the waiter?" Mrs. Livingston's strongly marked brows were elevated.

"Yes, the waiter. He's in my class at college. Don't get excited, mother. Lots of those chaps work their way through in this sort of way. They wait on table at these summer hotels and make a pretty penny."

"What is his name?" demanded Mrs. Livingston.

"Schneider," returned Fred nonchalantly—"a mighty nice little Dutchman too."

"Was that waiter at the Pines in Bellairy, the one who presumed to speak to Stella on the street one day—was he a college student?" This time Mrs. Livingston's voice was vibrant with eagerness.

Stella's color faded, leaving her face singularly white and strained. "Is it necessary to bring me into the discussion, Aunt Ju?" she asked disdainfully.

Fred looked uncomfortable. "You mean Forrest, Jim Forrest, I suppose. Oh, yes, he's a senior now. Good fellow too."

"I should think he might find a more dignified method of obtaining an education," sniffed Mrs. Livingston.

"Didn't uncle keep a chophouse?" asked Stella, with sudden clearness of tone.

"Hush!" Mrs. Livingston's face crimsoned angrily. "How dare you, Stella!"

"I'm sure he told me that once he kept a chophouse and an oyster parlor. He said he waited on the customers himself," persisted Stella wickedly.

Just then the diminutive Mr. Schneider arrived with the dinner, which he served most deftly and with an element of respect that must have been divided between the loveliness of the young woman he served and the recollection of the Livingston dollars as represented by young Fred, his classmate.

The conversation shifted to less dangerous ground, and the meal passed pleasantly. Fred strove to make himself agreeable to his indifferent cousin, while his mother aided with infinite tact to smooth the girl's ruffled composure.

Their stay at another mountain resort had been rather disastrous from Fred's point of view. Their first meal at the Pines had been marked by an accident. A candle had fallen over, and the flame had leaped to Stella's delicate lace sleeve and would have speedily enveloped her filmy gown had not the tall waiter who, unnoticed, had served them stripped off his coat and wrapped it about the girl, extinguishing the fire.

He had scorned Fred's generously proffered reward, received with urbanity Mrs. Livingston's patronizing commendation and thrilled at the gratitude in Stella's dark eyes. He had pretended not to see the soft little hand she graciously extended and, slipping on his coat, had rearranged the table, served the dessert and sent the hotel physician to see them.

The week that followed was a strange one for Stella Hewitt. Proud and high spirited, resenting the lovemaking of her cousin, abetted by his mother, who was Stella's guardian as well as aunt, the girl found herself deeply interested in the individuality of the man who waited on the table. He had never presumed by so much as a glance upon the incident in the dining room, and Stella liked him the better for it. One day she had met him on one of the mountain paths, and she had stopped and thanked him prettily for the service.

"I'm going to let you thank me some other time," he had said gravely.

Just at that moment Fred had appeared, and he had uttered some sharp words that divulged the fact that he knew who the waiter was.

The next day the waiter disappeared, and two days afterward Mrs. Livingston found it convenient to move on to another resort. Stella understood and smiled a bitter little smile.

Now she felt a little throb of exultation that her instinct had not been wrong. She had recognized in the man who had saved her life some claim to distinction. She admired him for his pluck and perseverance. She felt that he was more to be respected than Fred, who lazily accepted what the gods (and his industrious father) had provided and was without ambition of any sort, if one excepted his desire to wed Stella.

Dessert was served, and Stella, playing idly with her spoon, looked across the large room and saw Jim Forrest looming large in the distance, bearing a tray carefully poised on one palm. Their eyes met across the intervening space, and Stella smiled. Forrest did not return the greeting.

"Who were you smiling at, Stella?" demanded Fred hastily.

She did not reply.

Mrs. Livingston had seen, however, and so it was the very next day they gave up the rooms Fred had engaged and went back to town where there would be no doubt as to who would serve the soup and where there were no dangerous candelabra on the table.

September came, and Fred went back to college, a rejected suitor. Stella was most unhappy with her aunt, who could not conceal the bitter disappointment she suffered in her son's failure to win Stella.

The girl was very gentle with the older woman, who chided her with ingratitude and coldness. At last she sent Stella away for a long visit to another relative in the west, while she turned her thoughts to other matters and tried to forget the failure of her cherished plans.

In March Fred suddenly married a pretty girl—the sister of one of his classmates—and his college career came to an abrupt close.

One night at dinner a telegram was brought to Mrs. Livingston. She read it and uttered a startled exclamation.

"Why—Stella is married!" she exclaimed.

"To whom?" asked Fred.

"She doesn't say—merely 'Will be with you during our honeymoon. Letter explains.' Who can it be? She hasn't mentioned any one in her letters."

"Some cowpuncher," suggested Fred a little drearily, then with more animation. "I say, mother, you remember that chap, Jim Forrest, who waited on table at Bellairy last summer—the one who saved Stella's life?"

"Yes."

"Why, he's turned out to be all sorts of a big gun. Seems his father made him work his way through college—told him he didn't care what he did so long as the labor was honest—and now the old man's dead and Forrest is worth a cool ten million!"

Mrs. Livingston flushed deeply. "It would have made a splendid match for Stella," she said regretfully. "But that's always the way. If she had chosen him it would have turned out he was a beggar."

"You could trust Stella to pick out the right party, only, you see, you scared them both off, mother. I don't believe either one of them thought of love or anything else. He was merely polite, and Stella was grateful to him. If they had been left alone it might have developed into a pretty romance, eh, Florrie?" He grinned across at his pretty little wife.

She nodded wisely. "Poor old Stella!" she said condescendingly.

The letter from Stella never came, but Stella came herself, with her husband in tow—none other than big Jim Forrest himself.

"I won her as a poor man," he said proudly to Fred, "first as a waiter, and afterward I met her on the Rose Leaf ranch, in Wyoming, of which I am part owner. As a cowpuncher I made her love me, and I have only told her today that she won't have to count the pennies, and, say, she's disappointed, I do believe!"

But those who looked at Stella's happy face, with its radiant eyes and expression of perfect love and trust in her husband, felt that, whatever disappointment Stella might have as to her husband's fortune, she was quite satisfied with him.

Fellow Worms.

Before Longfellow bought the house in Cambridge so associated with his memory it was owned and occupied by old Mrs. Craigie. Mrs. Craigie was a woman of many eccentricities. "They are our fellow worms," she said.

Father Morriscy's Remedies

Now on Sale in Ontario

When Father Morriscy, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N. B., died a year ago last spring, he left his prescriptions to the Sisters of the Hotel Dieu, at Chatham, to be used for the benefit of humanity and of the church.

Not being in position to make up and distribute the prescriptions themselves, the Sisters arranged with a number of gentlemen, who had been Father Morriscy's friends, to do it for them. These gentlemen working under the name of the "Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Limited," had by the first of the year placed the remedies in nearly every store in the Maritime Provinces.

So gladly were they received, and so satisfactory has been their record of cures, that the Sisters and the Company have decided to place them on sale throughout Canada.

Father Morriscy's "No. 7", for Rheumatism and the Kidneys—"No. 10", Cough Cure and Lung Tonic—"No. 11", Stomach Remedy—"No. 26", for Catarrh, and "Father Morriscy's Liniment" can now be obtained from most dealers in this Province. If yours does not keep them write the Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Limited, Chatham, N.B.

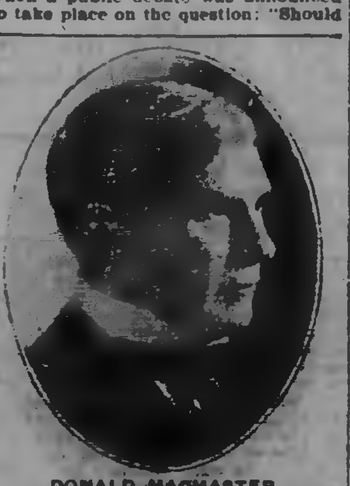
DONALD MACMASTER

The Interesting Career of the Montreal Man Who Has Attained Distinction in England

Donald Macmaster, who has made a hit in imperial politics in his election by acclamation for the Chertsey Division of Surrey, has had an interesting career in Canada, and has shown himself to be possessed of great qualities as a public man. He was first known to the people of Montreal (which was his home from the beginning of his professional career) as a leader among a band of young men of singular intellectual force and ability, who made the University Literary Society of McGill the centre of widespread public interest. After engaging for a short time in educational work in his native county of Glengarry, Ontario, he went to Montreal, to take up the study of law, where he was articled to Mr. J. J. C. Abbott, afterwards Sir John Abbott, Prime Minister of Canada, and very soon came to the front as an interesting and powerful speaker in the College Society, which, under his inspiration, attained a degree of life and interest which has seldom been equalled in the history of the University. It included graduates and undergraduates belonging to all the faculties, even Medicine throwing off its former attitude of aloofness. Among the leading members of that society, and of the Graduates' Society of McGill University at this time, were Doctor Geo. Ross, Mr. R. A. Ramsay, J. J. McLaren, now a judge in Toronto; Mr. N. W. Trenholme, now a judge in appeals; C. P. Davidson, senior judge of the Superior Court; Dr. Osler, now in Oxford; Dr. Roddick, and Dr. Shepherd, the late Dean and the present Dean of the Faculty of Medicine; F. J. Kellar, perhaps the most brilliant criminal lawyer Montreal has ever seen; Michael Lonergan, a brilliant classical scholar and a man of rare eloquence; Dr. F. W. Kelley, a leading master of the High School, and many others. The Society at that time held its meetings in the College buildings, but political subjects were excluded from debate by regulation, and this led to a cession from the University precincts, when a public debate was announced to take place on the question: "Should Ireland have Home Rule?" The debate was held, but in the Natural History Society's rooms, and Mr. Macmaster made a speech on that occasion that attracted favorable attention by its studied moderation of tone and comprehensive grasp of political principles.



DONALD MACMASTER

He was graduated in law at the head of his class, taking the Elizabeth Torrance Gold Medal, and being selected to deliver the valedictory address, and on beginning practice, very soon came to the front as a leading barrister. He always had the faculty of attracting attention to his work, being possessed of the dramatic instinct in a striking degree. Much amusement was caused by his defence of a dozen of the students of McGill, belonging to families of the best-known people of the city, who were arrested for some species of hilarious conduct one evening in the city: One of the students having been taken into custody, the others accompanied him to the Police Station to give bail, and the enterprising policemen gave the whole body of students in charge. All the incidents of the trial were followed with keen interest, and damages were ultimately obtained from the city for false arrest. About this time he crossed swords with the Hon. Thomas White, Sir John Macdonald's Minister of the Interior, who attempted to suppress a new organization of the younger men interested in politics, and on that occasion vindicated the attitude of the new group with great applause from the young men and from the citizens. He next attained prominence and fame by being elected a member of the Ontario Legislature for his native country, although still residing in the Province of Quebec; and after serving a couple of terms in Toronto, he married a daughter of Ronald Sanfield Macdonald, and a niece of a former Prime Minister of Ontario and of the Postmaster-General in Mr. Mackenzie's government, who had also been Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. At the next general election for the House of Commons of Canada, he astonished the neighborhood by coming forward as Conservative candidate in opposition to his wife's uncle, and to the whole interest of the Sanfield Macdonald family, which had hitherto been supreme in that highland constituency; and was successful in the campaign, in which he had a great army of young men as his committee. He served with distinction in the House. When the election came on, a contractor was put up to oppose him, and succeeded in defeating Mr. Macmaster. He was in this way excluded for a time from public life, and was saddled with tremendously heavy expenses, which were met out of his own resources, as he received little or no aid from the funds of his party. He has indeed always shown much independence in such matters, and refused to put himself under pecuniary obligations towards his political associates.

GROTESQUE NAMES.

Burdens That Innocent English Children Had to Bear.

In England, as in other countries, thousands of people go through life cherishing a grudge against their parents for giving them absurd or incongruous names. It was most natural that a demure and pretty girl in a north suburb should feel resentful when she had to answer to the name of Busybody, given in honor of the winner of a race fifteen years before. Among the names registered at Somerset House are Airs and Graces and Nun Nicer, which were innocently borne by two little girls who found them most embarrassing in after years.

The appalling name of Wellington Wolseley Roberts was borne by a young man who, in disposition and appearance, was anything but militant, and as little likely to win fame on the battlefield as his predecessors Arthur Wellesley Wellington Waterloo Cox and Napoleon the Great Eagar.

However, even these names, inappropriate as they may be, are to be preferred to Roger the Ass, Anna (sic) Domini Davies and Boadicea Basher.

To parents of large families the advent of another child is not always welcome, but it is scarcely kind to make the unexpected child bear a token of disapproval. It must be rather terrible to go through life, for example, as Not Wanted James, What Another, Only Fancy William Brown, or even as Last of 'Em Harper, or Still Another Hewitt. And yet these are all names which the foolish caprice of British parents has imposed on innocent children.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Barbarous Butchery of Our Seals.

A more revolting story has never been recorded than the savage plunder of our magnificent Pribilof islands fur seal herd by pelagic sealers, Japanese mostly, Canadians and avaricious seal hunters, who kill the mother seals while they are in the water seeking food for newborn cubs. An idea that a crisis has been reached in unscrupulous seal killing may be had from the fact that there were about 4,000,000 seals in the Pribilof herd when the United States government purchased Alaska from Russia in 1867. Twelve years ago there were 375,000. Today the herd presents the pitiable spectacle of less than 140,000. There are now fewer than 50,000 female breeding seals.—Leslie's.

STORES WILL BE OPEN LATE, COMMENCING TO-MORROW

The Review was informed this morning that it was decided on practically the unanimous consent of the dry goods merchants of the city that the dry goods stores would be opened till 9.30 on Thursday and Friday of this week with the usual late Saturday night holiday hours on Saturday.

Yesterday this paper was informed that the late opening for the Christmas trade would commence to-night, but this will be an exceptional case according to information given to-day.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE DISCUSSED HOSPITAL

The Property Committee met last night. There were present Mayor Morrow, Alderman Duncan, Morgan, Graham, Buller and Bradburn.

The committee decided to advertise for a caretaker for the Isolation hospital, which will be ready for occupancy the first of the year. The caretaker must be a married man and his wife must be qualified to act as cook at the hospital. Conditions governing the position may be obtained by applying to the city clerk.

W. J. Johnston, the contractor appeared before the committee regarding the heating of the hospital. Delay involving additional expenditure had been caused, he said, by the tardiness of the steamfitter. The latter claims that the building was not ready for him on the time specified in the contract.

The chairman was authorized to purchase electric bells for the Public Library.

REV. JAMES ROLLINS INDUCTED BY PRESBYTERY

Into the Pastorate of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church—Interesting Services and Large Congregation—Addresses by Several Clergymen.

(An Important Occasion)

Rev. James Rollins, of London, who succeeds Rev. J. G. Potter as pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, was inducted into the pastorate last evening, at a special meeting of the Presbytery. Rev. Dr. Marsh, Moderator of the Presbytery, conducted the induction ceremony, Rev. Mr. Skeene preached the opening sermon, Rev. Mr. Currie of Omemee, addressed the Minister while Rev. Mr. McDonald of Keene, spoke to the congregation. The occasion was full of interest to the large congregation present and the addresses were helpful and well delivered.

After opening the service with a hymn Rev. Mr. Skene spoke for a while from the text found in Acts 26 chapter 24, verse: "And Festus said with a loud voice "Paul, thou art beside thyself much learning doth make thee mad." It has been said by some that religion and madness are nearly akin and it appears that Nature will strengthen one part of man at the expense of another part. The greatest geniuses the world has ever had have been accused of madness and history proves the assertion. Columbus was laughed at and so with Paul he was pronounced a madman by no less a personage than Festus himself. As we read we see that Paul manifested culture and training andd was ready to refute the accusations of Festus. Before this time it was admitted that Christianity was all right for the uncultured and ignorant but not for the educated person but we must remember that Christianity is not a matter of education. Both cultured and unculturedd can be thorough Christians. It is not a matter of intellectual training or of philosophy, but it is with Faith Hope and Love, these three lift the man to the higher levels. So long as these three reign God's truths will abide. God is a reality and it was Paul's interpretation of the meaning of the word that staggered Festus. We should be as anxious in everyday life to not allow the material things have all our attention but think of spiritual things some times. We most of us live too much in the present and get out of touch with eternity. How is it possible for God to operate on us if we do not keep ourselves in a tender and receptive frame of mind and open to good impressions.

The verdict of history is that Paul was the wise one and Festus the fool.

"Why is it" asked the speaker, "that so many men are down in the mire." Simply because they have not come in touch with the church's personality. The spiritually minded man of to-day may be looked upon as a dreamer but those of us who claim to be Christians must always be ready to stand on the side of those who interpret God's Word. It will be a sad day for the world when God's ambassador will fail to speak of the power of the Gospel to save sinners. Let us always be ready to say a good word for the Master and speak out the word of truth

DELIVERED THE CHARGE.

Rev. Mr. Currie delivered the charge after the induction of the new pastor. In receiving Rev. Mr. Rollins into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Rev. Dr. Marsh assured him of the high regard the Presbytery entertained for him. He was heartily welcomed by the other members of the body also.

"In Peterborough," said Mr. Currie, "you will find ample opportunities for the exercise of your abilities and talents" He was certain that he would be a valuable addition and a source of strength to the Presbytery and to the community as a whole. It was his (the speaker's) privilege to bring before him some of the essentials which go towards making a minister "successful" in his calling. His one chief essential was to promote Christianity, and never in the history of the church before has it such need of men of strong character and purpose. The new pastor's great aim should be the building of character and the curing of souls. For this work the minister requires several qualifications, and the real minister cannot do any fruitful work apart from these necessities. The minister's priesthood is that of Christian character. His power and influence as a minister will come from his own character, and he is a living witness of the gospel and must have the prophetic fire. Yet, he cannot afford to neglect the intellectual study necessary in preaching the word of God. His spare time should be given up to means that will prove of benefit, both to himself and to the community. To neglect the pulpit and be more at home as a parlor entertainer lowers the clerical standard, and should be thoroughly avoided. His object must be to save the souls of men. Preachers must have a message for the community and for the society among whom they live. While a minister should not neglect his social life altogether, still there is a danger of him erring and mingling too much in society, especially in a country place, where opportunities are rare for recreation in a social way. This is a danger to be guarded against, as there is nothing so degrading as the clerical buffoon. In summing up the subject, the minister must be a man among men in every sense of the word

Pastoral visiting should be regularly performed although the congregation must not expect too much of the minister.

Mr. Currie's address was of a very instructive nature, full of sound reasoning and much helpful information.

LOYAL TO MINISTER.

In addressing the congregation, Rev. Mr. McDonald made a very suitable and fluent address, delivered in a plain and suitable manner. He told why the congregation should be loyal to the minister, and of some unreasonable demands that are made upon them at times. He also showed how they could help him

"No minister," he said, "will object to any reasonable demand, for they all realize that such are a necessity. But sometimes demands are made that lead to serious trouble. One of these things is the matter of pastoral visiting. People like to have the minister drop in and see them, but they must not look for him too often. The speaker told of an amusing experience where a lady wanted the minister to visit her once a week. Then, if the minister is a popular man, he is expected to grace every occasion from a golden wedding to a hockey match.

The machinery of the church is now so elaborate, with so many societies, and the minister is expected to be the push and backstay of the whole lot. He is also expected to know of every case of sickness in the community, even when it is kept a secret, or else the whole countryside hears about it. He is expected to settle family disputes and bring the troublesome ones into the church. He must boom the finances, or else he soon hears about it. Undesirable comparisons are also often made between the minister and sojourners who come and preach their best sermon in a very eloquent way, cultivated by long familiarity with their subject.

Rev. Mr. McDonald then offered a few suggestions how the congregation might make the best of their minister and help him, and make the most of him. The congregation makes the minister, and the minister makes the congregation. The crowning effort of a minister's life may be measured by the kind of men he makes. Some congregations have actually ruined their minister by constantly nagging at him. On the other hand, some have been ruined by too much petting, completely turning their heads. The congregation should create an atmosphere that would bring out the best traits and crush the worst in a man's life. Encourage your minister and he will do better; stand by him in the outer world, when strangers criticise him. Nothing so encourages a man as when he knows that his people are backing him. If they only knew how much he appreciates it they would do more of it

Rev. J. G. Potter, in fitting words, expressed his pleasure at being present at the induction although called to the city on a sad errand. He urged the congregation to be loyal to the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Rollins, as they had been to him.

The meeting was closed by Rev. Mr. Keith, who also expressed his pleasure at being present, and assuring the new minister of a welcome in the city.

The congregation at the close of the service, went up to the front and shook hands with the new pastor.

The meeting was dismissed with prayer.

GIVE THE OTHER FELLOW A CHANCE

That's Ald. Turner's Reason for Not Seeking Re-Election to the Council

In response to a query from the Review this morning, Ald. J. J. Turner stated that he would not be a candidate for municipal honors this year.

"I have served the city three years," said Mr. Turner, "and I would prefer stepping out of the civic arena this year and giving the other fellow a chance."

He said he appreciated very much the support the ratepayers had always given him.

BONNER-WORTH INDUSTRY A SOUND PROPOSITION

And Ratepayers Should Support the By-law Was the Opinion Expressed by Board of Trade and Citizens---Dittman By-law to Bore for Gas Also Looked Upon With Favor.

There was a good attendance of citizens at the meeting of the Board of Trade last night, and an encouraging interest was shown.

The purpose of the meeting was the discussion of the Bonner-Worth by-law and the Dittman by-law for boring for natural gas.

President G. A. Gillespie announced that the discussion of the Dittman by law would be taken up first.

He stated the by-law called for the granting of a franchise to Mr. C. E. Dittman or the company presented by him, giving the company privileges of boring for natural gas, the piping of the system, and the delivery of the gas to consumers of the city for domestic and manufacturing purposes. There were no expenses that the city would be called upon to bear in connection with the by-law or the gas production or distribution. The company will be obliged to spend $6,000 in boring and endeavoring to locate gas before they abandon the work in case gas is not found.

The prices will be fifty cents for 1,000 cubic feet for domestic use, and twenty-five cents for 1,000 cubic feet for manufacturing purposes

Mr. Dumble didn't think there was any chance of gas being found, but thought the company should be permitted to bore for it. It would cost the city nothing.

Mr. Wm. Langford thought the sale prices were prohibitive, and the company would have the advantage of an exclusive franchise.

Mr. Gillespie thought the prices compared favorably with those of other places, and inquiry had been made along these lines.

On reviewing the by-law the chairman said that the company would be granted a franchise for twenty years the first ten of which it would have exclusive privileges.

Mr. Dumble moved that the by-law be approved of. The motion was seconded by Mr. P. Campbell and carried.

BONNER-WORTH BY-LAW

The Bonner-Worth by-law was then taken up. The principal terms of this are that the company buy a site, erect a building, install $18,000 worth of machinery, and employ at least thirty hands. The city is to loan the company $12,000, for which they will have security in the real estate, building and fixed machinery.

Mr. Dumble said he would like to know what reason the council had for approving the by-law, and asked Mr. Duggan to state the reason.

Mr. Duggan gave reasons for being of the opinion that the industry would be a good one for the town. The consumption of the output was guaranteed, and the concessions to the company by the city was necessary to secure the location of the industry here. Forty thousand dollars capital was subscribed, of which Mr. Bonner and Mr. Worth had subscribed one-third. There was a big field for the industry, which he thought would expand.

Mr. Dumble thought the establishment of the factory here should be encouraged, and would be very sorry to see the by-law turned down. Every factory brought was an inducement for others. He hoped the people wouldn't throw away this industry, which might have large possibilities, in the same way they threw away the Standard Ideal industry, which located in Port Hope.

Mr. W. H. Denham thought the proposition was one of the soundest ones ever put up to the city. This concern came here without asking anyone to subscribe for stock or guarantee bonds or give them a free site. They would start out on a better basis than a million dollar concern with thousands in buildings and thousands in watered stock.

As Mr. Duggan had said, the output could be consumed locally, and the prospects were that the industry would expand.

"Mr. Duggan has carried on his work in an excellent manner," said Mr. Denham. He had looked after a great deal of correspondence, has handled thousands of letters, and results were beginning to show. There were many firms coming to Canada from the States, and some of them might be induced to locate here.

Mr. Langford said the building of the Bonner-Worth Company was well planned. It was a strong building with a superficial area of 6,000 square feet, two storeys high, with a basement.

The mayor said he would do what he could toward the passing of the by-law.

Mr. F. D. Kerr was much impressed with Mr. Denham's emphatic support of the by-law. Mr. Denham was a practical business man, and as he had looked into the matter thoroughly he thought his judgment should be of great weight.

Mr. V. Eastwood supported the proposition. He was of the opinion the location should be made with a view to its increasing value to the city in case of misfortune to the company.

The mayor said that while the by-law only called for the employment of thirty men there was practical assurance that fifty would be employed.

Alderman Bradburn spoke heartily in favor of the by-law, and thought every ratepayer should do his best to get out the largest possible vote.

Ald. Duncan and Ald. Duffus also spoke in favor of the support of the by-law. Ald. Duffus was sure the people had a good proposition to vote on.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham suggested that the public should be fully apprised as to the nature of the by-law and all incidental information in connection with the proposition.

Mr. George W. Powell thought the citizens should work tooth and nail for the success of the by-law. Mr. Dumble previously suggested that the town be placarded soliciting the people to vote for the measure. The speaker endorsed this idea.

Mr. F. D. Kerr favored the calling of another meeting, at which the mayor might address the ratepayers and give them a full insight into the matter.

Mayor Morrow justified the policy of giving inducements to the company to locate here. Every other town and city was doing it, and it was necessary that Peterborough should enter the competition if the town was to flourish.

Mr. R. Sheehy stated that a great deal of light had been thrown on the matter by the intelligent discussion. Before coming to the meeting he had not had a full knowledge of the by-law and of the prospects for the industry. Now he was convinced that it would be in the best interests of Peterborough to have the by-law passed.

On motion of Messrs. W. H. Denham and P. Campbell, the chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of five from each ward to impress upon the voters the necessity of carrying the by-law as a step in the industrial development of Peterborough.

A resolution moved by Ald. Bradburn and seconded by W. D. Ackerman was passed to the effect that the Board of Trade heartily endorse the by-law and commend it to the support of the citizens.

Locals Open at Cobourg on Jan. 9—Play Two First Games Away From Home—The Schedule.

The local intermediates will play at Cobourg and Trenton before they open here on January 19th, with Belleville as the visiting team.

The schedule was drawn yesterday at Trenton, Frank Heneman representing the Peterborough Club.

Charlie Ray and Co. go to Cobourg on January 9th. for the first game and now that the management know what's what, it is necessary that the players be handled with a firm hand, given the correct kind of practice, so that they will be ready and fit to hold the confidence which the fans are willing to place in them.

The schedule of games is as follows:

Jan. 4.—Cobourg at Belleville.
Jan. 9.—Peterborough at Cobourg.
Jan. 9.—Trenton at Belleville.
Jan. 13.—Peterborough at Trenton.
Jan. 16.—Belleville at Cobourg.
Jan. 19.—Belleville at Peterborough.
Jan. 20.—Cobourg at Trenton.
Jan. 24.—Trenton at Peterborough.
Jan. 27.—Peterborough at Belleville.

Feb. 1.—Cobourg at Peterborough.

"REDDY" McMILLAN WITH BELLEVILLE PROS.

A despatch from Belleville says:—Belleville's professional hockey team had its first practice this afternoon from 1.30 to 2.30 in the arena and a number of interested spectators were present to behold those whom Mr. "Buck" Irving has decided as fit to uphold Belleville's honor in the professional field.

Those present on the ice were Ducette formerly of the Galt champions; Sandford of last year's Brantford team; McDonald of Kingston, who has been playing of late in New York; Cross and Masson, of last year's Waterloo; Crossett of Tillsonburg, and Stalker of Midland. The only absentee was "Reddy" McMillan of Cornwall who will be here before the end of the week.

The colors this year will be the time honored ones—the Red and White.

CRANE AND BURRITT SHOWING UP WELL

The Toronto News of yesterday says:—Teddy Marriott had two full teams on the ice for the Simcoe practice. He had gotten a conglomeration of stars, but the boys are already beginning to show real team play under Teddy's tutorage. Lavery the clever Whitby point, who was scalded in an accident, will soon be around again, and will take his place. Rolph, the rough boy, was in the rink, but did not practice. Riddell, who played cover in his place, does not belong to Simcoes. Addison and Crooks played sterling games in goal, while Crane, of Peterborough, showed himself to be the best defence man on the ice. He is weighty and has speed and trickiness besides. Burritt, of Peterborough, also showed class on the foward line. Dopp is worthy of special mention for his good work up the boards, while Gouinlock, of U.C.C., also cut quite a figure. Coach Marriott has the making of two good little teams, even though Varsity did take away a couple of his tried ones.

PRIZES GALORE FOR THE SHOOTING MATCH FRIDAY

Fifteen turkeys, a dozen geese, a half dozen ducks a half dozen chickens and some rabbits.

That is not an announcement of Christmas offerings at a meat market. It's simply naming the prizes will be offered at the shoot at Jackson Park on Friday morning under the auspices of the Gold Lake Hunt Club.

9.30 o'clock sharp is the time set for the first gun and the contest will be open to everybody.

Mr. Percy Blade, Blade's Greenhouses, Park street, is the secretary.

WELSH BEAT DRISCOLL IN THE TENTH ROUND

Cardiff, Dec. 20.—Freddie Welsh, the lightweight champion of England, won his fight with Jem Driscoll, the featherweight champion, in the tenth round to-night on a foul.

The fight was a 20-round match for a purse of $12,500, the largest ever put up in Great Britain for little men. A crowd of several thousand witnessed the go, and notwithstanding the fact that the betting favored Welch the spectators were greatly disappointed when the contest came to an unexpected end, due to Driscoll butting his opponent under the chin with his head.

Welsh, besides being five years younger than Driscoll, had the advantage of weight and reach. His blows were heavier than those of the featherweight, and he was able to take

In the first round Driscoll had the advantage in points, but in the second Welch landed several hard blows, and in that and the next round his extra weight, 10 pounds, began to tell. In the fourth he sent Driscoll to his knees, and the betting went from 2 to 1 to 5 to 1 in his favor.

In one of the clinches he persistently butted his opponent, and the referee finally disqualified him.

The men's seconds jumped into the ring and promptly came to clinches. Some blows were struck and it was with difficulty the police dragged the warring partisans apart.

The winner of the fight took 60 per cent of the purse and the loser 40.

High words arose among the seconds and a free fight began, while Driscoll, badly cut up, stood with tears streaming down his face. Driscoll was the popular favorite, and the spectators expressed loud and long disapproval of the result.

There will be wrestling here on Dec. 29, and Hackenschmidt will meet Tom Flanagan's trio as originally billed. The trouble with the Morality Department has evidently been smoothed over. At any rate, whatever happened, Tom Flannagan received permission yesterday to put the bout on, and the bills are being put out to-day.

SCOTLAND FOR SOCCER

Scotland holds some wonderful football records, a full list of which would fill a book.

To single out a few only, the "land o' cakes" can claim to be the scene of the first officially recognized international match with Scotland, the event taking place on November 30th, 1872, at Patrick, Glasgow. Scotland, too, holds the record for attendance at any football match. 121,452 spectators paying £6,762 10s. for admission to Hampden Park, on April 4th, 1908. Curiously enough, an English Cup semi-final has been played at Edinburgh. Glasgow Rangers won every match in the Scottish League competition in the season 1898-99—a performance accomplished by no other club; while Queen's Park did not lose a goal during the first seven years of their existence. Finally, Scotland has done its share towards charity, for the Glasgow Charity Association, up to the end of last season, has given £30,925 to the "sweet cause."

The Canada Rubber Company has taken out a permit at Montreal for a new factory to cost $250,000.

Damage to the extent of $500 was caused when the residence of Fred. Lowell was burned at Holland Landing.

SPORT TALK

Says the Winnipeg Free Press—Patrick Finning, a Winnipegger, has returned to the city from a hunting expedition, bringing with him a monster moose. The head, which will shortly be placed in his home, measures sixty inches across the widest part of the horns, the blades of which are as much as fourteen and a half inches in width. Though the prongs on such large heads of these denizens of the forest are as a rule more stubs, Mr. Finning's prize has nineteen prongs, all of which are well developed. One of these prongs is evidently a memento of a fierce struggle with another monarch of the forest, as it comes out from the bit—or jewels of the horn as they are known to sportsmen—and curves up for about three and one-half inches, and then curves down again tight in front of the nose for about six inches. This is said to be an exceedingly rare form of deforment of the soft horn when it is what is called "in the velvet." The scalp of this monarch moose is scarred all over from probably fierce encounters from other monsters. Mr. Finning says it was about 20 degrees below zero when he shot this prize, and it came to him quite unexpectedly, as after a hard day's travel he was aiming at another moose when this monarch arose; he immediately changed his aim and was lucky enough to kill at the first shot. The head is being mounted at the Indian Curio Co., and Mr. Morrison, the head taxidermist there, says he does not remember ever having seen such a massive set of horns with so great a spread.

Christy Mathewson's supremacy as a baseball pitcher has been generally conceded and his title thereat is secure. But "Matty" longs for other worlds to conquer, and he has added the drama to his scalp belt. He expects to establish his position as a checker player on the Lawn checker board, which has been invented by Felix Wallsten.

"Matty" will have as opponent the blind champion, Ben Sully, who though he cannot make the moves himself, is proficent in the game. By the use of the Lawn checker board as large a number as can crowd into a hall can witness the game.

Every inch of the six feet six inches of Long Larry McLean, the Giant Red backstop, will earn $60.25 during the 1911 National League playing season. McLean is 78 inches tall and his salary for next year will be $4,700.

"I have figured out that you are worth about $60.25 for every inch you tower above terra firma," said President Herrmann when McLean presented himself at Garry's office for the purpose of signing Monday afternoon.

"That doesn't sound very good to me," said Larry. "Wait until I figure it out."

Larry figured for a minute and then grabbed the pen and signed.

"Too bad I'm not seven feet six," was his only comment, "that would have meant $720 more."

Larry will appear in a monolog stunt at the Columbia next week for which he will draw down $10 per minute, or about $2.60 per inch per week.

A play, the duplicate of which will probably never be made again, occurred in New York a few years ago. Pittsburg was playing the Giants, and with the score 3 to 3 in the ninth and Wagner on third, Ritchey, who was on first, started to steal. Without noticing that Wagner was almost half way home, Jack Warner lined the ball to second like a flash. Mathewson took in the situation at a glance, and shouting to Warner, he leaped wildly into the air, and with his gloved hand actually batted the ball back toward the plate. Warner got it and succeeded in retiring Wagner. And New won out in the tenth inning.

A seventeen-mile race has been arranged between Longboat and Shrubb to take place in the Broadway Arsenal, Buffalo on Christmas night. Both men are in good shape, and a close race is assured though the conditions and course rather favor the Indian.

The men fight for a purse of $12,500, the weight being 133 pounds ringside. Although Welch had to train hard to make the weight he is down to 132, but at that he will outweigh Driscoll by four or five pounds.

Driscoll has ewagered $5,000 on himself. If he wins he expects to visit America and camp on Abe Attell's trail. Welch, too, may go to America prepared to meet either Wolgast or Moran.

The fight will be decided to-morrow night in Cardiff, Wales, for a purse of $12,500 (weight 133 pounds.)

The deceased had been ailing for several months, and on Saturday evening returned from a visit with her sister in Syracuse. She attended High school here for several years, and was attending Normal in Peterborough when her poor health forced her to give it up. She was a faithful member of the Methodist church and Sunday school, and until a few weeks previous to her death took an active part in church work. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from her father's residence, Alma street, to the Norwood cemetery.

A NEW STORE

Mr. J. L. Squires has moved into his new store on Peterboro Street. This is no doubt one of the finest grocery and provision stores in Ontario outside of the cities. Mr. Squire has spared no expense in making his place of business thoroughly modern in every respect.

The front is of massive plate plate glass with deep transept, the door is fitted with large plate glass panel. The window bottoms are tiled and in each window is a large plate glass mirror. The store is heated with hot water, the radiators being distributed throughout the store in such a manner that the heating will be even, and uniform is all parts of the store.

The counters which are of very neat and attractive design were manufactured in Peterboro, and put together by the contractor, Mr. H. J. H. Fife.

The department of the store for handling meat is very attractive and tastefully arranged. The meat counter has a solid marble top and and the walls are tiled the same as the windows. Altogether the store is a credit to the village, and Mr. Squires will be in a better position than ever before to handle his large business.

SCHEMING PRESS CAMERA MEN

Readers of newspapers must often have wondered how, when some great criminal case is holding public attention, Press photographers manage to secure the pictures that they do.

Often a good deal of ingenuity is needed. During great trials the officers of the court have orders to search for cameras all Press photographers. This they do by passing their hands down the Pressman's clothes.

But the photographer is hard to baffle. The camera he uses is a tiny one called a "blocknote." It is usually less than four inches long and less than two abroad, while the depth is only some three-quarters of an inch. A camera of this size is not difficult to conceal where a superficial search cannot find it. Often, indeed, to make assurance doubly sure, he does not carry it at all as he enters the court, but entrusts it to a colleague, whose work is reporting and describing, and whom, knowing him to be a reporter only, the officials do not search.

BAFFLING THE BENCH

The "block-note" takes a photograph not much larger than a stamp. This has to be enlarged for publication. That tiny camera, the photographer can easily hold in one hand as he takes the photograph. He takes it as unostentatiously as possible. Otherwise, it is apt to be removed, and the Pressman with it. If a photographer takes a picture after the judge has issued an express prohibition, he is liable to be detained till the court is ready to rise, when a sentence at Holloway for contempt of court is quite on the cards.

The Divorce Court is the only civil court in which photographing and sketching are permanently forbidden. A printed warning to that effect has for some months hung at the doors.

The work in the lawcourt of a Press photographer is full of difficulties. The light is usually puzzling, and he must take his chance of a snapshot when the eyes of no watchful official are on him; and those eyes are keen and experienced. During a recent great trial at the Old Bailey, a lady in the public gallery tried to use a tiny camera wrapped in a coloured scarf. She had to leave.

As much as £15 has been paid before now for a good photograph of a murderer.

The man who succeeds is the man who can smuggle his camera in with ingenuity, and take his pictures unobtrusively. When, as has happened, a Press photographer has solemnly put a big camera upon a desk, and made elaborate preparations for taking a good picture, he is naturally rebuked pretty smartly by the judge, and has to go away pictureless.

A QUESTION OF POLICY

It was this sort of thing though in the case of black-and-white artists, that drew down the prohibition in the Divorce Court, a prohibition that no one has dared to break. During a certain big divorce case special artists had been engaged to draw the leading figures. They arrived with great portfolios arranged all sorts of elaborate equipment round them when they sat down, and generally made themselves as comfortable as in their own studios. The judge — Sir Gorell Barnes — could not stand that. So the dread edict went forth.

When a judge specially asks artists not to draw certain people there is usually a sound reason for it. It is often a question of public policy. Though few people know it, any person — witness, defendant, or plaintiff—has a legal right to obtain the judge's protection against the publicity involved in a published picture. But public policy may interfere. In one case, a few years ago, the accused protested against this publicity. The judge politely answered that publicity was very desirable in this particular case, as there was a strong suspicion that the criminal was wanted on other charges, and a published portrait might bring these other charges in. — Answers.

A MERRY BOOM IN THE PORCUPINE

"Every day sees from 800 to 1,000 teams crunching over the snowy road from Kelso to the Porcupine. Every day brings new provisions new prospectors, new investors to the camp."

This was the message brought down to Ottawa by Mr. W. R. Gavin of Quayon, who has come direct from the Porcupine.

"You haven't much snow here," said Mr. Gavin. "Why, up in our country we have about three feet and all the prospectors are going around on snowshoes."

"Is there at present any boom in Porcupine?" asked the reporter.

"There is a boom, and it will be even more pronounced after Christmas," replied Mr. Gavin. "At the same time there is no wild-catting, and the fact that very little Porcupine stock has been put on the market is a clear indication that the owners have confidence that their properties are of real value with plenty of the yellow metal.

"I don't think that the proposed electric railway to the Porcupine will be built on account of the decision to run up a branch of the Temiskaming and Northern."

GOLD ON QUEBEC SIDE

"Did you hear of the latest discovery of gold?" asked Mr. Gavin. "I suppose not. A man called Leroy came down into Haileybury a few days ago from what is known as the 'Chasm' on the Quebec side of the Ottawa river, bringing samples of gold he had found. It was all of the best class. I have sent five men up to stake claims in that part of the country, and other prospectors have gone trooping in." — Ottawa Free Press.

Only Woman Chauffeur—Miss Natalie White Holds the Record.

MISS NATALIE WHITE, PROFESSIONAL CHAUFFEUR.

Miss Natalie White of New York city has the distinction of being the only professional chauffeur in this country. She recently obtained a license, and her number is 19,090. Miss White attended the school of automobile engineers and successfully passed the examination before the license was granted to her.

This accomplished driver is desirous of finding employment as chauffeur for private individuals, but failing in that she says she will drive a taxicab. Women are mighty independent these days.

A Good House Plant.

"One of the nicest little plants for using in a window, either in pots set close together or in a box fitted to the window, is peperomia," says Grace Tabor in the Woman's Home Companion. "Its leaves are fleshy and shining, beautifully marbled and veined with white, and half a dozen of the plants are as stimulating a bit of vegetation as one can have in the dry air of the ordinary living room. Peperomia maculosa is the variety commonly sold by dealers. Its low and spreading growth makes it especially suitable for planting in shallow boxes or pans.

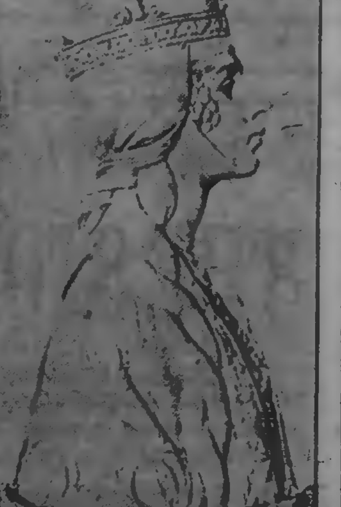
"The soil recommended for peperomias is loose and well drained by mixing broken charcoal with it, and a depth of four inches suits them better than the conventional deeper pot. They do not need as much water as most house plants.

"They may be propagated very readily by leaf cuttings the same as some varieties of begonia—that is, a leaf may be slit through by two cuts crossing each other and laid on moist, warm sand until roots appear below accompanied by tiny leaves above."

The Modern Lady Godiva.

This is the costume in which the charming young American singer Bessie Abott will appear when she stars this fall in a new light grand opera by Pietro Mascagni, called "Ysobel."

This opera is based on the story of Lady Godiva, who, as every student of English history knows, rode through the town of Coventry clad principally in her hair. In costume Miss Abott has a stained glass effect that is quite realistic.



BESSIE ABOTT IN STAINED GLASS ATTITUDE.

A Fashion Tip.

"Are separate waists going out?" is a question frequently asked and is always reassuringly answered, "They are not."

Happily for the peace of mind of all womankind, the shirt waist never has gone out and never will.

As long as our skies rain dust and dirt so long does every woman feel that after one or two wearings her shirt waist is unfit for use and must go to be laundered. Therefore she makes her waists detachable and rejoices in the fresh, crisp one that she dons. To be sure, nothing looks cooler and crisper than the fresh, strictly tailored shirt waist, but to be strictly true its looks belie it, as it is usually very warm.

The hint is given that waists of contrasting colors are to be worn this fall, but woe be to the wearer unless managed with taste and skill. They are hard to handle successfully.

A Vigorous Protest Against Corporal Punishment

Thrashing boys at school is a question oft discussed. No boy believes in it nor do many of the parents whose boys receive corporal punishment. The good effect of beating has for many years been doubted. The club or the strap will never supplant the kindly word and proper example as an inspiring element to lead the young idea on.

A writer in The London Standard says on this question:

That flogging is a part of a boy's education and helps him to become more manly and strenuous in after life is a moot point, and has been much discussed from time to time, with the result that in this generation it has disappeared to almost vanishing point in most of our public schools, except for serious offences. As one who is in a position to judge, I should say that the advantages were always very questionable, whilst the harmfulness is undeniable in many cases.

A case that has come under my observation might be of service to others, and will illustrate my point. A smart and interesting youngster of 13 years had done well at his preparatory school, and on the advice of the headmaster was entered for a scholarship at one of our big public schools, though failing, he was placed in the upper fourth with boys ranging from 14 to 16 years of age. He started his career with pride and ambition, but within six weeks had been soundly flogged twice, once for inattention in class and the last time for being last boy for English in his form. I saw this lad on Monday last, and instead of the bright and merry boy of six weeks ago I found him crushed and sullen, without any interest in his surroundings, though eight days had elapsed since the last operation. On making enquiries I found that scarcely a day passed without corporal punishment being administered, and that no boy went through his course at this school without it.

I recognize that it is a very serious thing to change a boy's school, especially from any cause of complaint; but in this case I have advised the removal, believing as I do, that flogging is not helpful to any boy in his work, but is simply a means of hiding the shortcomings and failures of the master at the expense of the pupil. I would strongly counsel parents and guardians before sending a boy to a public school to make enquires as to whether it is a so-called flogging school as well as to its successes at the public examinations; as my experience tells me that the two rarely run together.

Conserve Your Muskrats.

Since the ladies of the land have so generally decreed that furs must be worn in the winter season even the despised muskrat is being watched and studied and marshlands are being cultivated for his sustenance and home building. Muskrat trapping has for some years past been a profitable occupation among owners of such lands in various parts of the country, and the skins sold to furriers and dyers are splendidly dyed, dressed and made up to imitate costly furs. The government experts are now studying a scientific way of saving the muskrat. Verily, "things do change," as Parson Piffs would say.—National Magazine.

New Mode of Identification.

Dr. Camassia, an Italian, suggests a new method of identification. After long study he has come to the conclusion that the back of the hand possesses advantages over the fingers. He says the veins on the back of the hand are never the same on each hand, and the hands of two persons possess such distinct markings that they can never be taken one for the other. The differences become most apparent when the hand is clinched. The hand easily allows itself to be photographed and offers a much better scope for observation than the thumb print impression of M. Bertillon.—London Globe.

"THE THIEF" AT THE GRAND

Would you steal to make yourself pretty in the eyes of your husband?

That's the question which is asked in "The Thief," that powerful success which was produced at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, crowding that theatre to the doors for two solid seasons, and which comes to the Grand for the Christmas holiday, Monday, Dec. 26th.

It's a new idea, and it has a distinct dramatic value, for it is both thrilling to women and flattering to men. Usually it is the man who takes this risk to satisfy the indulgences of his wife or his sweetheart, but in the case of "The Thief" the tables are reversed and a woman is the central figure. That is the reason why Bernstein's masterpiece of emotional playwriting grips the heart of the fair sex and arouses discussions which last for months after the piece has passed by.

Margaret Illington, the actress who preferred to "mend sox rather than continue on the stage" and who has since decided to give up the darning needle for the grease-paint stick, created the role of "The Thief" at the Lyceum Theatre. In the present production, which is as complete as the New York one in every detail, Edna Archer Crawford, the only actress who dared to follow Phoebe Davis in the star part of "Way Down East," will assume the role created by Miss Illington. Miss Crawford will be supported by a company of players every member of which was engaged for his special fitness to the character assigned him.

BUYERS—WILSON

A pretty December wedding was solemnized at two o'clock this afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Buyers, when their eldest daughter, Miss Jennie D. Buyers was united in marriage to Mr. Melville L. Wilson, of London, Ont.

The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. H. J. Keith, M. A. B. D. of Knox Church, in the presence of numerous friends and relatives. The bride entered the drawing-room leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by Miss Isabel Gilchrist, of Toronto.

The bride was becomingly attired in a beautiful gown of ivory satin, with bebe Irish lace and pearls, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Buyers, wearing pink silk mull, and carrying pink roses. Mr. W. E. Reid, of Detroit, was a very capable best man.

The rooms were very tastefully decorated for the occasion, with roses, carnations, and evergreens.

After the ceremony, the guests partook of a dainty luncheon, and the happy young couple received the congratulations of those assembled.

The bride received many valuable and beautiful gifts of silverware, cut glass and China. The groom's present to the bridesmaid was a gold brooch, and to the groomsman a gold tie pin.

The bride travelled in a navy blue suit and white beaver hat with willow plume. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left on the 4.38 C. P. R. for Toronto and points West, amid showers of confetti and good wishes.

Their future home will be in London, Ont.

OSBORNE—McKEE.

The marriage took place in Edmonton this afternoon of Miss Margaret Lillian McKee daughter of Mr. Thos. McKee of Peterborough, and Capt. Frank Osborne of Edmonton. The ceremony was performed at All Saints' Anglican church Archdeacon Grey officiating.

A daring theft took place in D. E. Black's jewelry store in Calgary, when $6,000 worth of precious stones disappeared in a mysterious way.

A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION OCCURS IN ENGLISH MINE

Soon After Miners Enter Pit to Begin Work Passages Are Blocked by Explosion and Only Eight Men Are Brought Out Alive—Bishop Holds Funeral Service at Pit Mouth When Hope Is Gone.

Bolton, England, Dec. 22.—More than 300 colliers lost their lives yesterday in an explosion in the Little Hulton Colliery of the Hulton Colliery Co., which is located a little distance outside this city.

The explosion occurred early in the morning, soon after the miners had entered the pit to begin work. It's force was terrific, and later investigation showed that the lower passages had been blocked. Heroic efforts were made by rescue parties all day long, but a fierce fire, which followed the explosion prevented the rescuers from penetrating beyond 400 yards into the workings.

At half-past nine o'clock last night all the rescuers were called out of the mine and a conference was held, at which Government Inspector Gerrard, the engineers and the mine manager were present. Inspector Gerrard issued a report after making a descent into the pit, in which he declares that it is impossible that any of the miners are still alive. He adds that nothing can be done except to bring up twenty bodies found lying near the shaft.

This report was communicated to the anxious crowds around the pit mouth, after which the Bishop of Manchester conducted a touching service in the open air, after which the crowd dispersed.

No explanation is given as to the cause of the explosion which completely wrecked the mine. This is the second great mine disaster in England this year, an explosion having occurred in the Wellington colliery at Whitehaven, Cumberland, on May 12, in which 136 miners were killed.

The explosion yesterday resulted in the temporary disablement of the machinery whereby the cages are lowered and drawn to the surface, and it was a considerable time before the first rescue party reached the bottom of the pit. In all they brought out eight men, still living, but the majority of these were in a serious condition from the noxious gases.

Ten bodies also were removed, and twenty additional bodies were found partly covered by heavy falls of coal.

One of the eight miners who escaped said that the force of the explosion was such that the limbs of many were blown off.

The report was heard several miles away. Last night thousands of persons from the surrounding country were still gathered at the pit head. The holiday garb of the city is already being replaced with emblems of mourning.

For a time the lives of 400 other men were in jeopardy, as a mine communicating with the one in which the explosion occurred was also damaged by the shock, and it was sometime before its occupants could be reached and brought to the surface.

Toronto to Winnipeg Line.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—The Canadian Pacific contemplates shortening its Toronto-Winnipeg line by fifty miles by building a new line from Nepigon, 70 miles northeast of Fort William, to Savanne, 71 miles northwest of Fort William.

A party of thirty surveyors are now engaged in preparing a new winter's work under F. R. Reed, one of the company's engineers at Winnipeg.

The present main line now diverges to the south from Nepigon until it reaches Fort William, when it turns to the northwest, until it reaches Savanne, running from that point until it strikes Molson, when the line again runs south into Winnipeg.

This will give the Canadian Pacific Railway the shortest route between the east and the west as far as Toronto is concerned. The distance from Toronto to Winnipeg by the new line will be 1,185 miles. It ought to be in use in eighteen months.

EMPLOYEE OF MONTREAL FIRM MAKES GHASTLY DISCOVERY

John McSorley, Aged 60, Living Near Jarvis, Ont., is Arrested for Shipping Body of Old Man to College in Montreal—Institution Has Passed Out and Barrel Went to Poultry Company to Be Sold.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—What at first seemed to indicate the discovery of a murder, apparently turns out to be the revelation of a grave robbery for a man not altogether accountable for his actions. In any event, John McSorley, aged about 55, living near Jarvis, Ont., was arrested at his home shortly before midnight by Provincial Inspector Reburn.

Yesterday morning, at Montreal, an employe of the Canada Cold Storage Co. knocked in the head of a barrel supposed to contain turkeys and fainted when he found, instead the body of an old man. The body sat with the head between the knees and the arms folded, the limbs having been doubled up and bound with a heavy cord. The doctors say it will require 48 hours before an autopsy can be made of the body, which must be thawed out. The body is clothed in a cheap suit of underwear and a pair of heavy ribbed woollen socks. The features are those of a heavy man. The hair is thick and white, and the man was about 60 years of age, with a short grey beard streaked with brown. The flesh is scraped on one of the shins almost to the bone, but this was probably caused by pushing the body into the barrel. There is no indication of foul play.

The barrel had been addressed to the Janitor of Bishop's College, Ontario street, Montreal, which, however, went out of existence in 1906. It had been shipped from Jarvis, Ont., and was first addressed to J. Bousefield, St. Lawrence Market, Toronto, and then sent to Montreal, the shipper being J. McSorley of Jarvis, who, it is believed, took his medical degree at Bishop's College thirty years ago, but never practiced his profession.

A despatch from Jarvis last night says: "Belief here is that the body found in the barrel at Montreal yesterday was stolen from a graveyard here. Certainly no one is mysteriously missing from the neighborhood. Search of the burial records show that there were two interments of elderly men here shortly before Nov. 23, when the barrel was shipped from Jarvis.

"One was that of Matthew Johnson, a man of 70, with very white hair and a chin beard, the cheeks and jaw being shavel. He was buried Nov. 16. The other, buried in the R.C. cemetery three miles from the village, had no beard. Snow covers the ground at present, so that it can't be learned from the surface whether the grave can be opened, but Inspector Reburn of the provincial police department will undertake the exhumation tomorrow.

McSorley is about 60 years of age and has lived here all his life. He was educated for a doctor. He earns a livelihood now by poultry and cattle buying, painting and paperhanging, and doing other odd jobs. Since meeting with a serious accident some years ago he has been regarded as not altogether accountable for all he does. He has two or three brothers in this vicinity who are highly respected by the entire community. McSorley was seen at the depot yesterday shipping poultry, but was not noticed to-day. Late to-night Inspector Reburn arrested him at the home of one of his brothers. He denied all knowledge of the body, saying he had shipped the barrel for another man whom he does not know."

King Summoned Asquith.

London, Dec. 22.—Premier Asquith, who came down from Scotland especially at the command of King George, had an audience at Buckingham Palace yesterday. It lasted only three-quarters of an hour. It is understood that His Majesty wished to be fully advised as to the Premier's views and the Cabinet's plan for the future before leaving London to-day to spend Christmas at Sandringham.

Mr. Asquith saw none of his colleagues while he was in London, and he returned to Edinburgh on an afternoon train.

Forfeiture Suits.

New York, Dec. 22.—The Federal Government filed nine complaints here yesterday against Duveen Brothers, the international art dealers, in a series of civil forfeiture suits, aggregating approximately $600,000. The suits are a sequel to the arrest in October of several members of the firm on charges of gross undervaluation of imports. The goods involved are all under seizure.

Child Was Strangled.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—Chief Coroner Johnson held an inquest at the morgue last night into the death of an unknown infant whose remains were found in a cardboard box in the waiting-room of a departmental store Saturday last.

The jury decided that the child had been strangled by some person or persons unknown to them.

Montreal Plumbers' Strike Settled.

Montreal, Dec. 22.—The Montreal plumbers, who have been on strike, made an unconditional surrender yesterday, and as many of the men as could get back went back, but their places had been taken in so many shops that it will be some time before they will all be employed.

To Curtail Cotton Output.

Boston, Dec. 22.—Extensive curtailment of the production of New England cotton mills, beginning early next year, is expected, unless market conditions improve.

State Blamed For Disaster.

Newark, N.J., Dec. 22.—Not the owners, tenants, occupants or building inspectors were responsible for the factory fire here of a fortnight ago, in which twenty-five girls lost their lives, but the laws of the State of New Jersey. Such was the finding of a coroner yesterday. One girl's case was taken as a typical one of all.

New York witnesses testified that Newark is full of fire traps, but although the jury recommended that the general situation receive "immediate and drastic treatment," it was forced to find that, inasmuch as the State Legislature had undertaken to prescribe the duty of property owners, they were relieved of all liability at common law, once they had complied with the statute.

MANAGER OF FARMERS' BANK WAS ARRESTED

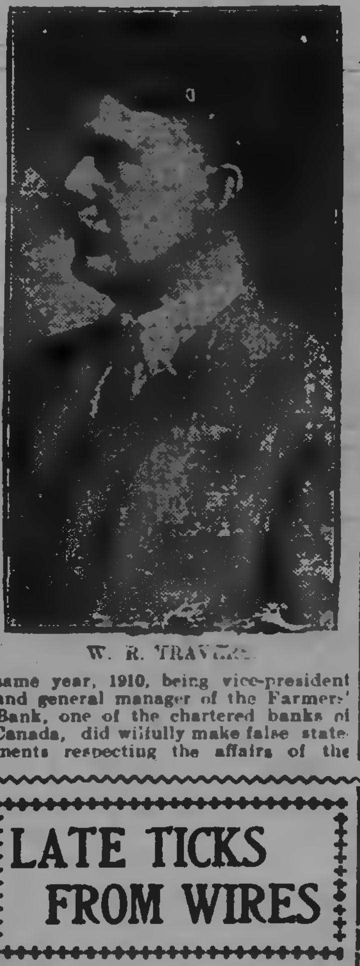
He is Taken to Police Station and Released on $20,000 Bail—Charge is That He Falsified the Bank's Statement to the Finance Minister.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—William R. Travers, vice-president and general manager of the collapsed Farmers' Bank of Canada, was arrested at 5.20 yesterday afternoon, charged with falsifying the monthly statements of the bank to the Minister of Finance. He was taken to police headquarters by Detectives Newton and Murray, where he was held till he could secure $20,000 bail, which was done at 8.30 o'clock upon the bonds of Abe Orpen, contractor and prominent sporting man.

The charge is laid under section 153 of the Bank Act, the same section under which Charles McGill, the general manager of the defunct Ontario Bank, was convicted and sentenced to serve five years in Kingston Penitentiary, the maximum penalty under the act.

The charge in the information, which was laid by Inspector of Detectives Walter Duncan, after a lengthy conference with Crown Attorney Corley, Curator G. T. Clarkson, and Jas. Bicknell, K.C., solicitor for the Bankers' Association, at the offices of the latter in the Lumsden Building, reads:

"That the said W. R. Travers, during January and the following months of 1910, down to December, of the same year, 1910, being vice-president and general manager of the Farmers' Bank, one of the chartered banks of Canada, did wilfully make false statements respecting the affairs of the said bank, in making returns to the Minister of Finance and the Receiver-General during the said months, and particularly did falsely state in each of the said returns the amounts of railway and other bonds, debentures and stocks and bonds in Canada, and the amounts of current loans in Canada held by the said bank as part of the assets, thereof on the last judicial day of the month last preceding each of said returns, said false statements being contained in the items numbered respectively 11, 12 and 14 of the schedule of assets forming part of the said several returns contrary to form of the Bank Act."



W. R. TRAVERS

Detectives Murray and Newton were at once sent out to look for Mr. Travers as soon as the warrant had been sworn out before Police Court Clerk Curran Morrison at the City Hall. They went to the Farmers' Bank premises, at Bay and Adelaide streets, and found no one there, and thence to the King Edward Hotel. They were just leaving by the King street entrance when their man came along the street.

"My God, a warrant," he remarked when he was told that he was under arrest and asked that he be allowed to walk alone to headquarters. This was granted, and the officers followed at a distance.

Arrived at the City Hall, he asked that H. H. Dewart, K.C., be notified, and this was done. Mr. Dewart arrived at the hall at 6.30 and at once bent every effort to securing bail.

Asked if Mr. Travers had any statement to make Mr. Dewart said: "I have not discussed the matter with Mr. Travers as yet, and will not to-night. He informs me that there is no basis for the charge, and, therefore, as I am not the solicitor for the bank, and only act for Mr. Travers under special circumstances, we had not previously discussed it. I understand that the charge is laid under the same section as that against Charles McGill, and that the charges are of a similar nature."

It is understood that the charge involves more than $100,000 by which the assets of the bank are said to have been enhanced in the monthly return. This is said to have been done by exaggerating the holdings in securities and concealing the losses. These losses are said to have been made largely in Cobalt stocks either by loans upon that security or actual purchase of those stocks by the bank.

The statements were also signed by Lieut.-Col. James Munro of Embro president of the bank. Spoken to by a reporter Col. Munro declared that he had not before heard of the arrest. He said that he was astonished to hear of it, and that he could not conceive that Mr. Travers would make any false return whatever. He declared that he had every confidence in him. He declined to make any further statement.

Twenty-Seven Killed.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22, 3 a.m.—Probably twelve firemen have lost their lives in a fire which destroyed the five-storey brick building of D. Friedland, leather dealer, 1,116 to 1,120 North Bodine street. More than a score of others have been taken to hospitals with fractured skulls. Twelve are still in the ruins.

Fifteen policemen have just been buried by a falling wall, which three hundred had been trying to pull over so that it would not crushed the buried firemen.

The blaze was discovered at 10 o'clock and in half an hour the building was a furnace. The firemen had climbed to the roofs of three small dwellings adjoining when falling walls buried them.

Murdered Over Cost of Living.

New York, Dec. 22.—It took just fifteen minutes yesterday for a jury to find Charles Swinton, alias Charles Phillips, guilty of murder in the first degree. The whole case occupied but seven hours.

Swinton quarreled with Isaac Lee on Nov. 1 about the high cost of living, and shot him.

THE MYSTERY SOLVED

Seems Certain That Body Shipped to Montreal Was That of Matthew Johnston, Caretaker of Presbyterian Church at Jarvis --- Grave is Empty -- McSorley Makes Denial.

Special to The Review.

Jarvis Ont., Dec. 22.—The grave of Matthew Johnston caretaker of the Presbyterian church at Jarvis who died November 16 was opened this morning and found to be empty.

There seems to be no doubt now that the body found in the barrel at Montreal yesterday was that of Mr. Johnston and that it was stolen from the grave.

John McSorley arrested yesterday in connection with the case still maintains he shipped the barrel to Toronto at the request of a stranger. A Mrs. Smithson who lives across the road from the Presbyterian cemetery declares she saw Mr. McSorley enter the cemetery with a wheelbarrow about a month ago but McSorley denies it was he whom the woman saw.

$2,000,000 Fire In Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 22.—Fire in the modern factory district of this city early caused damage estimated at $2,000,000, the death of a fireman and an unknown boy, and the injury of six other firemen.

The fire started at 2 o'clock, when a high wind was blowing. When the flames were finally brought under control ten firms had been burned out and eight large buildings destroyed. An entire block from Ninth and Sycamore streets to Broadway was swept by the flames. The firms burned out are: Krippendorf and O'Neal Shoe Co., Taylor Poole Leather Co. Cehill Shoe Co., Twinlock Co., Sycamore Street Stable Co.'s barn; Griess Pfleger Leather Co., Victor Safe and Lock Co., warehouse of the A. & L. Nurre Co., picture frames and moldings; E. O. Duncan Paper Box Factory, Wildberg Box Factory.

The fire, it is believed, started in the engine room of the plant of the Krippendorf and O'Neil Co., which was all ablaze when the firemen arrived.

Pipeman Robert Greer was buried by a falling wall. The boy was crushed by the falling of an iron electric light pole, 200 feet distant from the fire.

Three Years for Wounding.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—Three years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence given by Judge Morgan to James Shaw, who, on Nov. 14 last, shot and seriously wounded Mrs. Bessie Jones and Mrs. Georgiana Carr in a restaurant on East King street. Shaw pleaded guilty.

Edward Shaw, father of the young man, said the latter had not been addicted to drink until lately, that his mother had died when he was thirteen years of age and that he had since worked in restaurants and as a laborer.

Mrs. Jones swore that the prisoner had shown no ill-will towards her until the day of the shooting, but Mrs. Carr testified that he had previously threatened her.

Shaw said he had no ill-will towards either and had bought the revolver to shoot partridges with.

Judge Morgan, in delivering sentence, said that the fact that Shaw was under the influence of liquor didn't lessen his guilt.

Sues City of Guelph.

Guelph, Dec. 22.—Walter Buchanan, a farmer in Guelph Township, has issued a writ against the City of Guelph for unstated damages. He claims that the water of the River Speed is polluted by sewage from the city sewerage beds, in Guelph Township. The conditions have been condemned by the provincial authorities, and this is only one of several more actions likely to be taken by farmers living along the river.

Fifteen Years for Assault.

Peoria, Ills., Dec. 22.—Joseph Hoffman, a young farmer, who assaulted Miss Mazo Clark, a school teacher, at Big Hollow, Nov. 1, was yesterday found guilty and was sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary.

Kingston, Dec. 22.—Charles Corbett, governor of the county jail, has celebrated his fifty-fourth anniversary of his term of office. He has served the longest term as jailer in Canada.

TRAVERS ELECTS TO BE TRIED BY JURY

General Manager of Farmer's Bank Arraigned in Police Court on Charge of Making False Returns to Government—Pleads Not Guilty

Special To The Review.

Toronto, Dec. 22. — Wm. R. Travers, manager of the Farmers' Bank, appeared before Magistrate Denison in the police court this morning, charged with making false statements of the bank's position in his monthly reports to the Government at Ottawa. Mr. Travers through his counsel, H. H. Dewart, K. C., pleaded not guilty, and elected to go before a jury. The case was accordingly remanded.

PROMISES SENSATION

E. F. B. Johnston Announces Revelation To-day at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Dec. 22.—Sensational evidence savoring strongly of graft is promised by counsel, E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., for to-day, in connection with the Oxford roads enquiry. Yesterday's proceedings developed that M. T. Buchanan knew that the northern gravel road was for sale at $200, and had been enquiring about it before it was sold to the mysterious Mr. Tate, who is on record as having sold it to the county for $2,200.

This was revealed in a mass of correspondence produced by J. C. Hegler, counsel for Buchanan, who was on witness stand for four hours. It showed, in brief, that the county council had authorized the payment of $500 for the road early in February, and that Hegler had the property for sale for J. R. Bowman of Chicago. Prior to this Buchanan had enquired concerning it. Early in March it was nearly sold to B. B. McCarthy of Thamesford, who was a friend of Buchanan's, for $200. Isaiah Danks of Chicago, the owner, was to get $150, and $50 was to go to Hegler for commission. On March 17, McCarthy dropped out, for some unexplained reason, and on the same day Tate closed the deal for it at the same figure. Tate had sent a representative to Hegler to ask about it prior to this, and Buchanan seems to have been in touch with Tate at the same time. Mr. Hegler said he had never seen Tate.

A significant feature of Mr. Hegler's evidence was the admission that Danks, who acted with power of attorney for Elizabeth Cartwright, was the real owner of the road. This was brought out in the correspondence instructing as to the sale of the road, which passed between Hegler and Danks.

Another figure loomed up yesterday with considerable prominence in the person of John Youngs. He was a one time warden of the county. He was confronted with the statement Buchanan had made previously that Youngs offered him (Buchanan) $1,000 if he could get the Mathesons $1,200 or $1,300 for their road, for which the county paid $1,100. Youngs said he had merely done this as a "bluff."

R. E. Butler, lumber merchant, swore that Youngs was after the job of jailer in 1908, and had offered him $1,000 for his influence in securing him the position, which, considering free house, fuel, etc., would be worth $1,200 a year.

William Smith swore that Youngs suggested that he might get council to buy his toll road on the 12th line for $5,000 if Smith would give him $50. The road was ultimately bought for $4,600.

Sheriff James Brady volunteered that Youngs told him there was $100 for him if he would support his nomination for jailer.

All of which Youngs denied in the witness box.

Was Fatally Crushed.

Parry Sound, Dec. 22.—Robert Finlay, a brakeman on the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, who was crushed between two cars at the company's yards here on Monday, died yesterday morning, of internal injuries.

He was standing between two cars, which, in rounding a curve, came together. Finlay was 25 years old and unmarried. His home was in Toronto.

Strangled Himself In Cell.

Winnipeg, Dec. 21.—Edward Morris, aged 43, civic chimney sweep, was discovered to have strangled himself in his cell in the police station on Monday night. Morris was suffering from the effects of a heavy drinking bout.

Trade With Argentina.

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—The Canadian Government has decided to make an effort to develop a larger trade with the Argentine Republic and an order-in-council has been passed creating a Canadian trade commissionership for that country, with headquarters at Buenos Ayres.

H. R. Pousett, trade commissioner at Durban, who has a knowledge of Spanish, will become the first Canadian trade commissioner in the Argentine, and J. H. Chesley, commissioner at Cape Town, will be given complete charge in South Africa, with headquarters at Durban.

Hired Men at Victoria.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 22.—That many escapes of Chinese stowaways from vessels in this port during the past summer are due to the political patronage system of employing watchmen on the waterfront was the statement made before the royal commission on Chinese immigration yesterday by Collector of Customs J. H. Bowell, who was also controller of Chinese immigration until suspended in September in connection with the "passport" scandals.

He said that men employed by him to watch vessels laying in harbor, were drunken and inefficient, and spent most of their time carousing on board the ships they were supposed to guard. His hands were tied because he had to employ men whose names appeared on lists furnished him by political superiors, and he had no power to discharge these men.

"Where does this list come from?" asked Justice Murphy, the commissioner.

"When I want men, I wired to Ottawa," said the witness. "In reply I got either by letter or wire a list of possible employes. I select my men from this list. I would not employ these watchmen if I had my way."

Bowell is a son of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, and had been collector of customs many years.

Wouldn't Accept Testimonial.

Quebec, Dec. 22.—A very rare example of dignity has just been given by Hon. Auguste Rial Aangers, ex-lieutenant-governor of the Province of Quebec. Hon. Mr. Angers was admitted to the Bar fifty years ago. His friends planned a celebration and golden jubilee purse, which he has refused to accept.

Five Years For Bigamy.

Hamilton, Dec. 22.—John H. Martin, the 22-year-old prisoner who on Tuesday pleaded guilty to bigamy, was yesterday sentenced to five years at Kingston Penitentiary.

NEGROES WILL HOLD CONFERENCE

Tuskegee Ala., Dec. 22.—Booker T. Washington head of the industrial School for negroes here has just issued invitations for an international conference to be held at Tuskegee, of all persons in America and Europe interested in the education and improvement of the negro race. It is planned to hold the conference in January 1912. Students of colonial and racial questions missionaries, teachers and government officials engaged in the work of aiding the negro are included in the invitation. One purpose of the conference will be to enable those engaged in similar work in Africa to profit by the methods employed at the Tuskegee school. It is stated that the movement is aided by prominent educational leaders and that the proposed conference may result in a permanent organization of "friends of Africa."

A hungry New Orleans colored man took a hen valued at $1,000 from a coop at a poultry show, but was soon captured.

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, DEC. 22, 1910.

THE PEOPLE SHOULD RULE

Our evening contemporary has made a discovery. It has found out that Mr. Borden's amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne didn't mean anything.—Peterborough Examiner.

The foregoing from The Examiner is given as a sample of its misrepresentations. What The Review said, after quoting Mr. Borden's amendment in full, was:—"This does express the view that the people should be consulted, and that position Mr. Borden and his followers took, but it does not ask for a plebiscite or a referendum. In this country, as in all other British countries with responsible government, the people can be consulted without either." What the Review called attention to was correct. The amendment expressed regret that the people were not to be consulted. It said nothing about the method to be adopted in ascertaining their views, and there is more than one way to do that, including the regular way under responsible government.

Our Liberal contemporary may believe that it is meaningless to ask that the desire of the people should be ascertained, but it should not attribute that opinion to The Review. The Laurier Government acts in an autocratic manner, committing the country to new lines of policy of the first importance without consulting the people or allowing them to say whether they desire it or not. That the Conservatives oppose. They take the ground that the electors should be consulted on the whole matter, and that such a large undertaking as the Grand Trunk Pacific should not be proceeded with until a mandate upon it had been received from the people, and that before launching into the establishment of a navy they should be consulted on the main question and upon the lines upon which it should be established. Mr. Borden's policy is that the navy, when established, should be on lines that would enable it to co-operate effectively with other parts of the Empire for mutual defence, and not that there should be detached navies in each part of the Empire without any central control in time of need, because under such circumstances, with separate control and each part acting independently, there would not be effective co-operation.

Mr. Borden believes that in matters of new policy, where important interests are involved, the will of the people should be ascertained. The Liberal idea is that it is time enough to consult the people when Parliament is dissolved by effluxion of time and an election cannot be put off longer, although their new policy has not only been adopted but acted upon. Act first and let the people like it for not, is the Liberal policy; consult the people first is what the Conservatives say. And the Conservative view is the sound and safe one.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION

The Society for the Judicial Settlement of International Disputes has reason to be more hopeful. The great gift of $10,000,000 made by Mr. Andrew Carnegie to be used for promoting peace should give an impetus to the efforts made to establish peace on such a firm foundation that war between civilized nations will not recur. Just how the money will be used to advance the cause of peace by the donor, but that it will be judiciously expended and as effectively as can be advised there can be little doubt. If with this sum permanent peace could be established it would certainly be procured at a cheap price, for war and the fear of war cost many times that sum each year.

At the recent meeting of the Society in Washington Mr. Justice Riddell addressed the gathering and advocated at least the judicial ascertainment of facts in international disputes. In the course of his address he said:

"While the United States considered it wholly necessary that disputes between their citizens should be decided by some judicial tribunal and not by the strong hand, the same principle had not been fully accepted in cases of disputes between nations. International law had laid down laws indeed, but these might be disregarded at will—the only penalty being the unfavorable public opinion of the world. The United States supreme court, the supreme court of Canada and the judicial committee of the privy council had determined matters of as great importance as are usually determined by war. Why cannot all disputes between nations be determined by a judicial body? Even in questions of honor there was in most cases doubt of the facts and these once determined there was seldom any difficulty in deciding whether a nation should fight. Why should not the facts be determined by an impartial tribunal, thus indefinitely reducing the occasions for war?"

The President of the United States, however, in his enthusiasm aroused by the meeting, seems to have been convinced that even in questions of honour an international court should be allowed to arbitrate and said:—

"If now we can negotiate and put through a positive agreement with some great nation to abide by the adjudication of an international arbitral court in every issue which cannot be settled by negotiation, no matter what it involves, whether honor, territory or money, we shall have made a long step forward by demonstrating that it is possible for two nations at least to establish as between them the same system of due process of law that exists between individuals under a government."

There would appear to be an opportunity for the United States and Britain to demonstrate that such an agreement as the President outlined is feasible, for the British Government has intimated its willingness to enter into a treaty of arbitration, and if President Taft voices the feelings of his country it may become a fact.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Can the report that Santa Claus has discarded his reindeer for an aeroplane be verified on Christmas eve?

Laurier has promised the Western grain growers' executives that the government will build the Hudson Bay railway. Contractors not getting rich on the National Trancontinental will please take notice.

The merchants and manufacturers promise to invade Parliament Hill 5,000 strong, in rebuttal of the evidence by the farmers that they are the country. Sir Wilfrid will soon feel the need of creating a new portfolio—that of minister of deputations.

Liberal papers make use of agricultural metaphors in connection with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply to the deputation of farmers. One says "he was not to be stampeded" and another intimates that the farmers asked for "the introduction of a new blight." Mixed (farming) metaphors.

An English journalist spent thirty-eight hours in the United States and sailed again for London to write articles on his impressions of America. He must be as impressionable as a telegraphone to take in enough in that time to find a series of articles on.

The action of the officers of the Farmers' Bank in putting $560,000—most of the available capital—into the "Keeley mine" at Cobalt is the strongest of evidence that the Bank Act sadly needs amending. When bank officials risk the whole future of an institution in a Cobalt hole-in-the ground the quicker outside examination comes the better for the innocent believers in the sanity of those in charge of their funds.

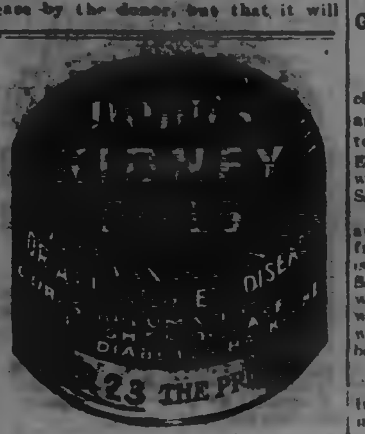
CHRISTMAS TREE AT THE SHELTER

Gifts May be Left at the Examiner or Review Offices

The annual Christmas tree for the children at the Shelter will be held again this year, and citizens wishing to send gifts may leave them at the Examiner or Review offices, from where they will be sent to the Shelter.

The number of children is large, and a generous response from the friends of the Children's Aid Society is hoped for. Those in charge at the Shelter are doing a great work, and with the assistance of the citizens, will give to the children something which many of them have never had before—a happy Christmas.

President Taft will force the issue in the potash controversy with Germany.



THE BANK OF OTTAWA

The Bank of Ottawa has just completed a very successful year and its 36th annual statement is worthy of careful perusal by business men throughout the country. The bank has had the most successful year in its history, as is evidenced by the showing made in the annual statement. During the year it increased its dividend from 10 to 11 per cent., increased its paid-up capital from $3,297,550 to $3,500,000, and its rest account from $3,297,550 to $3,900,000. It also speaks well for the bank that it was able to issue its increased capital at a premium which was added to the rest account.

The net profits for the year, after deducting charges of management, etc., amounted to $532,353, showing a considerable increase over the earnings for the previous year. The bank made large gains in its deposits, and is particularly strong in cash reserves and available assets, these amounting to nearly $14,000,000. Its current loans in Canada have increased from $24,000,000 to nearly $28,500,000, indicating that the bank is doing its full share in meeting the commercial needs of the country. The total assets of the bank have now attained the splendid figure of $43,654,000, showing an increase of almost four and a half million over the figures of the previous year.

The bank also established a number of branches during the year and in many other ways showed itself to be one of Canada's live financial institutions. During the year the bank lost by death its former president, Mr. George Hay, who had been succeeded in the presidency by Mr. David Maclaren. Mr. H. F. McLachlin was elected to a seat on the Board.

GUARDING THE KING'S TREASURES

Special precautions are being taken to safeguard the royal treasures during their removal from Marlborough House to Buckingham Palace. Four detectives have been especially detailed to guard them, under whose supervision their removal from Marlborough House will take place. These personal treasures consist of gold and silver works of art of which his majesty has a valuable collection, and some exquisite Dresden china, a number of valuable pictures and a large quantity of very rare antique furniture. In addition to these valuable there are, of course his majesty's collection of stamps and a big library containing a number of extremely rare editions.

Most of the works of art will go to Buckingham Palace, but the furniture in the personal apartments at Marlborough House and the greater part of the library will be transferred to Windsor Castle. There is only one attempt on record in the last hundred years to burgle Buckingham Palace, which is most carefully watched night and day by the police detectives both inside and out. The private entrance used by members of the royal family was one evening left ajar by the Prince Consort, and almost immediately afterward it was entered by a man who was permitted by the servant at the entrance to pass. Subsequently the man was stopped when attempting to enter one of the private apartments and was given in charge of the police—a plan of the palace was found on him.

It may be remembered that three years ago, when some of Queen Alexandra's collection of miniatures were sent to be re-framed, four of them were stolen. They were, however, recovered very shortly afterward. As a rule the royal treasures are so carefully watched and guarded that the most daring and ambitious burglar never hopes to capture them.

Hardship on Workers.

Winnipeg, Dec. 22.—Manitoba's Workmen's Compensation Act, which comes into force with the New Year, will, according to City Solicitor Hunt's advice, work considerable hardship to aged or infirm civic employes. The city solicitor advises re-organising and weeding out of employes, as the city is liable for the sickness or incapacity of employes and aged and infirm, of whom many are employed in light positions. The solicitor points out that this was the experience in Britain and other places where similar legislation has passed. This legislation will naturally have similar effect on employes of private firms and corporations.

Lose Homes by Fire.

Brantford, Dec. 22.—Peter Vansickle, a prominent farmer of Lynden, had one hand cut off while operating a corn shredder.

Two bad fires are reported from the county. Siles Hill had his house and contents entirely destroyed, the family with difficulty escaping. Hill himself was burnt about the face and hands. Harry Withrow, Townsend Village, had his house burned to the ground, losing everything. He was burned out similarly a couple of years ago.

Preparing For Session.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—Pressure is being brought by the Government upon all the Departments at the Parliament Buildings, with a view to readiness for the early opening of the Legislature. The Minister of Public Works stated yesterday that he had secured a pledge from the architect to have the intermediate wing connecting with the western wing ready for occupancy by Jan. 15.

The indications are that the House will be called together early in February.

Collided on Viaduct.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—A dozen persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, in a collision yesterday between the Manhattan flyer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a switch on the elevated structure at West 27th street, in the city limits. The locomotive of the flyer was thrown off the track finally, crashing against a viaduct girder, when the boiler exploded and set fire to the baggage car and mail coach.

A MEDIAEVAL STRUGGLE

That Took Place In the Twentieth Century.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The Loutons of St. Louis during the winter of 19—, after a summer spent in Switzerland, took a palace in Florence. That they could thus suddenly pick up a palace, that they could afford to hire a palace, is not so startling as might at first appear. Time was when all fine houses in Europe were called palaces. Nevertheless the palace occupied by the Loutons had been during the middle ages the abode of one of those princes among whom Italy was then divided. It stands on one of the many vias, or streets, of Florence, not far from the cathedral called the Duomo. In Florence are various collections of mediaeval weapons, and on the ground floor of the Palazzio V. occupied by the Loutons is a room full of blunderbusses, swords, crossbows, pikes, shields, battleaxes and parts of armor.

The Loutons being wealthy and Jeannette Louton being but twenty years old and pretty, there sprang up at once among certain Italian gentlemen with a great deal of rank and a correspondingly small amount of money a spirited contest for her hand. Among these were Princes Visconti and Strozzi, whose families had struggled with each other several centuries ago. Visconti was forty, tall, thin, bald and wore glasses, being very nearsighted. Strozzi was thirty-two, short, fat, high shouldered and wore his hair pompadour and his mustaches turned up at their waxed points a la Mephistopheles.

The two princes vied with each other in recounting to her the glorious deeds of their respective ancestors. True, they made no mention of the various instances in which they had resorted to hired assassination. But what they failed to give Jeannette read in history and learned of the cowardly as well as brave deeds of those warlike people. Gradually she came under the influence of mediaeval times. She wished she might hear the bell clang in the campanile, calling the citizens of Florence into the Piazza Senora for one of those free fights that in bygone days had strewn the pavement with corpses. If she saw a crowd gathered about a fallen horse her fancy pictured a Visconti and a Strozzi had met and fought.

"CAN YOU BLAME ME FOR NOT BEING ABLE TO CHOOSE?"

Months passed without either of the two suitors gaining any advantage over the other. Meanwhile each had made inquiries through his bankers of the financial standing in America of John Louton, and the report came back A1. When the meaning of this was explained to them their love waxed exceedingly strong. Consequently their rivalry grew hot and their hatred of each other even hotter.

There are people who do queer things, whose motive is unintelligible to any one else, and often they are ignorant of it themselves. On the one hand, Jeannette Louton had come under the influence of fourteenth century Florentine life; on the other, she was American through and through. There was a bit of spike in her makeup. Her Italian suitors were so wrapped up in the importance of that past from which they derived their own importance that when some ludicrous thought concerning it came to them from Jeannette they did not dream that it could be interpreted save with profound respect for the Viscontis or the Strozzis of old.

In Jeannette there must have been a mingling of currents, on the one hand the mediaeval stream, on the other that up to date American stream so unintelligible to Europeans. At any rate, she went back into mediaevalism in a remarkable fashion and returned to the twentieth century very much alarmed. The feuds of the Guelphs and the Ghibellines were renewed in the two princes. When they met on the banks of the Arno or in the Boboli gardens they would glare at each other and give a hereditary twitch of the right arm that came from those who, thus meeting centuries before, seized the hilts of their swords.

One morning each received a note from Jeannette Louton inviting him to call at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of a certain day. At the appointed hour Visconti appeared, and Strozzi was admitted a few minutes later. They were received in the cabinet of arms. Each started as he saw the other, glared and awaited developments.

"Your highness," said Jeannette, "you have both done me the honor to propose for my hand. From both I have listened to accounts of the prowess of your ancestors. You have transported me to those romantic times and kept me there till I almost feel that I am a part of them. As I understand it, the families you represent took an equally important part in Italian history. You are both fine representatives of a splendid race. Few women have been honored by a choice between two such offers. Can you blame me for not being able to choose between the two? I must ask you to decide which shall defer to the other. I will leave you in this room and ask you, when you have decided, to let me know."

She went out of the cabinet and shut the door.

For a few minutes there were low voices, gradually rising till they rang out in trumpet tones.

Meanwhile Ned Sackett, a young St. Louisan, who had been courting Jeannette Louton for several years, fearing that among the princes and dukes abroad she might slip away from him, had decided to follow her, arriving in Florence on the very day the young lady had suggested to the two princes to settle between themselves which should give way to the other.

The same afternoon he sauntered up to the Palazzio V. He was admitted to a surprise. The door to the cabinet of arms was open, and two men were fighting with swords as long as the antagonists themselves, while Jeannette was making frantic efforts to induce them to desist. The two princes had come from words to blows, and each had caught up a weapon. Prince Visconti, having been hurt in the head, seized a helmet and put it on. Prince Strozzi, seeing a piece of armor of the thirteenth century, in order to get even with his enemy caught it up and got it partly on his thorax. Visconti picked up a shield used in the crusades, Strozzi defending himself with an andiron 700 years old, but as Sackett entered he dropped it and replaced it with an immense iron punch bowl that had belonged to a Visconti.

To add to the terror of the scene, Visconti's face was bloody and Strozzi limped from a wound in the leg. Visconti holding the longer sword, his enemy dropped his own and grabbed a pike. This gave him such an advantage that it enabled him to drive his enemy into a corner. But near Visconti in a rack was a gun with a barrel nearly as long as the pike. Seizing it and deriving an advantage owing to his own superior length, he began to poke his adversary with it on something like equal terms. In this way the cornered man gradually forced his adversary to the middle of the room.

These changes in the situation required but very little time. It required more time by far for Sackett to recover from his astonishment at this mediaeval struggle in the opening of the twentieth century. He didn't know whether to be the more amused or astonished. The scene may have been absurd, but there was no time for laughter. Jeannette gave Sackett an imploring look. Seizing a battleax, he ran up to the combatants and began to beat down their weapons. He was not so furious as they, and this absence of anger gave him a decided advantage. Finally he secured a position between the two.

"Gentlemen," he said, "what means this unseemly row in the home of a lady?"

"They don't understand English," said Jeannette. In a word she explained the situation.

Sackett understood no Italian, but he was capital at pantomime. Putting his left arm about Jeannette, he waved his right in the air, while a sublime look rested on his face, as much as to say: "I am the victor in this case. The lady falls to me."

Jeannette, fearful that if she denied his right to her the two princes would renew the fray and kill each other, denied nothing. Indeed, she clung to the party of the third part as her only refuge.

"Senorina," said Visconti, "do we understand that this gentleman is your betrothed?"

This being in Italian, Sackett did not understand a word of it, and the lady was free to say what she liked.

"I have loved him since I was a little girl," she declared.

"Then, senorina," interposed Strozzi, "may I ask what is the use of this combat?"

"No use whatever, I assure you."

Both men had words of reproach on their lips; but, to do them justice, they were too gallant to speak them. They threw down their weapons, threw off their accouterments and making a bow to the lady, in which they nearly bumped their heads against the floor, turned and marched out with all the precision, stiffness and seriousness one sees in the portraits of their ancestors in the Petti gallery.

Ned Sackett asked Jeannette what had passed between her and her suitors after he had separated them. She said she had told them that Ned was her brother and would kill both of them unless they kept the peace.

Sackett took her back with him as his wife all the same.

Striking workmen of the Missouri Pacific R. R. returned to work.

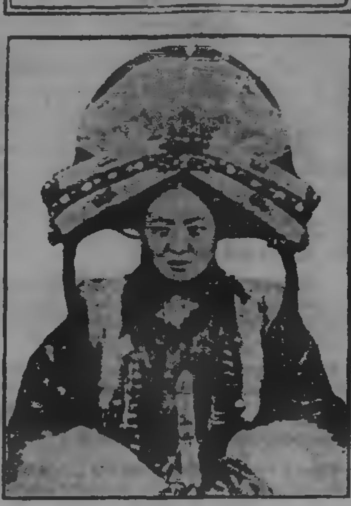
WHY NOT THIS?

Tibet Headdress Might Be Adapted to American Styles.



THE PAGOH, HEADDRESS WORN IN TIBET.

Take off the pigtails and this headdress worn by the upper class women of Tibet might adorn the pretty head of America's upper tendom. Indeed, it is not as outre as many of the hats of the day that are considered "perfect dears."

And as for expense, it lines right up with the most exclusive winter models, the price being practically fifteen hundred of our dollars.

This costly piece of Tibetan headgear is interwoven with the wearer's hair and is ornamented with many turquoises, corals and small pearls. The decorations can be easily removed. It is worn only by women who are purely Tibetan and have not married Nepalese. In other words, it is as "classy" as a Georgette or Carlier French model. American millinery artists please take notice of the "lines" and profit thereby when genius takes another eccentric chapeau flight.

A New Negligee.

For the woman who likes red and is fond of adding eccentric garments to her wardrobe comes the chanticleer negligee jacket—a gorgeous affair in cockscomb red satin. Lace medallions are used as a border trimming, and feathered rooster heads of startlingly realistic aspect ornament the edges of the sleeves and form a corsage adornment. The chanticleer craze dies hard, and this aftermath expression of the rooster fad is certainly a strange one.

THE CHANTICLEER DRESSING SACK.

Suit Case Polish.

Some persons are surprised when they go to pack their suit cases for a journey to find them shabby or spotted, the leather dry and cracked or covered with greenish mold. They have been stored away either too near furnaces and steam pipes or in damp cellars.

All leather goods, chair seats, book covers, traveling bags, etc., must have consideration if they are to retain a fresh, attractive appearance. Shoes are preserved by the dressing on the leather. Book covers of leather or calf which are beginning to grow dry and brittle should be rubbed with a very small quantity of vaseline. If merely shabby and spotted they should be rubbed with well beaten white of egg, as should chair seats and all other leather articles, with the exception of sole leather suit cases, which are best cleaned by using ordinary russet shoe polish.

New Employment For Women.

A new employment for women which is most profitable is that of entertaining invalids. A young woman student in one of the larger cities found that there was an opening for some one who could play games with persons recovering from illness, and the demand was so great that all her spare time was occupied in this manner. Chess and checkers were much in demand with women as well as men. Tact must be used to know when to win a game and when not to, for the game must have all the appearance of a close contest.

[illegible] quarantine [illegible] have stopped the spread of [illegible] in Chicago.

BREAKFAST CAKES.

You'll Like Them Some Cold Morning This Winter.

All breakfast cakes should be served piping hot on heated plates. They are best if made after the family is at table, for the least standing produces the leathery quality which makes them so indigestible. A hot cake, lightly made and deftly cooked, is as digestible as any breakfast food to the average stomach.

When cooked a thick iron griddle must be used, and a good way to grease this is to smear it with a rag lightly touched with fresh butter. If grease of any sort is lavishly used the cakes will be fried, of tough consistency and without the delicate taste required. Maple sirup, strained honey and brown sugar are proper sweeteners for any cake, but these must be put on only after the delicacy has been buttered. Never turn the cake over until one side has browned. One turn is enough.

Sour Milk Griddlecakes.—Take two and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, two cups of sour milk and one and one-quarter teaspoons of soda. Mix and sift flour, soda and salt together, add one egg well beaten and the sour milk. Drop by tablespoonfuls on the smoking griddle and, when puffed up and cooked at the edges, turn. Maple sirup goes especially well with these cakes.

Stale Bread Cakes.—Take one and one-half cups of fine stale breadcrumbs, one and one-half cups of scalded sweet milk, two tablespoons of butter, two eggs, one-half cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, three and one-half teaspoons of baking powder. Put the milk and butter with the crumbs and soak until these are soft; add the eggs well beaten, then flour, salt and baking powder, these all mixed together and sifted. Cook as directed above. Eat with brown sugar or molasses.

Buckwheat Cakes.—Take one-half cup of fine breadcrumbs, two cups of scalded milk, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-quarter yeast cake, one-half cup of lukewarm water, one and three-quarter cups of buckwheat flour and one tablespoon of molasses. Pour milk over the crumbs and soak half an hour. Add salt, yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water and then buckwheat sufficient to make a thin batter. Let this rise overnight. In the morning stir well and put in molasses and one-quarter teaspoon of soda dissolved in the quantity of lukewarm water given and cook as griddlecakes. Eat with maple sirup.

Southern Waffles.—Take one and three-quarter cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt, one cup of milk, the yolk of two eggs, the whites of two eggs and one tablespoon of melted butter. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, gradually add the milk, yolk of eggs well beaten, butter and whites of eggs whipped stiff; then cook in a round or square waffle iron. Strained honey is delicious with these.

Made Over Rugs.

As a guide to housekeepers who have old carpets to be woven into rugs it will take four pounds of brussels carpet or three running yards to make a doormat size rug measuring 1.6 by 2.6 feet and cost $1 for reweaving.

A hearth rug 2.6 by 5 feet will take twelve pounds of brussels or ten pounds of ingrain carpet.

A smaller rug for placing before the bureau takes eight pounds of carpet or six running yards.

A rug measuring 6 by 9 feet will require forty-eight yards of brussels or forty-two of ingrain, averaging about thirty-six yards.

It's With Us, the Hobble Petticoat.

Have you a hobble petticoat built expressly for wear beneath the skirt of your new tailored fall suit? If not your ordinary petticoat, with its three yard width and frou-frou fullness at the bottom, will do all sorts of awkward things to the straight, narrow hobble skirt above it. The hobble petticoats measure not more than two yards around the bottom, some of them not more than a yard and a half. Several dainty hobble petticoats are pictured here. One is a taffeta model, made in the ordinary way, but only two yards around the bottom. Another is a lingerie hobble petticoat with a flounce of eyelet embroidery; also a satin petticoat banded in at the ankle in true hobble style with a strip of Dresden ribbon. Of course all these petticoats are exquisitely fitted over the hips and are fastened smoothly with snap buttons at the back or at one side of the front.

HARRY ADAMS

ARE YOU IN FAVOR ? QUERIES FOR CANDIDATES

At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night a special committee reported a series of questions to be submitted to the aldermanic candidates at the coming elections;

1.—Are you in favor of a nine hour day on all city work, either by contract or day labor?

2.—Are you in favor of a 20 cent per hour scale for all unskilled labor on work being done for the city, either by contract or day labor?

3.—Are you in favor of abolishing the contract system and doing the work by day labor where practicable?

4.—Are you in favor of an effort to compel the Peterborough Radial Railway Company to extend their limits according to the agreement under which the charter was obtained? Also that the Company be urged to issue a cheaper rate for working men's tickets at certain hours of the day?

5.—Are you in favor of having a proper inspection made regularly in the interests of the users, of all gas and electric meters in the homes of citizens. Also that a system of inspection be established of all meat slaughtered in the city or vicinity, and offered for sale on the market or in stores, and that the inspection of milk be properly enforced and the tests published; also that the names of every milk-dealer be published who is found guilty in police court for selling impure, or milk not up to the standard?

6.—Are you in favor of establishing and properly maintaining a home for old and dependent people who are unable to work?

7.—Are you in favor of abolishing all forms of bonusing and exemptions, and the discontinuance of all present exemptions when they expire?

8.—Are you in favor of continuing the office of Industrial Commissioner?

9.—Are you in favor of municipal ownership of public utilities?

These are questions which the members of the Trades and Labor Council have adopted. If elected would you do all in your power to promote them in the city's interests?

MILK VENDORS ARE SLOW IN PAYING LICENSE

It is up to several milk vendors to act promptly and call around at the city clerk's office with the price of their license, which is now very much overdue.

The authorities have considerable trouble collecting the annual fee from the milkmen, of which there are over fifty. The amount is only $1.00.

MISS TENNANT CORDIALLY RECEIVED ON ONTARIO TOUR

An attractive circular announcing the repertoire of Miss Barabora Tennant (Mrs. Harold Wadely, of Peterborough) and also containing excerpts from very appreciative press notices, has been received by the Review.

Before her marriage Miss Tennant was an actress of recognized standing on the English stage. She is meeting with splendid success on her present tour of Ontario. Her programme of selections is a pretentious and attractive one, including readings from Shakespeare, Kipling, Longfellow and the works of other standard authors and poets.

Scene from "The Thief" the Greatest of all Dramas, which comes to "The Grand" for 2 performances on Christmas Monday, Dec. 26. Seat sale opens to-morrow morning.

The greatest event of the present theatrical season is the forthcoming appearance in this city, at popular prices of the New York Lyceum Theatre sensation, "The Thief," that wonderful play by Bernstein, which stirred all Europe, and held all America in its gripping appeal. "The Thief" touches the deepest wells of human emotion with a story as intense and interesting as it is powerful and overwhelming, as compelling as it is truthful.

A woman is so deeply in love with her husband that, to please his eye, she becomes a thief, stealing the money with which she buys clothes to make herself attractive. The scene wherein she is forced to account for her costly wardrobe has never, in the history fo the stage, been excelled or even equalled in the writing. It fairly sweeps the audience from its feet.

"The Thief" will be seen here Christmas, Monday, Dec. 26. Matinee 2.30; evening 8.15. Plan opens to-morrow mroning.

A CONCRETE TRIBUTE AND WARM EULOGIES AS WELL

The members of Murray street Baptist church assembled in large numbers at the mid-week service last night, and, after the usual hour of worship, surprised their pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, and Mrs. Webb, with a handsome and costly Christmas present. Mr. Vincent Eastwood occupied the chair and spoke of the pastor as a preacher who brought to the pulpit each week work of brain and heart that means much to the growing congregation, and also of his pastoral service. He then called Mr. R. E. Harding to the platform, who, in well-chosen words, spoke on behalf of the people, and asked the pastor and his wife to accept the gift, which at this point was laid on the table by Mr. Porter White.

It consists of a large polished oak cabinet of sterling silverware, a dozen of each size of knives, forks and spoons, also serving spoons, and bearing a family initial on each piece. The cabinet has in the centre a gold inscription plate. It is the work of Messrs. Ellis & Company, of Toronto. The silver is of old English pattern and of splendid weight.

Mr. Webb was completely surprised, but responded, expressing the gratitude which he and Mrs. Webb felt at the kindness of his people, who, during the years he has been with them have been so unchanging in their loyalty to him.

In two weeks Mr. Webb will complete his fourth year as minister of the Murray street congregation, and the hope was expressed in the addresses of the evening that it may be many years before the tie is severed.

When Mr. Webb took his seat the congregation arose and united in singing the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," and the benediction was pronounced.

POLICE COURT

The other fellow in a disorderly case, which was called at the police court Monday, got his this morning.

The trouble took place in the yards of the Montgomery hotel, Saturday and a $2 fine was imposed on the young man, who fell into the hands of the police. The other made his escape, but true to his promise, the Chief found him out.

He was inclined to lay the blame on his companion this morning, claiming that the other was the aggressor. He was sure that no blows were struck. It had only been a wrestling bout.

His Worship discovered that the amber fluid had played a part in the programme and following a lecture the martyr was dismissed.

REHILL—CRERAR.

A very pretty house wedding of much local interest, occurred at 2.30 this afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Rehill, 149 George street, when their eldest daughter Ida May, was united in marriage to Mr. Robt. Crerar, of Sulphide, Ont., formerly of this city.

The contracting parties were unattended and the Rev. G. W. Henderson, pastor of Charlotte street Methodist church, officiated.

At the conclusion of the ceremony all present partook of a daintily spread wedding dejeuner. The general popularity which the young couple enjoy was attested by the numerous beautiful gifts received, the bride being an especial favorite among a wide circle of girl friends. The groom was formerly operator at the C.P.R. depot and is well-known in the city.

Mrs. and Mrs. Crerar left on the 4.28 C.P.R. for London, Owen Sound, Stratford, and other points, the bride attired in a handsome travelling costume of golden brown, with hat to match. They will take up residence in Sulphide, Ont.

PAINFUL INJURY TO YOUNG MAN THREE FINGERS CUT OFF

Accident at the C. G. E. Works on Tuesday Evening

Mr. Frederick McFadden who works in the Canadian General Electric Company and boards at 69 Hunter street, had three fingers so badly injured while at work on Tuesday that they had to be amputated at Nicholls Hospital on Wednesday. The accident occurred at six o'clock in the evening and Comstock's ambulance was summoned to convey him to the hospital. Dr. Young attended his injuries dressing them temporarily but on Wednesday morning it was found that amputation was necessary. He is progressing to-day as well as possible but it will be some time before he recovers from the painful injury.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER GIVEN AN ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

Miss Thompson, who resides at 112 Stewart street, was last evening surprised by her Sunday school pupils, of which she has a class at Knox church, and was presented with a handsome silver fruit spoon and a gold pin, accompanied by an eulogistic address.

Miss Thompson, who has been a faithful teacher in the Sunday school for the past three years, was very much surprised. She is leaving soon for Sherbrooke, Que., and her departure will be keenly felt in Knox church, and more so by her pupils. Miss Fieda Law read the address and made the presentation. The address was as follows—

Dear Miss Thompson,—It is with sincere regret that we, your pupils learn of your departure from among us, and as we have spent many pleasant and profitable hours together we could not let you go without in some manner acknowledging your interest and kindness towards us. We would ask you to accept in return this small token as a mark of the esteem in which you are held by your Sunday school class.

Wishing you a future of happiness and many happy returns of the season.

On Behalf of Your Class.

Miss Thompson, although completely taken by surprise, thanked the class for their thoughtfulness and kindness in a few suitable words.

A LIGHT SEASON FOR CHARITY AND RELIEF

The number of requests for charity for this season of the year is smaller than that of other years is the report of the Relief Officer, Mr. F. W. Miller.

There are new cases of course continually coming to light, but these come from homes where sickness or accident to the bread-winners of the family have made a request for charity a necessity.

The majority of those who in the past have come to this city at a bad season of the year, so far as work is concerned, have not asked for relief.

Deportation of such cases, which would mean, were they allowed to remain here, a big bill of expense, is looked after by Mr. Miller at the proper time, and altogether "spongers" get little sympathy.

This summer work has been plentiful and in progress up to late in the fall and this winter promises to be a light one with the Charity Board and its relief officer.

THE COMMITTEE WILL CLEARLY EXPLAIN BONNER-WORTH BYLAW

The special committee appointed for the purpose of presenting the Bonner-Worth by-law to the ratepayers in a comprehensive way met this morning. The committee is composed of Mayor Morrow, Ald. Gillespie, Ald. Bradburn, P Campbell and Industrial Commissioner Duggan.

The committee decided to take steps to lay the matter before the public more clearly as there seems to be some misapprehension as to the size and importance of the industry.

The wages bill of the company will amount to between $20,000 and $25,000 annually and there is only one firm in the country that will manufacture in competition to this industry. Millions of dollars are being spent annually in Great Britain for the product that the factory will turn out.

END OF STRIKE

Prospects Bright for Settlement of Winnipeg Trouble

Winnipeg, Man., December 22—Although none of the parties are willing to make definite statements, the feeling is growing generally that the end of the street car strike is in sight. The committee from the City Council which started mediation proceedings yesterday, had long sessions with the men's executive and the company's officials again yesterday and appeared to be quite hopeful of an early and amicable settlement. The company has consented to extend the time during which the strikers may return to work until the end of the week.

A Popular Magazine

A. P. Penton, one of the publishers of the Canadian Motor Boat, was in the city yesterday to close arrangements with a local writer to supply special articles for the magazine. "Motor Boat" is attracting great popularity with those interested in motor boats both in a technical sense and from the standpoint of aquatic pleasure and utility.

CHILDREN WILL BE MADE HAPPY

Citizens are Responding With Gifts for Christmas Tree at Shelter

The Review was informed to-day by Mr. Wm. Henry, superintendent at the Children's Shelter, that citizens are responding generously to the appeal for gifts for the annual Christmas tree.

However, there are many young hearts to gladden—the number of children at the institution at present being seventeen—and other citizens, who no doubt will be only too glad to assist, are asked to do so in good time.

MAIL AND EMPIRE

Any old kind of an arrangement as to handicap seems to suit Hackenschmidt. When he was told that he was in danger of defeat in Toronto he merely sniffed. "I could not earn a thousand dollars any easier. If Mr. Flanagan thinks that he can get three men—and I don't care who they are—to stay with me for an hour and a half, I'll make him another proposition. I'll take on four of the best men Flanagan can produce and throw the whole outfit in an hour and three-quarters. When that suggestion was communicated to Flanagan, the latter jumped at it. Four of the six men now under consideration will be named to-day. If Westergaarde, the Kansas City giant, who gave Hackenschmidt a hard bout, can be secured, perhaps the Russian lion won't be so chesty. There will be a busy hour and three-quarters at Riverdale Rink on the 29th.

BENCH SHOW

Heavy showing of Boston Terriers —Dr. King Will be Judge

The Boston Terrier Club of Canada will hold their third annual specialty show in Toronto on Monday, January 2, 1911, at the southwest corner of King and Bay streets. According to the way the entries are coming in the secretary reports this show will be one of record, and which will surpass any dog show heretofore held in Canada, consisting of one distinct breed.

The Boston terrier is now recognised as the most popular dog of the day, and all those interested should not miss the chance of looking over the best dogs owned in Canada, as well as a number from Buffalo and other American cities, which will be on exhibition at this show. Dr. D. C. King, of Peterborough, will officiate as judge, and as there is an unusually large classification the judging will commence promptly at 1 o'clock. Over 100 special prizes will be awarded in the evening commencing at 7.30. The Boston Terrier Club of Canada have arranged to hold this show under the rules and regulations of the Canadian Kennel Club, and all dogs on exhibition will be properly benched, so that visitors may have every opportunity of seeing the dogs to the best advantage.

At Appleton, Wis., fire destroyed the plant of the Appleton Chair Co., causing a loss of $36,000.

THE TURF

That fast brown stallion, Admiral Red 2.09 1-4, who took his record at the last grand circuit meeting at Columbus, was recently purchased by William Dagler, of Rushville, Ind., from R. M. Flick, of Kittanning, Pa. This horse has had an interesting career.

Several years ago he was sold in New York for $80 to a fish dealer, and for four years he made his regular rounds, pulling a flash wagon. He finally drifted into the hands of a man who found that he had speed, and proceeded to develop it. He took a record of 2.18 3-4 in 1909, and showed so much that he was staked (the past season in the half-mile track events through Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia. Flick saw the horse at one of the early meetings, liked his way of going and bought him at a reasonable price. Over the two-lap rings Admiral Red was practically unbeatable, and Flick realized a tidy sum over and above the purchase price.

In spite of his obscure surroundings during his early career, Admiral Red is a royally bred horse, being a son of the famous sire, Red Wilkes, out of the great brood mare, Tiny Tum, by Victor Bismark. He is the fastest trotting son of Red Wilkes now living, and is also the last of the produce of that famous sire to be raced at least on the mile tracks.

A ready response to solicitations for subscriptions for the ice races will no doubt be received when the canvass is made by the committee.

Eight hundred dollars will be given in prize money for two days' racing on January 16th and 17th. It is only natural that the members of the committee would like to raise $250 or $300 towards that amount before they assume the risk of putting up the purse.

SPORT TALK

Few men who go to the game today, even the old-timers, know what a resourceful player Mike Kelly was. In a game at Detroit Chicago led 1-0 in the ninth, with Detroit at bat, one out and a man on second, when the batter hit a screeching liner to right, where Kelly was playing.

It was very dark at the time and the game should have been called earlier. No one thought Kelly could intercept the ball. Suddenly he leaped high, and as he landed, turned and threw to the second baseman, completing an apparently wonderful double play, for the man on second had started when he saw the ball hit.

As the last of the crowd was leaving the park, a Detroit man ran across the field, holding a ball in his hand. He had been sitting in right field. As a matter of fact Kelly hadn't caught the ball at all. He merely bluffed and threw in a ball he had concealed in his uniform, awaiting just such a chance. That smash was really a home run, and the final score should have been 2-1 in favor of Detroit.

Like the famous old pitcher that goes to the well once too often, like the man that sticks to the races or the stock market, the fighter will not quit the ring until he is broken or cleaned.

It is hardly necessary to say that at this time we have in mind particularly the great Battling Nelson, fighter, banker, politician, ranch-owner and the man who put the town of Hegewisch, a suburb of Chicago into a niche in the hall of fame.

It had been our intention not to mention that well-known phrase, "Can he come back?" in writing of Nelson, but it is unavoidable. He could not do it, and went down to defeat before Owen Moran, the English featherweight, knocked out for the first time in his career as a fighter for the first water.

DEFEAT MEANS THE END

The battle in Louis Blot's open-air pavilion out in San Francisco marks the end of Nelson as a pugilist. He is all through but it is pleasant for his friends to remember that on the retiring from the ring, the battler takes up life as a wealthy young man who has made his hay in large stacks while the sun was shining, and has it neatly baled and under cover, so that he may laugh heartily at any threat of rainy days.

GREATEST PUG OF TIME

Nelson undoubtedly was one of the greatest fighters that this country has ever produced. The history of his life is a tale of perseverance, hardship and courage that is equaled by few biographies of great characters in history. He had made himself. Unaided, he fought his way to the top. He won the lightweight championship, lost it, and won it back again, only to lose it finally to Ad. Wolgast, because he would not quit the ring so long as he felt there was a battle left in him.

The end was inevitable and even though he announced before meeting Moran that if he defeated him and followed that success by winning back the title from Wolgast, he would retire, the chances are that he would have fought again, lured into another match by the promise of more thousands to add to his fortune, and eventually have been defeated.

AT BEST AT 133

Nelson was one of the few true lightweights. That is, he was one of those rare human specimens who, when at their best, weighed just about 133 pounds. It is likely that if he keeps himself in good physical condition he will never weigh much more than this to the day of his death. This is seldom the case with young fighters who forge to the front in the lightweight.

THE RING

Cadillac, Mich., Dec 22 — When shown the challenge issued to him last night by Owen Moran, of England, Ad. Wolgast, lightweight champion said to-day:

"I will fight Moran for the championship and $5,000 side bet within ninety days after the date of his challenge to me; the fight to be of not less than 45 rounds or to a finish the weight to be 133 points ring side, my end of the purse to be not less than $12,500 regardless of the result. It makes no difference to me where the fight takes place.

HART A POOR ONE.

Sapulpa, Okla., Dec. 22 — Carl Morris, "the white man's hope," of Oklahoma, knocked out Marvin Hart in the third round of their fight here. Hart was at one time heavyweight champion, Jeffries having given it him after Marvin defeated Jack Root.

Morris promises to be a real wonder, and if he can continue as he has started will be a thorn in Jack Johnson's side.

JOHNSON'S PUPIL

Pittsburg, Dec. 22 — The skill of Champion Jack Johnson, the heavyweight, was unavailing to save his protege Walter Monahan, from the ring onslaught of George Cotton, and now Cotton is the master of the black man's pupil.

Only Johnson's ring generalship saved Monahan from a knockout in their six round bout. The fight was unsatisfactory to the spectators, who clamored for more action all through the mill.

WOLGAST REPLIES TO NELSON.

Detroit, Dec. 21.—Battling Nelson, who is filling a theatrical engagement, and who is eager to fight Lightweight Champion Wolgast again, said to-day:

"I will fight Wolgast just as soon as he is ready, any time and any place, for any amount of money.

"Luck made Wolgast champion. He does not own a punch, but I tell you what he has, and that is durability. He can take an awful lot of punishment. I was not in condition, and I knew I could not get into condition on Feb. 22nd last, when they continued to demand a fight. I put the figures so high that I never thought they would accept them."

When informed to-day of Battling Nelson's statement, Ad. Wolgast issued the following reply:

"If there is any club that will give me a large enough purse to fight Nelson I will be only too glad to take him on. I am sure Nelson is running a big bluff when he says he will meet me on my own terms. Nelson at the present time is not worthy of me. He is down and out."

ONLY WENT THREE ROUNDS.

New York, Dec. 21.—With a crushing right-hand smash on the jaw, Marvin Hart, the Louisville heavyweight, was knocked into a helpless condition in the third round at Sapulpa, Okla., Tuesday night. The smash was administered by Carl Morris, hitherto unknown, who weighs 235 pounds stripped, and has been fighting only three months. Morris was a railroad fireman for several years. Always a rough-and-tumble scrapper, he was generally feared wherever he went, but he had no idea of becoming a professional pugilist until Jim Jeffries was beaten by Jack Johnson at Reno. Then Morris decided to train off some of the superfluous flesh and went about the task with such vigor he reduced rapidly. Incidentally he met a number of obscure prize fighters in the heavyweight class and put all of them to sleep with the punch that knocked the daylights out of Hart.

As a result of these victories, Morris announced his determination to keep on fighting until he had beaten all comers and had earned enough fame to win the hurling of a challenge at the big negro champion.

FORBES GOT THE DECISION.

Windsor, Dec. 21.—Harry Forbes, former bantam weight champion of the world, won the decision over Earl Denning, of Chicago, in eight rounds at the Windsor Athletic Club to-night by fast and clever work throughout. In the third round Forbes was knocked down, but at all other times had the best of the battle.

BASEBALL

The Toronto Eastern League team of 1911, will train at Macon, Ga., says the New York American.

STEVENSON, WIZARD OF THE CUE

ANSWERS.

H. W. Stevenson, who has just proved his right to the title of billiard champion, is, in some ways, the most remarkable of all the players of the day. Nobody has ever made billiards look as absurdly easy as he has. It has been said that the only reason why Stevenson ever breaks down when he has once started to score is that "he sometimes thinks of the other fellow."

Some of the great players are laborious in style, and anxious of expression; but Stevenson piles up his hundreds with the swiftness and unconcerned ease of a skilled juggler. One can almost imagine him yawning as he does it. One finds it difficult to understand why he should ever stop. There seems to be no difficulties.

A Hull man, thirty-six years old, Stevenson has played billiards all over the world. And he has had some queer experiences during his tours. He has played an exhibition match in an up-country town in Ceylon, when the sandflies lay half an inch thick on the table and two men were kept busy brushing it.

"CROWDED OUT."

He was playing once in a small Australian town, and was threading his way through some difficult positions when he happened to notice that the audience were making their way in a mass towards the door. This struck him as unusual; but he went on. When next he raised his eyes it was a large snake wriggling gracefully round the room!

When a boy, the billiard champion was employed at a West End club. He has been known to say that it was through saving up his shillings in those days to watch John Roberts play that he learned his billiards. He soon went to South Africa, turning billiard professional there before he was twenty-one. In his Johannesburg days he was much slower in his play than he is now; but even then he was known in different parts of South Africa as "the juggler from Jo."

When he came to England to fight his way to the top, he found lots of difficulties in his path. The "inner ring" of professionals refused to give him matches, and tried to "crowd out" the unknown man. But, in one way, he could insist on a match, and he used that way. He challenged for the championship; and on the very first afternoon of his match he showed his nerve, and surprised the world of billiards by rattling off a break of 648.

After that, of course, there was no further talk of "crowding out." The public meant to have him, and did. Before he was twenty-five he was the champion. His biggest spot-barred break, by the way, is 862, made five years ago, and all in one hour.

NOT ALL BEER AND BILLIARDS.

Stevenson is a small, slim man, with a slight moustache. Though he looks so imperturbable he is really very high strung. He has said that it took him three years to learn to sit still while his opponent was scoring.

A billiard expert's life is not altogether a bed of roses. He is practically debarred from all other sports, lest his delicate touch should be spoiled. He had to live in constant dread of injury to the hands, which means as much to a man in the first flight of billiards as to Paderewski or Kubelik.

Stevenson—and it shows how absurdly simple he makes the game look—has been known to relate that after a certain match in South Africa an aged Boer came up to him and asked him what he was doing that for.

"For!" said Stevenson. "Why, for a living."

"A living! Do you mean to say people pay you for doing that?"

"Yes, they do!"

The Boer raised his hands to heaven in amazement. "Allemachtig!" he ejaculated. "I could do it myself. But it is true that the English are mad!"

He served as Vice-President for eight years and as President for six years. Mr. H. F. McLachlin was elected to succeed him on the Board.

Reference was made in the Report submitted last year to the possibility of an improvement in the general business of the country. The Directors have satisfaction in reporting that their anticipations in this respect have been to some extent realized, and that the Bank has shared in the improvement in trade.

Branches have been opened since the last Annual Meeting, at Birch Hills and Kinistino, Saskatchewan; on Fairmont Avenue, Montreal; College Street and Ossington Avenue, Toronto; and at Porcupine, Ontario. The sub-office at Bridge Street, Hull, has been closed.

Premises for the occupation of the Bank have been secured during the year at the corner of Rideau and William Streets, Ottawa, and at Lachute, Quebec.

The building at Cochrane, alluded to in the last report, has been completed, and a commencement has been made on the building at Vancouver.

The balance of the last issue of five thousand shares has been paid, and the fractional shares sold, the extra premium over the rate of allotment being included in the total profits for the year.

All the Offices of the Bank have been inspected during the year.

HUGE AEROPLANE TO CARRY THREE

New York, Dec. 21.—The first big passenger-carrying aeroplane has been constructed at Rochester by John F. Cooley, of New York, and is ready for launching. It is composed of four horizontal planes above a hull of wood stretched over a ribbed frame work. There are four planes, triangular in shape, attached to spars, which extend outward from the upper part of the hull. Two 90-horse power engines within the hull operate twin screws, and either engine can be shut off while the other continues to operate the whole of the driving mechanism. The machine will carry two operators and one passenger. The type is wholly new and the trial of the new machine will be watched with interest by the aeronautic world.

W. M. AITKEN

The Brilliant Young Canadian Montreal Organizer Who Has Entered British House of Commons

William Maxwell Aitken, who has been elected on the Unionist ticket to represent Ashton-on-the-Lyne, is one of the most successful of Canada's younger financiers. He was born on May 25, 1879, at Newcastle, a lumbering town on the Miramichi River, and that his father, who has only recently retired, was for many years a clergyman in that town. A point on which the local biographers love to dwell is that the Aitken to whom Burns dedicated his "Cottar's Saturday Night" was an ancestor of his. He never had anything more than a common school education and a short course in law at Chatham, N.B. There are stories of his first struggling for a living down Nova Scotia way as the representative of a life insurance company, while the age of 20 found him working as Secretary for the late Mr. John F. Stairs of Halifax, who was at that time President of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company. Mr. Aitken is always ready to acknowledge the value of the training he got under that gentleman; in fact, in Halifax one day he pointed out Mr. Stairs to a friend, and remarked: "That man made me."

W. M. AITKEN

Mr. C. Lintern Sibley, in a recent issue of The Globe, gave an excellent sketch of this brilliant young Montrealer:

"Mr. Aitken is as yet such a boy of a man that it is impossible even approximately to gauge the real quality of his mental calibre. Nobody can yet say whether his extraordinary gifts have sharp and strictly circumscribed limitations, or whether his achievements to date are but the expression of a personality so dominant that it will mark him as one of the leading Canadians of his time. This much, however, can be said: Nobody, not even his bitterest enemy—if, indeed, he has an enemy—will deny that he is a remarkable man. The outstanding feature of his career thus far is that, starting as a poor boy in a country town away down in Nova Scotia, he, by his own unaided efforts, made himself a millionaire before he had attained the age of 30. He is now 31. Already it is not alone as a self-made man of wealth that Mr. Aitken is distinguished. He is more than that. He is recognized as a man of great capacity for organization, and he is in the very front rank of the younger men who are assuming the lead in the financial centre of the Dominion. The present indications are that, were he to elect to remain identified with financial projects, he would inevitably occupy a leading place in the ranks of the successors of the old school of financial magnates who built up the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Bank of Montreal to their present pre-eminent positions.

"At present, if you seek Mr. Aitken during business hours, when he is in Montreal, you will find him in a suite of offices occupied by the Royal Securities Corporation, Limited, on St. James Street, within a stone's throw of the headquarters of the Bank of Montreal, the greatest banking institution of the Dominion. He is here, not as an employe, but as the president, for the Royal Securities Corporation is an institution of which this boy-man is the proud father. Through this institution are handled the extraordinarily numerous and varied great enterprises with whose management he is intimately connected.

"Never was a busier man. His whole waking hours are crowded with work, and it is probably true to say that in pursuance of that work he has, during the three years in which he has lived in Montreal, had more interviews with business men than any other man in Canada.

"He is a pleasant young man to talk to—has a nice way with him, a voice and a manner of speaking that begets confidence, and a personality that somehow encourages immense respect for him, a respect altogether out of proportion to what one ought to feel for such a youth; that kind of respect which would seem more in place if it were enkindled by grey hairs and a venerable mein. Physically speaking, he seems to run to head; that is to say, his head gives you the idea of having been moulded for a man of massive build, instead of for one of rather slight physique. Although he is of Scotch ancestry, his countenance is strikingly suggestive of the Teutonic type. He has very fair hair, and blue-grey eyes, and, while vivacious in conversation, and quick to appreciate humor, he is of a serious cast of mind.

"With all this rush of work, Mr. Aitken has found time to acquire a taste for the rich man's sport of automobiling; while in a quiet way he has become interested in charitable work."

Many lines were delayed by storm and reached the port of New York a day late.

MAIL ORDER CATALOGUE AN INTERESTING BOOK

We have just received through the mail an interesting book, and an attentive perusal of it leads one to many speculations.

The book is the annual catalogue of one of the departmental stores and mail order houses.

Before going into a detailed criticism of it, let us first give credit where credit is due, and say, without hesitation, that as an example of the printer's art, it is above reproach. The type is good, the setting is perfect, and the proofreading has evidently been well and carefully performed. The services of expert writers of advertisements have been employed. The illustrations are unmistakably reproductions of photographs, and every advantage has been taken that is known to the photographer's art. Beautiful women have posed for these pictures, dressed in the garments offered for sale. Even a superficial knowledge of the printing and engraving business would enable one to appreciate the immense amount of work required and the expense entailed in the production of the book.

The expense entailed—that is the point where our interest is stimulated—that and the question which naturally follows—who pays for it all? Lithographic and photographic work is high priced; models of such handsome appearance and perfect build are scarce, and charge well for their services, writers of advertisements do not work cheaply. The quality of paper that will properly take the impression of a fine half-tone is decidedly expensive, and the presswork and bookbinding are not inconsiderable items. We presume we are justified in coming to the conclusion that the firm is not incurring this expense without expectation of being amply remunerated.

Another point worth considering is that this book, we understand, is not distributed in the city where the firm does business. Customers in the city are attracted by entirely different means—by daily advertising and the offering of special price inducements in some particular line, the idea being, of course, that if a person comes to buy some article at a bargain, he or she may be induced to make more extensive purchases at the regular prices.

In addition to the expense of producing this book, the firm is located in the business district of a large city, there the expenses of doing business are probably higher than any place in Canada, so that their total relative expense seems to be altogether out of proportion to those of the merchants doing business in Peterborough.

Another feature we notice in the book is that there are offerings of a lot of articles in one lot at a specified price for the whole. In other words, people are induced to buy many things they do not want in order to get one or two they do want. Is not the sending of this book to us, as residents of this city, a reflection on our local pride and public spirit! We strongly advise our readers not to take the alluring picture book too seriously. Our local merchants are quite capable of filling all our requirements, and do so at reasonable prices.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

On Sunday afternoon the Guild of Goodfellowship intend to spend a social hour from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Princess Theatre. There will be no regular address, but in its place will be Christmas carols, hymns and sacred songs, in which the whole audience will have been specially selected to make everybody feel perfectly at home, so that those who are in boarding houses, and away from their friends, may partake of the spirit of fellowship and goodwill which animates this day. It is hoped that such a gathering, which is open to all men of 18 years or one, will do something to bring good cheer to the lonely ones in our midst, and help to make the festival a happy one for them.

All men will receive a happy welcome and the larger the crowd the brighter the singing.—

Remember! three o'clock on Sunday afternoon at the Princess Theatre.

A Correction

A heading over an article regarding Mr. S. A. Smithson, of Keene, in yesterday's issue was not correct. Mr. Smithson goes to Berlin. It should have read,

HIS GOOD FORTUNE.

When He Had to Work He Started a Dainty Rolling Mill.

I was just entering upon my thirty-fourth year when, owing to the failure of my wife's father, I found myself obliged to make a living.

I had often wondered where all the steel rails came from, and now I determined to go into the business of supplying them to railroad companies. Having learned through careful inquiry that nearly all of them were made in rolling mills, I persuaded the owner of a bankrupt iron foundry to convert it into a rolling mill. Then I went to a good reliable machinery man on the next block and told him to send me some of the very best rolling mill machinery that he had in his store.

Meanwhile my noble wife had not been idle, and by the time I was ready to begin operations she had induced several of the most brilliant women in society to agree to buy all their steel rails of us. Touched by her unselfish devotion, I clasped her in my arms, while the tears coursed down my cheeks.

Then I called on a railroad president, told him that I desired to become self supporting and asked him to buy some of my rails. He told me to deliver a basketful to his place of business every Saturday night.

Greatly elated over my prospects, I called together a number of workingmen whom I found idle on the streets and directed them to make some nice steel rails without delay and take them around to the kind railroad president.

Rejoicing at the prospect of steady employment, the workingmen hastened to obey, and the rails that they made under my direction proved so durable that in a very short time I had all the orders that I could fill.

I attribute much of my success to the fact that each rail is delivered to the customer tastefully wrapped in tissue paper fastened with pink ribbon.—Delineator.

DINNER GUESTS.

Bad Enough to Be Late, but to Be Too Early Is Unforgivable.

It is an accepted aphorism that one should never be late at a duel or a dinner. Tardiness is unpardonable, but the converse is also true. If it is an offense to be late it is unforgivable to be too early. This refers solely to the dinner, since duels are affairs of the past.

Overhaste may be flattering, but it is also inconsiderate. If the dinner is important enough to be called a "function" and the house in which it is given is sufficiently large to be rated as a mansion the early guest may find a hostess still in her maid's hands. If instead a cottage and a simpler repast await one the housewife may herself be putting the last necessary touches to the salad. In either case the hostess feels a warm personal approval and an ability for self praise if the coming guest is a little tardy. Should the soup be cold or the roast dry it is not her fault; she was on time.

Can anything be more harassing than the "you-don't-mind-me-dear" type of woman who always comes half an hour early and always wants to "help?" Can anybody worship one's household gods, turn away the nicks, display the gleaming side in the profaning presence of a comparative stranger? A despairing hostess said recently:

"When I have just men coming I spend my soul on the cooking; when it's women I put my extra efforts into burnishing the house; when it's both I almost kill myself, and when they come too early I want to lie down and die."

"The quality of mercy is not strained." It applies even to giving one's prospective hostess ample leeway for preparation. Failing this, invitations may soon be written, "At 7, and please be late!"—Youth's Companion.

Shop Early Says Walt

Go and do your Christmas shopping ere the last lone dog is hung ere the weary clerks are loping all day long worn out unstrung. Last year I postponed my buying till it had struck the 'leventh hour and the toilworn clerks were sighing and their souls were sick and sour and they sold me candy donkeys with reproaches in their glance; and they sold me wooden monkeys which would climb a stick and dance. And the clerks were all so hurried they showed evidence of fag; they were all so tired and worried that I couldn't chew the rag. Half the pleasure of the buyer lies in kicking on the price, saying that it's three times higher than is decent right or nice. If you do your shopping early you can roar and kick and paw saying, in a manner surly that there ought to be a law. You can call the merchants robbers and the clerks a pirate crew, roast the makers and the jobbers raise a charming howdydo. But if you postpone your shopping till the season's almost o'er then the clerks will cease their hopping till they've fired you from the store.

The Democratic territorial convention of New Mexico, which met in Santa Fe, condemned the new constitution.

THREATS TO BLOW UP A CHURCH

Seattle, Dec. 21.—"Your church will be blown up and you with it if you don't stop your abuse of Gill and Wappenstein."

This message was contained in an anonymous letter received on Sunday by Dr. Adna Wright Leonard, pastor of the First Methodist church, at his residence, 1222 Fifteenth avenue north.

The note was received following a sermon delivered by Dr. Leonard during which he denounced the vice which he said was rampant here, and declared that the protection of womanhood of the city demanded the recall of Mayor Gill.

In a torrent of abuse the writer of the threat said that if Dr. Leonard "ever opened his mouth again against Gill and Wappenstein he and his whole congregation would be blown to atoms."

The letter was written on paper obtained at a downtown hotel and was sent through the mail.

"I do not fear that the threat will be carried out and had hoped to keep secret the fact that I received the letter," said Dr. Leonard, to his congregation Sunday night. "All writers of anonymous letters are cowards, and I do not believe that we are in danger of any inhuman attack, as the one suggested. I will continue in my efforts against the vice syndicate and its hirelings and the letter I received will only make me all the more aggressive."

In his sermon, Dr. Leonard said. "Sign the recall petition and drive out the men who have been responsible for the terrible conditions disclosed by the city council investigation committee." He denounced white slavery, asserting that it existed in Seattle in horrible forms, and that the present administration was responsible for it. "If a woman were the mayor of the city and made a partnership with vice and kept a chief of police in office who maintained such a condition, society would rise as a unit and drive her out. Here in Seattle you have such a man as mayor. Sign the recall."

The note is the second received by Seattle pastors who have attacked Gill and Wappenstein. About a month ago Rev. E. Treymaine Dunstan, pastor of the West Side Congregational Church, received a threatening letter.

OPPOSED TO DANCING

The Trades and Labor Council last night expressed itself unanimously opposed to dancing in Trades hall. Several who admitted that they liked to take a "hop" themselves, were nevertheless strongly opposed to the principle of mixing dancing with business, and the music had often a distracting effect. Many of the young women who were members of the various unions to which they could qualify had also expressed themselves strongly against the principle and several had refused to attend meetings on account of misapprehensions which might be formed under this head. It was decided to make strong representation to the Trades Hall Company on the subject. It is probable that the large dancing hall will be divided into smaller rooms to furnish accommodation which is often insufficient for the demands of the various unions.—Manitoba Free Press.

CHICAGO CHIEF, DEPUTY AND TWENTY-TWO MEN PERISH

Coming Right on Heels of Philadelphia Calamity, When Thirteen Fire-Fighters Lose Their Lives, Chicago Has Destructive Fire in Stock-Yards.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—James Horan, Assistant Chief Wm. J. Burroughs, and 22 firemen were killed under falling walls in a million-dollar fire at the stockyards' plant of Morris & Co, early yesterday.

The bodies of nineteen, including that of Chief Horan, had been taken from the ruins at a late hour last night.

The list of dead includes the chief, the assistant chief, two captains, five lieutenants, thirteen city firemen, two private firemen and a railroad employe.

Fifteen firemen are seriously injured, including two captains, who may die.

The fire broke out afresh at eight o'clock last night, after it had taxed the strength of the fire department for sixteen hours. Acting Chief Seylurlich sent a general call to outlying stations for fresh men. These, aided by police reserves, continue the fight on the fire and the search for bodies of the dead.

Insurance men said that the killing of the chief and his men was not due to an ammonia tank explosion, as first supposed, but to the expansion of cold air in the beef warehouse due to the heat from the fire. This, it is said, forced the four-storey wall to give way and collapse. The force behind the wall was as strong as if an explosion had occurred.

Apparently maddened by the death of their chief, who was popular in the department, firemen threw themselves recklessly into the work of clearing away the fallen walls. More than fifty men dropped from exhaustion, and were carried back from the intense heat of the burning warehouse.

Despite the work of many crews, the fire continued to burn stubbornly all day and night. Thousands of people thronged into the stockyards and the police kept spectators back from the danger line with great difficulty.

Thirteen In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Dec. 23.—Thirteen known dead, twelve firemen and one policeman, and more than fifty injured, of whom twenty-five are still in hospitals, is the record of Wednesday night's fire at the five-storey leather factory of Daniel Friedlander, in this city. The monetary loss will not exceed $25,000. A number of spectators were also injured, among them a woman of 20, with her back crushed; a youth covered with burns and a boy with legs and arms broken.

John Lattimer, chief fire marshal, after an all-day investigation, expressed the belief that the fire started in the office on the first floor of the factory building. Rumors of probable incendiarism, he said, would be thoroughly investigated.

The factory building was 58 years old and expert building inspectors declare that the age of the walls had something to do with their sudden collapse.

A movement has already been started for the relief of the families of the dead men. Yesterday afternoon the city council passed resolution of sympathy and Mayor Reyburn has called a meeting of the citizen's permanent relief committee, to be held to-day.

Besides the funds to be raised by this committee and by private subscriptions the families and minor children of the firemen and the one policeman killed will be provided for by the police and firemen's pension funds. Nearly all the dead men left families. John Collins, fireman, leaves a widow and six young children; Harry Bertolet leaves several, and some of the other victims left widows and two and three children. The case of Bertolet is very pathetic. His father, who lives at a soldiers' home, had come home to the son's house to spend Christmas with him and the grandchildren, whose mother died 19 months ago. Everywhere about the house were evidences of preparation for the coming of Santa Claus.

Child Burned to Death.

Cobalt, Dec. 23.—With deficient water pressure here yesterday, fire caused the destruction of two homes, and Rose Marie Landreault, aged three, was burned to death.

The child's mother had to jump from a second storey window with her baby in her arms to save her life.

The mother, her baby, and Albert Landreault, the father, were also severely burned.

A Narrow Escape.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 23.—Yesterday, William Leblond narrowly escaped death, when a portion of the ice bridge went out. He was in the middle of the bridge when he discovered it going out. With the aid of a rope thrown to him by a policeman, he gained the shore, just as a portion of the bridge he was on went down stream to the Whirlpool rapids.

Dashed Into Train.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 23.—A horse driven by Dr. Horace B. Elliott, a prominent physician of this city, became frightened by a shunting Grand Trunk engine on the American side yesterday, and dashed into a Buffalo bound freight train. Dr. Elliott and the driver were thrown out. Both were severely injured, but will recover.

Clothes Caught In Shaft.

Brantford, Dec. 23.—William Long had one arm shattered at the Adams Wagon Works here yesterday, in a shaft in which his clothes caught, and will lose the member. William Dean, foreman, just managed to save Long's life by pulling the belt from a revolving pulley, severely injuring his hands in doing so.

Threatened With Death.

New York, Dec. 23.—The work of selecting a jury was begun yesterday before Judge Fawcett in Brooklyn in the trial of Stanislao Pattenza, one of the ringleaders of the band of kidnappers, who was arrested with several others for kidnapping two eight-year-old boys. He was indicted with Maria Rappo, who was convicted on Tuesday, and faces a sentence of from five to fifty years.

The authorities have abandoned hope of getting a confession from Mrs. Rappo. It is said that she has been threatened with death by other members of the band if she reveals anything.

St. Bartholomew's Opening.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—The new St. Bartholomew Church will be formally opened on Sunday, Christmas Day, by the Bishop of Toronto, in the morning, Bishop Reeve preaching in the evening. St. Bartholomew's is a beautiful church and from its present appearance will rank favorably with the other Anglican churches in the city. The workmen are trying to complete the tower before the opening.

Will Stand Trial For Murder.

Goderich, Dec. 23.—George Vanstone, who beat to death his five-year-old son, Freddie, on the night of Dec. 15, was arraigned before Magistrate Butler yesterday afternoon and committed to stand trial on the charge of murder. He will come up at the next assizes, which will be on a date, not yet fixed, in March next. M. G. Cameron, K.C., is defending the prisoner.

Anti-Home Rule Campaign.

London, Dec. 23.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Canadian Associated Press understands that a joint committee of the Unionist Association of Ireland will meet in February to organize a campaign in England and Scotland against home rule. The campaign will be on a more extensive scale than the country has known since the rejection of Gladstone's bill by the Lords in 1893.

Dr. Cook In New York.

New York, Dec. 23.—The steamship George Washington with Dr. Fred. A. Cook aboard, reached quarantine shortly after 7 o'clock last night. The doctor was cheerful and apparently in good health. He said he did not care to give out any general statement.

Appointed to I.C.R. Board.

Ottawa, Dec. 23.—J. B. T. Caron, ex-M.P., has been appointed to the Intercolonial Railway Board. He is said to have been canvassing Russell County of late and is reported to have been assured the support of the Nationalists at the next election.

Church of England Rectory Burned.

Brockville, Dec. 23.—News reached here yesterday of the destruction by fire of the Church of England rectory at Athens. The blaze originated during the absence of the rector, Rev. R. B. Patterson, and his family, and the cause is therefore unknown. Nothing but a piano could be saved and much valuable contents, including a well-stocked library, were burned.

At Portland, in the same vicinity, the residence of Robert Scott was burned by the explosion of a lamp. His daughter was alone in the house, and asleep at the time. She was awakened by fire and barely escaped with her life. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Wanted to Drop Health Inspector.

Montreal, Dec. 23.—The anti-Masonic attitude of a majority of the Montreal aldermen was exemplified yesterday, when fifteen of the city fathers voted to drop the name of Dr. Laberge, city health inspector, from the payroll. This was defeated because a two-third vote is necessary, and then the same men voted to refer the matter to the Board of Control, it being up to the body to dismiss the inspector or to keep him in the city's employ.

Stabbed to the Heart.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 23.—Guiseppe Maurello, an Italian grocer of this city, was murdered early yesterday, being stabbed in the heart by an unknown person. Maurello lived in the rear of his store.

Five men and four women, all Italians, have been taken into custody by the police as being able to give a possible clue to the murderer. The crime followed a series of neighborhood quarrels.

Not Unanimous.

Ottawa, Dec. 23.—It is understood that the recommendation of the Quebec Bridge Commission in favor of the St. Lawrence Bridge Co. being given the contract for the construction of the Quebec bridge, is not unanimous. Two of the commissioners are in favor, while one is opposed. The reports will be laid before council, but it is not expected that a decision will be reached before some time.

Accidentally Shot.

Kingston, Dec. 23.—John Johnston aged 30, a farmer of Willetsholme, received fatal injuries in an accident after shooting sparrows on his farm. He was about to put his rifle away when it went off, the charge entering his head over the left eye. He was the only one at home at the time and when his brother came he found him lying on the barn floor unconscious.

CANOE FACTORY AND CONTENTS WERE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Lakefield Canoe Co.'s Building Eaten Up by Flames Early This Morning---$7,000 Insurance Will Cover Loss---Faulty Wiring Suggested as Cause.

A serious fire occurred in Lakefield early this morning when the Lakefield Canoe Company's factory with all the canoes, forms, mechanical equipment and workmen's tools was destroyed. The building and contents were insured for $7,000, but this amount will fall considerably short of covering the loss.

The blaze was discovered by Mr. Arthur Lawless, of the Lakefield House, at about 10 o'clock this morning. The fire had made considerable headway in the rear of the building at that time and the well-seasoned wooden structure and its highly inflammable contents were soon all in flames.

SAVED HOUSE.

The volunteer fire brigade promptly responded to the call but in spite of their energy were unable with their small facilities to do anything to check the conflagration. By their well-directed efforts, however, they were able to save the residence of Mr. Wigg, which is next to the factory and which was threatened with destruction.

DEFECTIVE WIRING.

The electric wires are strung into the building at the rear where the fire started and defective wiring is hinted as the probable cause of the blaze.

A FLOURISHING BUSINESS.

Eighteen years ago the Strickland Canoe Co. commenced operations in the factory. Six years ago the Lakefield Canoe Company, which is composed principally of Lakefield stockholders, took over the business and have conducted it since. The business was a flourishing one, and "The Lakefield Model" is a widely-known and popular canoe.

The company will probably re-build.

GERMANY METES OUT SEVERE PENALTIES TO BRITISH OFFICERS

Captain Bernard Frederick Trench and Lient. Vivian H. Brandon Are Found Guilty of Espionage—Candidly Avowed Their Mission in Germany.

Leipsic, Dec. 23.—Capt. Bernard Frederick Trench, of the British Royal Marine Light Infantry, and Lieut. Vivian H. Brandon, of the Royal Navy were yesterday found guilty of espionage upon the German fortifications at Borkum, and sentenced each to four years imprisonment in a fortress.

The British spies were arrested at Borkum on Aug. 22 and 23, and until the opening of their trial on Wednesday were held in separate cells at the prison in Leipsic.

Brandon, who was first taken into custody, is a brother-in-law of Sir William Bull, M.P. Trench is a grandson of Lord Ashtown and a descendant of Archbishop Trent. When arrested both admitted frankly that they had come to Germany to collect information which they intended to place at the disposal of the British Government. This admission was repeated at the trial on Wednesday.

Yesterday's proceedings were not made public, as they consisted chiefly of the introduction of expert military testimony. The British representative, the consul at Hamburg, Mr. Oliver, was among those excluded. The interests of the defendants were looked after by von Gordon of Berlin and Dromo of Leipsic.

When apprehended, it is alleged that the men were taking flashlight pictures of the fortifications at Borkum, and that they had secured also photographs of the defences in course of construction on the island of Wangefoog, in the North Sea, near the entrance to Jade Bay. The spies made a favorable impression by their candid avowal of the duties in which they were engaged, and it had been anticipated that in the event of their conviction they would receive light sentences.

Lieut. Siegfried Helm, the German army officer who was arrested charged with having made sketches of the British fortifications in Portsmouth Harbor, pleaded guilty on Nov. 14, and by the court at Portsmouth, was placed under bonds of $1,250 not to repeat the offence.

On Dec. 2 the supreme court in this city sentenced two brothers named Geler to two years and six months penal servitude, respectively, for espionage. On the same day a French officer, Capt. Lux, was arrested at Friedrichshafen as a suspected spy.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Alex. Bartlett, for many years police magistrate at Windsor, is dead.

The Winnipeg Street Railway Co. has ordered the strikers to turn in any equipment in their possession and receive their pay.

The gravest anxiety is felt regarding the fate of Cecil Grace, who flew across the English Channel and has not been heard of since leaving Calais.

The Mauretania has arrived at Fishguard, occupying four days fifteen hours and fifty-seven minutes on the homeward trip, at an average speed of 25.07 knots.

The disaster at the Little Hulton Colliery, Bolton, Eng., which was wrecked by an explosion followed by fire, is greater than was at first thought. It is probable that at least 360 lives were lost.

Two young men, Alex. Macrae and Vernon Coles, were drowned at French River, P.E.I. yesterday. They, in company with two others, started to cross on the ice, which gave way. The others were rescued.

The inquest into the death of the man who was struck by a radial car at Hamilton on Saturday night last, was concluded last evening. James McKay identified the body as that of Benjamin Young, and the jury brought in a verdict of accidental death.

Hurled Over the Bank.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 23.—Two men dying and another seriously injured is the toll of a series of accidents at the Ontario power plant yesterday afternoon. Edward Thompson and Harry Sillence are at the hospital and will die, the physicians believe. George Thompson will recover. Edw. Thompson and Sillence were both struck on the chest by a steel cable, which broke while freight cars were being lowered on the power company's incline to the lower river bank and hurled over the bank to the rocks, 60 feet below. Thompson sustained two broken legs, a fractured shoulder and a scalp wound. Sillence sustained a scalp wound and internal injuries.

George Thompson sustained a fractured elbow when he fell 30 feet from a partition in the power house.

When Canadian Niagara Power Co. employes reach the age of 65 they will be pensioned, the company announced yesterday.

Mr. Fielding's Condition.

Montreal, Dec. 23.—Those who met the Finance Minister yesterday, while en route for the capital, were well pleased with his condition, and it is quite probable that he will be able to pay a flying visit to Nova Scotia before the re-opening of Parliament on Jan. 11.

A Cool Hold-Up.

Vancouver, Dec. 23.—Proprietor Jackson of the Milton Cafe, East Cordova street, was behind the counter when a stranger arrived on the scene at three o'clock yesterday morning. Looking up to see what the newcomer wanted, the owner of the cafe found himself staring into the muzzle of a large revolver, while the robber, who was unmasked, coolly told him to keep quiet till he was through. Several guests were in the place at the time, and the robber also issued the same instructions to them, passing them along as well as the cooks in the kitchen, then he coolly went over to the cash register, rang up "No Sale," and extracted from the machine $70 in bills and silver. When he had stowed this away in his pocket, he backed out of the place, still covering everybody inside, and disappeared in the darkness.

Peary to Furnish Proofs.

Washington, Dec. 23.—After months of persistent refusal on the ground of interference with contracts with publishers, Captain R. E. Peary has promised to furnish Congress with the proofs upon which he relies to support his claim of attainment of the North Pole.

The assurance has been communicated indirectly to some of his advocates at the capital in connection with the bill to reward him with a rear-admiralship on the staff, in recognition of his Arctic achievements. Representative Macon of Arkansas has expressed in vigorous language his opinion of the explorer, and his doubt of his ever getting to the Pole, and purposes to fight it on the floor.

Refining Vat Exploded.

Winnipeg, Dec. 23.—At a late hour Wednesday night a steel refining vat in the packing establishment of Gordon Ironsides and Fares, Logan avenue west, exploded with a thunderous roar. It wrecked everything in that part of the building and shattered the walls so that part of the roof collapsed. Such was the power of the explosion that street railway and electric light wires were broken. The damage is estimated at $2,000.

Trainmen Killed In Collision.

New York, Dec. 23.—In a rear-end collision of a freight and a regular train on the New York, New Haven line, on the branch of the Pennsylvania, near Millston Junction, N.J., at 1.30 yesterday morning, Fireman F. J. Knox of Wilmington, Delaware, and Brakeman J. P. Minehan of Trenton, N. J., were instantly killed. The passengers were severely shaken up, ten receiving slight injuries.

Saved Part of Cargo.

Kingston, Dec. 23.—With the thermometer ten degrees below zero, the crew of the steambarge Navajo made a trip to the steamer John Sharples wrecked near Stony Point, and got 1,000 bushels of corn from her cargo. The weather then compelled them to get back into port.

AN OPEN VERDICT

Henry I. Matthews, Jr., is Arrested at Colborne.

Colborne, Ont., Dec. 23.—After a four-hour session, the jury empanelled by Coroner Latta to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Josephine Brimacombe at the Hotel Bristol on Saturday night last, returned an open verdict of death by strangulation, at 12.30 yesterday morning.

After the verdict had been rendered Henry I. Matthews, jr., was arrested by High Constable Richard Jarvis on the formal charge of murder of Josephine Brimacombe on Saturday, Dec. 17, preferred by W. K. Kerr, K.C., county crown attorney.

Matthews comes from one of the best known families in this section of the province. His father is a well-known navigator, and is master of the "Maize." His uncle, Henry I. Matthews, sr., was at one time connected with the Canners' Association, and he himself holds first mate's papers.

Matthews was mate on the steamer Argyle two years ago. His home was in Lakeport.

Matthews took his arrest at first quietly, but after the crown attorney read the warrant, he broke in with the words, pointing his finger at the document:

"Do you mean by that that I am accused of killing the woman?"

There was suppressed excitement in the theatre where the inquest was held, as the crown attorney answered, "Yes, and the hearing will be adjourned until a week from to-day, to be held in the council chamber in the Town of Cobourg."

W. J. Payne, K.C., is acting for Matthews, who was taken to Cobourg Jail on the 3.15 train.

The medical evidence conclusively showed that death came by strangulation, probably after an attempted assault, as the clothes of the victim were torn and out of place. Matthews evidence was contradictory to that of other witnesses. The noises in the room above were heard before he was seen coming down the stairs, and, if they occurred at the time indicated in the evidence, should have been noticed by him. He himself told a straight story in the box, and did not waver under cross-examination.

Admits Shipping Body.

Jarvis, Ont., Dec. 23.—Yesterday morning Provincial Detective Reburn, formally charged John McSorley, locally known as "Doc" McSorley, with opening the grave of Matthew Johnston, removing the body and shipping it to Montreal. The accused was then taken by the officer to Cayuga, where he was charged before Mr. Clyde, J.P., with the offence, and remanded for a week.

The penalty on conviction for "desecrating a human body" is imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years.

It is probable that McSorley will also be confronted by a charge of forgery, preferred by the Grand Trunk, for filling in another man's name to the shipping order.

Montreal, Dec. 23.—"The body I saw at the morgue yesterday morning is beyond all doubt that of Matthew Johnson," said Rev. Mr. MacLennan. "I have known the old man for some nineteen years, and I am absolutely certain there can be no mistake in this. Johnson was my sexton during the eight years I had charge of Knox Church in Jarvis."

A Straight Party Fight.

Montreal, Dec. 23.—There will be a straight party fight in St. Johns after all, as Ludger Trudeau, the Independent Liberal, retired from the field yesterday, and Marcellin Robert, Liberal, and Henry Hebert, Conservative-Nationalist, were nominated by their respective partizans to fill the vacancy in the Legislature caused by the death of Gabriel Marchand.

Sir Lomer Gouin, Prime Minister, the Hon. Messrs. Mackenzie, Devlin and Decarie spoke for the Liberal candidate, and the Premier, especially, was particularly well received. J. M. Tellier, leader of the Opposition, Hon. J. Prevost, T. Marcel and A. Lavergne, M.P.P., also spoke. Since the Independent Liberal is out of the road, the Liberals have very good chances to carry the county, although the opposition are using the naval cry for all it is worth.

ROBERT TATE, THE MAN OF MYSTERY, GIVES EVIDENCE

In the Woodstock Enquiry—After a Sharp Examination He Names M. T. Buchanan as the Man Who Planned the Gravel Road Deal.

Woodstock, Dec. 23.—Quietly stepping out from amongst the crowd of spectators in the body of the court room at a time when all hope of his revealing himself had vanished, Robert Tate, the "mysterious," took the stand yesterday afternoon, and, at the close of a grilling two-hours' examination, named ex-Warden M. T. Buchanan as the man who planned the Oxford and Northern Gravel Road deal, and, to Tate's recollection, received the money mulcted from the county.

Tate's story of the deal, forced from him only after he had been threatened with a term in the county jail, was a remarkable one from start to finish. He had been under a sweeping fire of questions for an hour and a half before Mr. E. F. B. Johnston secured from him the first statement reflecting unfavorably upon Buchanan's connection with the deal. From that point his evasions lost force, and the whole extraordinary recital of the deal was given.

Robert Tate was the man said to have purchased the road from one J. R. Bowman of Chicago for $200 and resold it to the county for $2,000. For months detectives searched for him. They did locate him, but he convinced them that he was not the Tate wanted. Since the investigation began the information regarding his identity has been so vague that the counsel for the county openly charged that he was a fictitious character. Tate came to Woodstock yesterday morning. His presence was made known by T. H. Yeomans of 171 Close avenue, Toronto, whose acquaintance with the man was discovered Wednesday night. When the news of Tate's presence was received, Mr. Johnston directed an officer to call "Tate." There was no response. The afternoon session was just drawing to an early close, when Mr. Buchanan stood up and announced that he was ready to produce Robert Tate.

Tate was sitting in the back of the hall. He arose and walked slowly to the witness stand amid a dramatic silence. He was nervous, and Mr Johnston's opening question was not reassuring.

"If you are Robert Tate," he demanded, "why didn't you come here before?"

Tate in a low voice replied that he was waiting until he was called upon.

"You saw in the newspapers that we could not find you, that we thought you were a myth. You knew the authorities were looking for you, searching all the directories to find out if there was such a man. You knew that?" retorted counsel.

"Yes, I knew that."

"What was your motive for not coming forward?" Tate repeated his former explanation.

"That won't go," replied Mr. Johnston sharply. Tate said he had no other reason.

"Shall I tell you the reason? Buchanan—is that it?"

"I can't answer that," said Tate, after hesitating for some time.

School Grant Withheld.

Toronto, Dec. 23.—As a result of investigations made in the eastern counties of Ontario, the provincial grant to seven public schools will be withheld until certain abuses of the system in the way of Roman Catholic observances and the teaching of the French language are corrected. The school sections penalized are those known as No. 12, Finch, Stormont; No. 9, Caledonia, Prescott; Nos. 13 and 14, Caledonia, and 5, Plantagenet; No. 1, Cambridge; Nos. 12 and 11, Cambridge and Russell; No. 1, Cumberland, and No. 10, Clarence. In other sections where complaints were investigated, it was found that the necessary changes have already taken place.

TWO STOREYS TO BE ADDED TO TURNER'S MANUFACTURY

Rapid Increase in Business of Firm Demands More Room and Greater Facilities—Work Will be Commenced as Soon as Weather Permits

Owing to the extensive increase in business and the instantly growing demand for more room and greater facilities for manufacture, Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons have found that it will be necessary to enlarge their already commodious plant.

"We are going to add two stores to our building as soon as the weather permits" said Mr. J. J. Turner sr., to the Review to-day, "and I have instructed Mr. John Belcher, C. E. to draw up the plans."

"As we are situated at present," he said, "we find we haven't sufficient accomodation for goods awaiting shipment, and the necessity of more spacious quarters becomes more pressing as the orders from western Canada increase.'

Mr. Turner said the equipment of the firm would also be increased and more hands would be employed when the addition was completed. This will give the firm a five-storey building.

DOG-POISONER IS AT WORK

Eight Animals Poisoned Within the last Week in Various Parts of the City

The dog poisoner is evidently at work again. Within the last week eight dogs have been poisoned in different parts of the city. Five in East City, two in the north end and one which was a pet at the car barns of the Peterborough Radial Railway.

Some of the animals were greatly liked and very valuable.

Messrs. Mark Shaw and James Downing, Auburn, had two valuable dogs poisoned Thursday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock.

The Departing Year

One more year will soon be planted in the tomb of Time, enchanted, where so many sleep; one more year is old and hoary, reeling on his way to glory, while we watch and weep. How the days go callyhooting. How the years go whissing, scooting, like a herd of deer. New Year bells scarce cease their pealing ere the year they hailed is reeling feebly to his bier. Age is creeping on us grimly, and we view the future dimly through a mist of tears; how the wintry days remind us we have left our youth behind us, all the golden years. But cheer up. Though days are flying, there is time in each for trying to do something good. Though the years are hustling ever, each gives time for strong endeavor at our pile of wood. Let old Time keep up his hiking if that gait is to his liking, we our load shall take; and when comes the Silent Reaper we won't give a groan or peep or cheap excuses make.—Walt Mason.

Gets Six Months Extra.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 23.—For escaping from Welland Jail, Claude Dickout, sentenced to three years for twice burglarising the same Ridgeway store, was yesterday given an extra six months.

WANTS TO BE ELECTROCUTED

Detroit, Dec. 22.—Claiming that society has demanded his death, the Rev. Thomas McKinsey, of Battle Creek, who has all his life been hopelessly blind, and is now in danger of losing his only remaining asset, his voice, has appealed to the governors of four States to grant him legal execution by means of the electric chair.

McKinsey has been singing in the streets and earning a precarious living by this method for some time, but is now losing his voice and is compelled to resort to the selling of little articles. The public, he says, refuses to buy and tells him he ought to kill himself and end his troubles. To be sent to the almshouse, he considers, would be worse than death. As he does not believe in self-destruction, and seeks a less painful death than starvation, he asks the aid of the governors of Ohio, New York, New Jersey and West Virginia, where the electric chair is used in executions.

Duck Hunting in Monoplane.

Los Angeles, Dec. 23.—Hubert Latham, the French aviator, went duck hunting yesterday at the Bolsachico Club, in a monoplane. At high speed he circled over the feeding grounds of the wild fowl, frightening the birds into the air in flocks of thousands.

With a double-barrelled shotgun Latham fired ten times at the ducks, killing a few and crippling others. He then pursued the birds out to sea, following them for three miles. After half an hour of hunting Latham landed at the clubhouse.

Refuse to Build Ships.

Washington, Dec. 23.—For the first time the United States Government wants to build ships, and can find no bidders. Every shipyard in the country has refused to bid on the two new revenue cutters authorized by Congress, because it was provided they should be built with eight-hour labor. The ships may be built at a Government yard.

Struck by Street Cars.

Brantford, Dec. 23.—Within a half hour yesterday morning baking rigs belonging to J. McHutcheon and W. Russell were demolished on Brantford avenue by street cars. In each instance the driver sought to avoid a car coming down one track, only to cross in front of a car on the second track. Both narrowly escaped injury.

FRIDAY, DEC. 23, 1910.

ULSTER IS INDIGNANT

The Irish problem is assuming a most perplexing aspect to the British Cabinet members, unless the cable despatches are exaggerating. The leaders of the Ulster Unionist [illegible] declare that home rule in Ireland will mean blood-shed, and they assert that they have already asked for tenders for arms and ammunition. The evident determination of the Ulster men and, in fact, most of the North of Ireland Protestants, to fight to the last ditch the establishment of a parliament at Dublin may well give cause for concern, because there are no fighters like the Irish. But, surely the Ulster men will recognize the futility of resistance to the will of the majority, as expressed by vote of Parliament. An appeal to arms could have only one result—the jail for those who survived whatever collisions occurred.

Premier Asquith has promised a measure of self-government to his Irish allies. The terms and details of what this measure will be have not yet been disclosed, even to John Redmond, it is said, and until the extent to which Premier Asquith will give effect to his promise of self-government is made public, the insurrectionists-to-be should go slowly.

BILL TAFT HOPEFUL

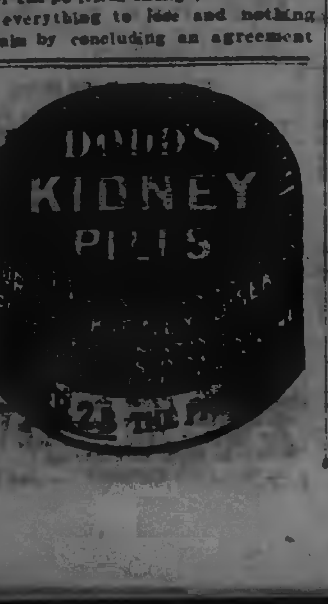
President Taft is a man who usually does not promise without being tolerably sure of the ground on which he bases his promises; and confidence in his ability to carry them out. With his characteristic genial optimism, Mr. Taft discusses reciprocity negotiations and trade matters with Canada, and rather significant is the tenor of his remarks.

Speaking at Washington a couple of days ago, President Taft indicated quite plainly a supreme confidence that a treaty with Canada would be consummated. What the basis for this belief is does not at once suggest itself to Canadians, since when the negotiations were abruptly terminated at Ottawa the impression was sent abroad that they had been abortive.

President Taft is calculating on forestalling the demand of Congress for better trade relations with Canada, and thereby achieving a triumph for Republicanism. He will then be able to point to the fact that he secured what the popular will demanded, and it was not left to the Democratic majority in the House to force him to this action.

The commercial interests of Canada, be they Liberal or Conservative, or with no political sympathies, were on pins and needles during the late dickering. There is in Canada a profound distrust of the ability of the Laurier Government to negotiate a trade agreement with the United States that will not sacrifice Canadian interests, to the gain of our neighbors. This apprehension is the outcome of past experience with United States negotiations, and also with the Ottawa outfit.

Bill Taft's cheeriness does not increase Canadian confidence in the situation, and it is most sincerely to be hoped that Hon. Mr. Fielding will hold himself down very closely when it comes to making concessions. The United States will make them anyway under the political change, and Canada has everything to lose and nothing to gain by concluding an agreement before Congress has time [illegible] fore the executive to lower the high tariff wall against us.



CANADA'S PAPER BUSINESS

A statistical history of the pulp and paper trade of Canada and the United States for a few years published in the Pulp and Paper Magazine of Canada demonstrates conclusively that the next twenty-five years will bring about remarkable change in the pulp and news print business on the continent.

Compared with United States records Canada has made wonderful strides in the last few years in the paper trade. United States exports have fallen off in every branch (except in writing and coated papers while Canadian exports especially in news print have developed enormously.

It should not be inferred that the United States production has declined. It has, in fact, increased to some degree but the home consumption has outdistanced it completely. In news print the United States exports have fallen by a third while Canadian exports of this class have developed tremendously. On the other hand United States imports in pulp, paper and printed matter have nearly doubled.

The logic of these facts is that Canada will shortly reap the benefit of her possession of pulpwood and unlimited water powers for the grinding thereof. The waterpowers of the eastern and middle states are becoming too valuable in other fields of manufacturing to make the grinding of pulp a profitable business while Canada possesses water power in abundance suitable for the purpose.

In view of these conditions and the consequent pressure of American publishers for the removal of the duty on the raw materials of their trade it is likely that the American Government will lower the news print duty.

The lowering of the duty is immaterial as far as Canada is concerned as it will not affect the aggregate export. It will hasten the removal of the American mills to Canada—to the source of supply and cheap power—where conditions for manufacture are distinctly more favorable. The drain on Canadian forests is yearly becoming more severe and while the development of Canadian export trade is a very desirable thing selling one's assets is simply a depletion of reserve force and Canadians in general will probably not view the denudation of the spruce forests of the country for the American consumer with particular enthusiasm.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Having both hydro-electric and Cataract energy now, Hamilton is well acquainted with the powers-that-be.

Having been arrested for making false statements the general manager of the Farmers' Bank will have to Tra-vers some thorny paths.

Chicago University has benefited some $35,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller's generosity. Many other institutions would consent to help John D. avoid disgrace.

Editorial Notes, These ones are

Aeroplanes have not been introduced in the Mexican rebellion, but the insurrectionists are reported to be flying.

A Chicago man paid $20 to talk from Winnipeg to his sweetheart in the Windy City, and the burden of his inquiries was as to how much she missed him. After they are married a few years he will be using the 'phone to explain how he was unavoidably detained and couldn't possibly get home.

The continued and persistent stories that Sir Wilfrid wishes to get rid of Mr. Brodeur indicate that the Premier is finding the incubus in his Cabinet very heavy to carry. The next in line should be "Slippery Bill" Pugsley who has been responsible for many of the shameful scandals that have disgraced the Public Works Department.

The Hydro-electric Commission line is 376 miles long with tributary lines 100 miles in length and cost $3,500,000 or $200,000 less than estimated. Opponents of the policy predicted a cost of $10,000,000. What a difference in the business system and method of the Whitney Government's construction of public works and the building of the National Transcontinental which was supposed to cost $50,000,000, and which will actually cost about $200,000,000.

CLOSING CONCERT

Successful Entertainment Given by Auburn School

A very successful closing concert by Auburn school was held last night. There was a large number present.

Besides a programme given by the pupils a number of pleasing musical selections were rendered by Mr. Huycke and Misses Curtis and Edwards. Miss Little, the teacher, was pleasantly surprised at the conclusion when on behalf of the school she was made the recipient of a very pretty and much appreciated gift and an address.

The proceeds of the concert after expenses are paid are to be sent to the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

On Sunday afternoon the Guild of Goodfellowship intend to spend a social hour from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Princess Theatre. There will be no regular address, but in its place will be Christmas carols, hymns and sacred songs, in which the whole audience will have been specially selected to make everybody feel perfectly at home, so that those who are in boarding houses, and away from their friends, may partake of the spirit of fellowship and goodwill which animates this day. It is hoped that such a gathering, which is open to all men of 18 years or one, will do something to bring good cheer to the lonely ones in our midst, and help to make the festival a happy one for them.

All men will receive a happy welcome and the larger the crowd the brighter the singing.

Remember! three o'clock on Sunday afternoon at the Princess Theatre.

Millbrook Looking up as a Show Town

The Jessie Alexander recital held in the town hall on Monday evening, proved to be one of the most enjoyable concerts ever given in Millbrook. Early in the day the entire plan was sold—a thing that has never before occurred in the history of reserved seats in Millbrook.—Millbrook Mirror.

Calendar Nuisance

A local insurance firm has asked for the reproduction of the following from an exchange: "The nuisance of children collecting calendars will soon begin. Probably a great many merchants do not refuse because they do not wish to be thought unkind, but is not the real kindness shown in the refusal? To give to every child who asks for a calendar as long as they last is encouraging a bad habit, which is an unkindness. One calendar is sufficient for an ordinary household, and it is not even common sense to give away such a number that many of them will eventually be thrown away and wasted."

Brantford, Dec. 23.—J. The west this year had absorbed 160,000 immigrants, 75,000 of which were British of a much improved physique. The commissioner declared that there was a need for more mixed farming in the west, as evidence by the price of $2 for chickens at Winnipeg.

MALLORY'S READINESS.

Story of a Man Who Always Got What He Wanted.

By BERTHA TREVELYAN.

If it usually happened that Mallory got what he wanted in the world it was by no means due to chance. When he wanted anything he began by looking the field over carefully, noting all the salient points—the advantages and the disadvantages. Then with his feet up and a cigar between his lips he would consider all available methods of securing the thing desired.

Having finally arrived at a decision as to the best course of action to pursue, he pursued it with an energy and a single mindedness that were open to no discouragement, admitting no defeat. And the result was that, as life goes, Mallory was accounted lucky.

He was a handsome, vigorous man of fifty when, business affairs making it necessary for him to spend a number of months in New York, a letter of introduction secured him the very delightful privilege of rooms with the Fosters, whose story of waning fortunes he had heard from the friend who sent him to them. The ominous length of his upper lip was hidden under a short gray mustache, or Miss Foster would have known from the first that it was useless to oppose him once his mind was set upon anything.

The romance of his youth was a beautiful memory, a thing as faint and elusive as the scent of lavender. But he had been loyal to it for twenty years, having been left at thirty a widower with two children. As he sat in the great dim drawing room where everything was eloquent of other days he noticed several things—touches unusual in stiff city drawing rooms, but which made for homeliness. He sighed with a sudden wistfulness altogether out of keeping with his height, breadth and floridness.

In the midst of his reverie Miss Foster appeared, her delicate slightness heightened by the massive doorway in which she stood framed for a moment. As he rose to greet her he wondered idly what could have given her that harassed look, this little woman with the oval face and the piled up hair. Her smile, he thought, was oddly shy and girlish, and in a few minutes they were talking with the ease of old acquaintance.

With a businesslike air that sat amusingly on her she showed him the rooms that she and her mother rented to eke out their small and uncertain income, and the next day found him installed in them.

Often during the following months he would spend an hour with the mother and daughter, noting with hidden amusement the latter's unnatural little air of elderliness. She would forget and laugh and chat gayly at times; then in a moment she seemed to remember that she was no longer young, and she became in a trice the prosaic, careworn woman again, drawing her mantle of years ungraciously about her. It was as if she had determined not to be surprised by old age and so had rushed out to meet it.

Her references to herself were slighting always, as if to one to whom nothing but the dregs of life was left, whom romance could not possibly touch, whose role was one of duty untouched by grace.

At first Mallory took her at her own estimate, concluding that she was about his own age. Then one night she appeared in a gown of filmy violet, with her brown hair rising in a swirl above her face, and he looked at her with puzzled but admiring wonder. She turned her head, and the surprise of her profile fairly made him start. It was singularly delicate and youthful, with a small, high bred nose and full lipped mouth.

His speculative glance now told him that she could not be more than forty, if she were that. But by the way in which she was always putting forward the young girls of her acquaintance it was evident that she thought herself too old a woman to be of interest to any man.

"She belongs to the old regime," Mallory soliloquized, "and has probably considered herself an old lady ever since she emerged from her teens. She hasn't been able to assimilate this bachelor woman idea." And he smiled to himself.

"By the way, Miss Marion," he said nonchalantly, "I have tickets for the opera tomorrow night. Be good and come too."

There was a flash of surprise in her face that for one brief, fleeting moment said frankly that he must have taken leave of his senses. Then courtesy prevailed, and after hesitating for an appreciable moment, in which it was apparent that she was casting about in her mind for some plausible excuse, she accepted.

When the time arrived she was disturbed by an uncomfortable consciousness. She had the air of a person who felt that she was going to be a subject of quickly exchanged glances and half laughing comment. All this Mallory divined, and he put forth every effort to make her forget herself to such good purpose that by the end of the evening she was laughing and chatting as unconcernedly as if Mrs. Grundy did not exist.

With this excellent beginning things went smoothly for awhile. Walks, drives and theaters followed, and apparently Miss Foster's fear of appearing "kittenish" slumbered. To Mallory each hour spent in her society made him long for more. She was deliciously contradictory.

Then of a sudden all the old prim restraint returned to her manner. Three consecutive invitations were refused with excuses so flimsy that even the most obtuse person must have seen through them.

As before, he divined the meaning of it all—some idle word that had aroused all her dormant sensitiveness, and she was writhing under it. She doubtless imagined that people were saying that that old maid, Marion Foster, was trying to catch Mr. Mallory, and her manner was her fierce, wordless refutation of it. The lines of care were deepening in her face day by day, and his heart ached for help.

"I want to speak to you, Miss Foster," he said in a determined way as she was about to pass him in the hall one day with her usual brief greeting.

"Certainly," she replied, somewhat uncomfortably, and they sat down in the quiet drawing room together.

"Something is bothering you," he began, fixing his glance searchingly upon her. "Come now, be frank. If there is any way in which I can be of service to you tell me."

"It's nothing," she protested hastily, "or, at least, nothing much." Then with an attempt at lightness she added, "Women who have neither fathers nor brothers to look out for them often have to worry, you know."

Another sort of woman might have added "husbands," but to Miss Foster, whose consciousness upon the subjects of love and matrimony was as shrinking as that of a young girl, such a remark would have been impossible. Even in that moment Mallory chuckled to himself, yet would have liked to take her in his arms and put himself between her and the world forever.

"Marry me," he said softly. "Give me the right to take care of you. I shall count it a great happiness."

Her face went scarlet.

"Such a subject seems scarcely the proper one for jest," she retorted with dignity. "If you will excuse me, I have duties to attend to," and she rose to leave him.

"One moment."

His voice rang a trifle sharp and clear with command. The Mallory who achieved what he wanted in life was speaking. Miss Foster seemed to feel this, and she sat down again as obediently as a child, though he could see that her hands were quivering nervously.

"You have misunderstood me," he said in a calm, decided voice which somehow thrilled her with the certainty that he would bend her to his will.

"I have no intention of indulging in the sentimental talk of a man of twenty-five," he went on, taking one of her slim hands in his and looking at her a bit quizzically. "Love, of course, is a matter of years. A man and woman of fifty would only be ridiculous if they essayed to speak that language."

"But I'm only thirty-nine!" she exclaimed, surprised into protest.

Mallory could have roared with laughter at the innocent "only." As he had supposed, then it was not that she really thought herself outside the pale; it was only as one sensitively afraid that she ought to think so. He could not entirely banish the teasing smile from his eyes, and she felt vaguely that she had walked into the trap he had set for her.

"But of course it's absurd for you to say such things to a woman of my age—and for me to listen," she continued courageously, though Mallory noticed that she no longer made as if to leave him.

"My dear Miss Foster," he said persuasively, "we won't talk of that phase of the matter at all. I should not be saying this to you if I had not a very deep regard for you, and you, I fancy would not be listening."

There was a little incoherent murmur which he took for assent. Then he continued with an anxious air:

"But there is an ethical side to the matter that persons of our age should consider. You would be doing a beautiful act if you would take my children and me in hand, and I could make things so much easier for you and your mother."

"That will bring her," he exulted to himself.

"But I thought your children were grown?"

"They're over twenty," he admitted boldly, "but that is the very age at which young people most need the controlling influence of home."

He could see that she was awakening, and he wisely refrained from further persuasion, murmuring only, "We need you, dear."

* * * * * * *

On the steps of her new home as the carriage dashed up the drive she noticed that a small group awaited them. A moment later she was clasped in a bear hug by a bright faced girl, who said "My dear little new mother" so warmly that she loved her on the spot, as well as the manly youth who laughingly took her next, pleading, "Me too."

"And this is my husband, Ralph," the girl explained as another young man stepped forward. "And this is Janet, Harry's wife."

Then a nurse moved forward into the circle, holding a bulky armful.

"And this, mother," continued the girl proudly, "is your little granddaughter."

So these were the "children" who needed her.

The second Mrs. Mallory swept the group with an eye that sought her perfidious husband. He had disappeared. Then she buried her convulsed face in the soft, sweet smelling bundle containing her new granddaughter to smother her laughter.

Striking workmen of the Missouri Pacific R. R. returned to work.

Which Will It Be?

One of These Women to Be Mistress of Executive Mansion at Albany.

© 1910, by American Press Association.

MRS. STIMSON—MRS. DIX.

No matter whether a Republican or a Democrat is elected governor of New York state, the executive mansion at Albany is sure to have a charming and accomplished chatelaine.

Mrs. Stimson, wife of the Republican candidate, is a highly intellectual woman. One of her grandfathers was a valedictorian at Yale, and her father and brothers are all Yale men. She is also a great-great-granddaughter of Roger Sherman, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and is therefore a member of the National Society of Colonial Dames.

Mrs. Stimson is a fine horsewoman. She is devoted to charity work. Until recently she was an active member of the charity organization of New York city and at present is vice president of Lincoln hospital, to which institution she gives much of her time during the winter.

Mrs. Dix, wife of the Democratic candidate, who was Miss Gertrude Thomson of Thomson, N. Y., which town was named in honor of Luten Thomson, Mrs. Dix's father, is a handsome woman, who is always gowned in the latest French creations. Like Mrs. Taft, she is a great globe trotter, having traveled extensively abroad in her automobile.

Doubtless Mrs. Dix will admit that she has two hobbies—keeping Pomeranians and buying from the farmers near her home, Pine Needles, bits of furniture that were the pride of the farmhouses back in the days when Burgoyne's army was encamped so close to the front door of Pine Needles that one can step from the drive on to what is left of the old Revolutionary earthworks.

Should Mrs. Dix become mistress of the Albany mansion the social life will be very gay, for she has a bevy of charming nieces to help her entertain.

Things That Kerosene Will Do.

Kerosene is an unpleasantly odorous commodity, but it has many uses that the housekeeper should know of. Here are some of them:

A little kerosene rubbed over the nickel on the kitchen range will clean it better than any metal polish and leave no scratches.

Use kerosene with your silver polish. The silver will clean much easier.

Apply kerosene to a burn if the skin is not broken. It will take the fire out and give relief.

Try cleaning finger marks or other dirt spots on paint with a little kerosene. It will remove the dirt and not injure the paint like soap.

Use a little kerosene on a clean cloth to wipe off the top of the mop boards. It will not disfigure the wall paper like soap and water.

Add a few drops of kerosene to the water in which you wash your windows. It will make them look clear and bright.

If your sink gets rusty wipe it over with kerosene.

Clean the zinc under the stove with kerosene and note the result.

Bernhardt Laughs at Doctors.

Sarah Bernhardt, the great actress, says she preserves her youthfulness by doing just exactly the opposite of what her doctor tells her to do. When asked how she preserved her strength and youthful appearance she said: "Probably it is because I am always working. I go in for no diet. I eat just what I like—just what I feel I want to. And, yes, above all, I sleep a great deal—oh, ever so much! I don't usually get up early. I take all the sleep I want. I am never ill. I always feel fit, and if ever a doctor tells me to do anything I never do it. Today I was busy all the morning with my secretary. One hundred and forty-eight letters to read and answer—yes, 148. I thought I should never finish. Oh, what a temper I was in—a dreadful temper! It's a happy thing you didn't see me this morning."

Rigid quarantine [illegible] stopped the spread of [illegible] in Chicago.

WINTER WINDOW GARDENS.

What Plants to Depend Upon Through Cold Weather.

This is the time to stock the winter house garden. Some plants are to be saved from the garden and some ordered from the florist.

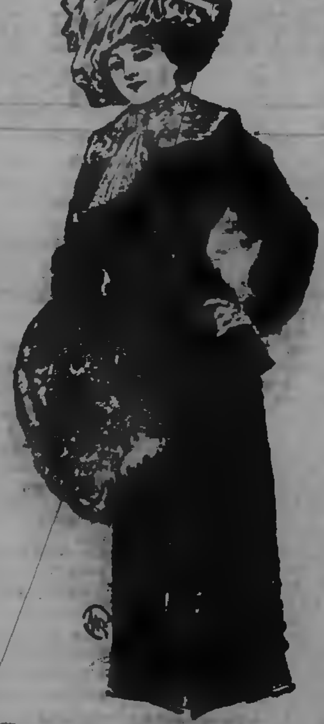
Benjamin Goodrich tells the readers of Country Life that no window garden plant is more dependable than the common geranium, especially in the single varieties, which are handsomest for the purpose. He names the geranium first for gayety, the heliotrope next for fragrance and says a good word for that old fashioned flower, sweet alyssum, which gives the note of white and if not allowed to go to seed blooms continuously.

Premula obconica is recommended for its free blooming habit, its pale pinkish blossoms being produced in abundance. He has a good word also for that beautiful pink begonia, Gloire de Lorraine, but he says it is less dependable than the tall coral begonia (B. coccinea), whose large red blossoms hang from the stiff stems for three or four months. Another good begonia is B. semperflorens, var. gigantea rosea. These will provide bloom.

Forced Dutch and cape bulbs, brought in in succession, add much to the interest of the winter garden. The so called Chinese lily, double Roman, Von Sion, Grand Soleil d'Or narcissi, crocus and Princess Marianne tulip will "make a string of blooms from Christmas to early April." Hyacinths, single and Roman freesia, ixia, snowdrop and scilla are also favorably mentioned.

It's a Velvet Season.

Long slender lines dominate the street costume, as evidenced by the smart little suit of dark wine velutina illustrated, which is cut with a narrow skirt. The coat follows the lines of the figure, producing a long, slender waisted effect. There are double lapping fronts button trimmed both on the skirt and on the jacket. The collar facing is of Australian blue opossum. The satin swathed turban is a natty French creation.



SUIT OF DARK WINE VELUTINA.

Sewing Room Suggestions.

An applique of small velvet flowers on a net scarf is pretty. A scarf and flowers—the latter in a border, narrow at the sides, wide at the ends—were both of deep terra cotta.

When the piercer for embroidery is missing or broken, try sharpening down an orange wood manicure stick and using that instead. It makes a nice, clean hole and does not tear the material jaggedly. Many needleworkers prefer to use it all the time instead of the steel or ivory implement. It is cheap enough and readily replaced when broken or blunted.

Often in padding a buttonhole edge or a design for solid embroidery the white padding shows through the color that is afterward stitched under it. This is especially noticeable and disagreeable in a dark shade. One woman solved the problem by doing her padding in cotton as near the shade of the silk as she could get. The result was eminently satisfactory. It may seem extravagant, but the cotton was only 3 cents a spool, and the extra expense was worth while.

A Word in Time.

To Clean White Kid Boot Linings.—The best method of cleaning white kid and white sheepskin linings of boots is to sponge with benzine. Superficial dirt can be cleaned off with a piece of india rubber such as is used for removing lead pencil marks.

For Baked Custard.—When making baked custard, if the milk is warmed before adding the eggs no water will settle in the bottom of the baking dish.

When sweeping turkey, axminster or any thick piled carpet, always brush the way of the pile, and it will look fresh and bright for years.

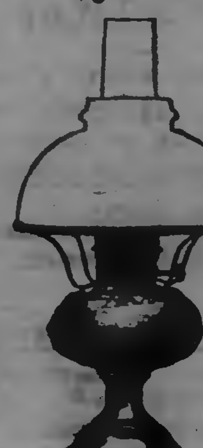
Pressing Centerpieces.

When laundering centerpieces the ugly puckering that prevents their lying flat on the table is prevented by ironing the center before the edges.

Handkerchiefs are also best ironed in this way, though usually the hems are ironed first.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS

PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any Case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 Days or money refunded. 50c



The Famous Rayo

Does Not Strain the Eyes

Don't use a small, concentrated light over one shoulder. It puts an unequal strain on your eyes. Use a diffused, soft, mellow light that cannot flicker, that equalizes the work of the eyes, such as the Rayo Lamp gives, and avoid eye strain.

The Rayo is designed to give the best light, and it does.

It has a strong, durable shade-holder that is held firm and true. A new burner gives added strength. Made of solid brass and finished in nickel. Easy to keep polished. The Rayo is low priced, but no other lamp gives a better light at any price.

THE ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY OFFICERS ELECTED FOR 1911

Annual Meeting Held at Collegiate Auditorium—"Is the Earth Flat?" Will be Topic for Series of Debates.

The Royal Astronomical Society held its annual meeting last evening in the Collegiate Institute.

After the presentation of the financial and other reports covering the work of the year, the officers for the year 1911 were elected.

The financial report as presented by Dr. Marsh, the treasurer, bore evidence of the very healthy condition of the Peterborough centre. While all fees received for membership are forwarded to the general treasurer of the Society a very handsome grant, considerably in excess of the amount secured locally, is presented to the centre here.

By means of this very liberal grant supplemented by the munificent gift of the Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Astronomical Society has been able to procure some very valuable instruments, books and lantern slides, thus placing the work upon a most excellent basis for thorough and practical handling.

The following are the officers selected for the year 1911:—

President—H. B. Collier.
Vice-President—H. O. Fisk.
Secretary-Treasurer—Dr. Marsh.
Councillors—T. A. S. Hay, Rev. G. W. Henderson, D. Easson, J. Carveth, and Duncan Walker.
Librarian—T. A. S. Hay.
Curator—H. O. Fisk.
Auditor—Frank Adams.

Work for the ensuing term has been carefully planned and among the interesting features proposed, are a series of debates on such topics as "What arguments are there in favor of believing the earth flat?"

After the business of the evening a number of very interesting mechanical lantern slides were thrown on the canvass and discussed.

TENDERS FOR NEW POWER HOUSE

Are Being Advertised for by C.G.E. Co.—Power House and Machinery Will Cost Between $80,000 and $100,000—Tenders Will be Received to January 5th.

The Canadian General Electric Company are asking for tenders for the new power house to be built at the waterwork's dam, at Auburn. Tenders will be received up to January 5th, 1911.

Plans and specification may be seen at the Toronto Canadian General's Toronto office, 212 King Street West, or at the office of William Kennedy, jr., rooms 8 and 9, Y. M. C. A. building, Montreal.

The new power house with machinery installed will cost between $80,000 and $100,000.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM FOR VISITORS TO THE Y.M.C.A.

The holidays will be full of interest at the local Y.M.C.A. this year. Of course the great day will be on January first, when the building is thrown open to friends to inspect. There will be something going on all day. A man going into the Association on New Year's Day may be pretty sure that he will be entertained and instructed, and if he should happen to get thinking of home and how far he is from home he will be cheered up and made to feel happy.

In the morning there will be swimming matches in the big plunge, and a couple of good games of basketball in the gymnasium. Then in the afternoon there will be a "Travel Talk" in the parlors. This will be illustrated by beautiful views and intensely interesting. After the travel talk refreshments will be served by the Ladies' Auxiliary. This interesting part of the programme will be accompanied by sweet music.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the scene of interest will change again to gymnasium, and here there will be one of the biggest and best demonstrations of physical work ever given in the city of Peterborough. There will be something of interest during every minute. This will not be a farce, but a strong demonstration of the work the department is giving night after night in the gymnasium. There will be the calisthenic drills to music, rythmical exercises, called "Gymnastic Dancing," apparatus work on the parallel bars. There will be recreative games, games that will make you laugh, but none of your clown work. The Junior Pyramid Club will do some of their best pyramids. This alone will be worth coming to see. The boys will also give an exhibition of wand work, and the Boy Scouts will give a demonstration of the work they have been learning during the past few months.

The building will be open to friends of the Association all day and the bowling alleys will be free for all the old friends.

On Christmas day the boys of the city will be allowed free use of the gymnasium and baths all morning. They will be required to use either running shoes in the gymnasium or else go in in their stockings. The physical director will be there to see that the boys have a good time without hurting themselves. The usual games will be run off.

ONE DAY LEFT, and it is SATURDAY, TO DO YOUR SHOPPING

IN accordance with our usual custom the day before Christmas, we will open the Bargain Annex Saturday morning and keep it open all day and evening up to 9:15. This gives the crowds of Christmas buyers the opportunity of taking advantage of the extra bargains found on the fourth floor and also relieves the congestion on the main floors, which is decidedly to the advantage of our patrons, as it makes choosing much easier than it otherwise would be with the usual crowded aisles. Besides hundreds of rare values which will be found in the Annex, we are going to offer three leaders for the day only.

TAKE NOTE—The red dodger announced that the leader No. 1—$1 and $1.50 Moreen Underskirts would be sold at 2 o'clock at 50c. This is a mistake, as ⅔ of the lot will be offered at 8:15 sharp and the balance at 2 o'clock. This is to assure our afternoon shoppers that there will be some at 2 o'clock, no matter how well they take. Note also that the "Boy's Sweater Coats at 45c should be Boy's Sweaters instead.

GOTCH ANNOUNCES HE WOULD WRESTLE AGAIN

Chicago, Dec. 23.—Frank Gotch is making his plans to return to the ring and defend the wrestling championship of the world. The giant farmer of Humboldt yesterday made the first announcement of his intention of wrestling again to Sol Plex the Chicago Examiner, and stated that he would be seen in a championship match before summer, if one little obstacle was overcome. What that obstacle is Gotch refused to state.

The champion was reluctant to admit that he not only was planning on re-entering the game, but really wanted to meet Hack, Zbysko or Mahmout again. He was firm in his intention of retiring a few weeks ago, but has seen several matches since then; has been seized by the old fever and now admits only the removal of the mysterious obstacle to tell the public he will wrestle.

When Gotch left for his home last night he was bubbling over with enthusiasm over his plans to return to the ring.

"I can't tell you why I have not announced my return to the game before this," said Gotch. "I am anxious to wrestle and want to meet the winner of a series of bouts among Mahmout, Hackenschmidt and Zbysko and prove once more that I am the best man in the game. The thing that has been forcing me to tell the public I'm retired is of too personal a nature to be brought into the case, and I wish you would not ask me to discuss it. You can say I will wrestle any man in the world who proves his right to a match, provided this obstacle is removed. I don't feel like quitting the game. I am as good now, if not better, than at any other time in my career, and a fellow hates to give up anything at which he believes he is the best man in the world."

It took some time to get Gotch to admit he would defend his title again. The champion was found at the Morrison Hotel, and when asked if he had changed his mind about returning to the game he said—

"No, I have not. I have too much business to look after that I haven't had time to give much thought to the wrestling game."

"You seem to be spending much time watching Hackenschmidt and Mahmout work for a fellow who is on the retired list," was suggested.

"That is funny, isn't it? I did see Hack at Minneapolis the other night and also in Chicago. I also saw Mahmout work Wednesday night. He is a good man."

"Why do you go to see these bouts if you are out of the game?" he was asked. "Surely you must intend to defend the championship or you would not be following Hack around the country."

"You're right. I have not forgotten the wrestling game," he said after thinking for a few minutes. "I am crazy to wrestle one more big match but there is one obstacle that must be overcome before I can step into the ring again. If it is, you can bet I'll meet one of these foreigners who looks the best and, what's more, I'll beat him."

Gotch was reminded that he was not a man who let obstacles interfere with his wishes, and informed that it looked like a good bet that he would be back in the ring. He merely smiled. But Gotch's statement yesterday should be food for the fans who have been clamoring for his return to the game. It is the first announcement he has made this season of his intention to wrestle again, and when the time comes for a big match it is about the best sort of a bet that the obstacle will be brushed aside and [illegible], the hold and all, will draw [illegible] the ropes again.

IN WHICH MAT LIGHTS OF LOCAL FAME ARE RECALLED

(Toronto Star.)

The Russian Lion has made a new proposition to Tom Flanagan. He says that if Tom will increase the handicap time from one hour and a half to one hour and forty-five minutes, that he will take on four men instead of three for that thousand [illegible] to be wrestled for at Riverdale Rink Dec. 29th.

Flanagan grabbed at the offer like hungry lunge at a trawl and from here it looks as if the wily Irishman has hooked himself. To get three good men who can give Hackenschmidt a [illegible] tussle each is an easier task than to get a fourth who can stay 15 minutes. Flanagan's original three are said to be Yankee Rogers, of Buffalo, Jesse Westergaarde, the Kansas City giant, and Young Hackenschmidt, of Memphis. Westergaarde has never appeared here, but is a top-notcher. He weighs 195 pounds, and is always right. Yankee Rogers will weigh 180 pounds, and while he is not so strong as Westergaarde, he is a wily, clever chap, and a bear on the offensive if things do not come too rough for him. The class of the Flanagan trio to those who know is Young Hack. Young Hack is better known here as Cyclone Burns. He was here two years ago, but after toying with Hurtubise and Hassan Abdallah, and some more of that class, blew out. He only weighs 185, but he has more under his belt than he is credited with. He cleaned Perelli, Young Gotch, Miller, McLeod, and that bunch up in the east, and can stand Dr. Roller on his head any time the Seattle physician has a mind to say, "Come on." To get a fourth man to stand more than five minutes with Hack is a problem, unless it is either Mahmout and Zbysco, and these are not available. A no-account in the quartet gives Hack just so much more time to handle the three good men, and five minutes more might cost Flanagan his Tager. It looks as if the Irishman kicked himself in the shin when he exchanged a quarter of an hour for another man, for fifteen minutes is a whole lot of time for an enterprising young man. He'd better pick out a basketball player and tell him to keep away from the Lion.

SPORT TALK

"A prize fighter faces the same chance of death as a football player when he enters a contest," said a Philadelphia coroner, when he discharged John Kalme, a young pugilist, from custody, and exonerated him from all blame in the death of John Imhof, whose skull was fractured in a bout at the Nonpariel Athletic Club last Friday night. "We don't hold a football team responsible for a death, and I see no reason to hold a prize fighter," added the coroner.

In the fifth round of the fatal fight, when both boys were apparently on even terms, Kalme struck Imhof a straight arm blow in the jaw. Imhof fell and struck his head on the floor. He was carried to a dressing room and after attempts to revive him he was hurried to an hospital but he died on the way. It was testified that the blow was not hard enough to floor a child. Charles Markus, who qualified as an expert witness, said that the blow was a mere tap.

The opinion is expressed that the announcement of the cancelling of the Hackenschmidt handicap match by the Toronto Morality Department was only an ingenious ruse of a nimble-minded press agent. And who was this nimble-minded press agent? Why Tom Flanagan, of course.

If it is true that it was only a publicity scheme Flanagan deserves credit for the stunt certainly was an effective means of advertising.

At the same time we do not hesitate to censure him for adopting illegitimate methods—that is, of course, if he did.

Ad. Wolgast the lightweight champion pugilist has a protege. He is Louis Meripol.

Two years ago he was a Milwaukee newsie. To-day he is one of the most promising of the younger generation of jockeys.

When Milwaukee was something of a fight centre, Meripol, like other newsies was a fight fan. Wolgast was then beginning to climb, and one of the steadiest boosters was the little newsboy. Wolgast became interested in the kid and when he went west he took Meripol along.

The loyalty of the boy made an impression on the lad who was destined to become lightweight champion, and when he learned Louis aspired to pigskin honors, he secured a position for him with a man who had a string at Emeryville.

It wasn't long before the youngster was exercising horses and he displayed such marked ability that he was given a chance to show his ability in a race. Now he is in demand. His track moniker is "Young Wolgast."

Meripol's chief bid for fame was at the Emeryville track when he piloted his mount home after having broken both stirrups in the stretch. He retained his seat when the irons gave way and after a splendid exhibition of riding won the race.

Meripol is a mite of humanity weighing but 85 in his street clothes. He is reckless in the saddle, and this has led to his being set down twice, although he has been riding less than a year.

CURLING

Boston, Mass., Dec. 22 — It is expected that the American Curling championship between eight Canadian teams and United States teams from Boston, New York, Schenectady and Utica, with the Gordon medal as the chief incentive, will be fought out on local rinks during February next. A committee of the Boston Curling Club yesterday accepted the Gordon medal match conditions and the National Curling Club will fix the date of the contest. The Gordon medal is now held in Montreal.

The residence of Silas Hill, at Brantford, was destroyed by fire, with its contents.

TAYLOR SAYS HE HAS RETIRED

The Ottawa Free Press says.—As intimated in yesterday's Free Press, Fred Taylor is destined to appear in print again before the hockey season gets under way.

Taylor has broken off with Renfrew and will not play with that team again. From the multiplicity of rumors which whirled around last year with regard to the salary Renfrew would pay the hockey star, the most reliable was to the effect he would receive $1,200 salary and a permanent position at $1,200. He was supposed to have a two year salary contract.

But it is all off now. Fred will not wear the broad red shoulder sweater of the Creamery town again.

But what concerns most people in the Capital is the report Taylor will not even appear in an Ottawa uniform. He is destined to be a mere spectator this season. Whether Renfrew refuses to waive claim on him cannot be stated.

Nothing of the inside trouble can be given out, other than that the famous hockey cyclone is through with Renfrew. Taylor hates to break into the limelight and in a brief interview with the Free Press this morning he said:

"If you must say something about me state that I have retired. Other than that I cannot say a word."

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

There are busy days for the boys at the "Y." Holidays are usually looked forward to as the period especially devoted to having a good time. The many ways of having this good time are being demonstrated by the boys, who, in their different groups, and with their likes and dislikes are making in all a very busy and holiday like appearance around town. Some are spending their holidays in skating and sleighing, some in the different amusements at the "Y" and not a few in helping to make others able to enjoy Xmas. Thursday was a busy day for the boys, who were delivering presents to homes in the city, of Christmas gifts supplied by the members of different Churches, etc. The boys started on this errand, Wednesday night at St. Paul's Church, and were kept busy again Thursday. The boys have also brought to the Association many parcels, the contents of which will be delivered to the needy Saturday, by them.

The one great helping hand extended by all the Department, was that of selling stamps in aid of the Muskoka Sanatarium. Fifty dollars worth being handed out to the boys to dispose of, most of which are now sold.

To-night, scout meeting.

THE GREATNESS OF BRITAIN

(Toronto News)

It is always to be remembered that the moderate reformers who precipitated the French Revolution neither desired nor foresaw the goal to which they were driving the nation. The Girondists were sincere and even devoted patriots who thought only of their country's welfare, and the States General was one of the finest representative assemblies ever gathered together. The danger lay in the eloquence of the propagandists. Once the appeals to popular passion gained headway, the multitude got out of hand, and France went headlong to a ruin such as the world has seldom witnessed. The extreme English Radicals must also be credited with sincerity, but in inciting the unemployed and unemployable they may be playing with dynamite. The safety of the United Kingdom lies only in the traditional steadiness of the British people.

Many of the most remarkable tributes to the British people ever noticed or written have come from foreigners. Frenchmen praise their steadiness and their age-long refusal to one stampeded. A Mohammedan from Egypt remarks their wonderful genius for colonization and government, and hopes for the day when his country may become a self-governing portion of the Empire representation at Westminster. One American speaks of the high standard of true liberty that characterizes the old land. Another regards the British navy as the chief safeguard of the world's peace. A third says: that England's pre-eminence is attributable to her people's insistence through the centuries on freedom of speech, but he does not like to find this freedom descending to license.

After thirty years residence in Great Britain an ardent American like Mr. Prince Collier writes of the superiority of England's statesmen He says: "Some of their great men would probably appear dull at our after-dinner festivities, alongside of certain American publicists we might mention, who have been renowned principally as orators and story-tellers; but what man, however much he loved his country, would mention them in the same breath with Cromer, Milner, Kitchener, as public servants and patriots? Disagreeable as it may seem for the American to say so, it is the difference between mastiffs and monkeys! In the long run, which of these two types of men is dull, the for years hard-working, unheard of Cromer, or the ceaselessly chattering simian public men we all have in mind. At least we must give credit where credit is due. The Englishman shines by comparison with the oratorical flippancy and the ready acceptance of the part of after-dinner clown which have made so many reputations in America. Not that we have not our own type of self-sacrificing public servants in men like Wood, Magoon, Taft and scores more, but how shabbily do we reward them."

A Scotch Tory who came to Canada the other day takes a dark view of the British political situation. He even fears that the Radical upheaval involves England's ruin. Therefore he is going to cast in his lot with Canada, which he regards as the Empire's hope. Many other people of intelligence whom one meets in England these days take a similarly pessimistic view of the situation which however, The News does not pretend to share. We will rely upon the steadiness and sobriety of the British people in the mass to stand proof against any appeals to passion to which they may be subjected. Many evils cry for removal in the British Islands, but we have no doubts the necessary reforms will come through decent evolutionary channels rather than by resort to revolution, or by any besmirching of the nation's record for progress by sound and responsible constitutional methods.

DISTANT FIELDS LOOK GREEN; A REMINDER FOR CHRISTMAS

An amusing story is told of a wealthy manufacturer of one of the smaller cities of Ontario, who made a trip to Germany to be treated at some famous springs there for rheumatism. The waters of this spring, judiciously applied, externally and internally, were supposed to be a specific for his complaint.

In the course of a conversation with the physician in charge of the sanitarium, he asked if there was no place else in the world where such wonderfully curative waters were to be obtained. The physician assured him that there was only one other place in the world with water as good as and similar to theirs, but that was away off in Canada, in a little place called Preston. As Preston is but a few miles from the manufacturer's home, he had travelled five thousand miles for something he could have obtained at home.

There is a moral in that story for some residents of Peterborough. They go or send to some of the large cities to supply their needs in wearables exactly the same articles at the same or even a better rate at home. A little observation, assisted by reference to our advertising columns, will show that the very best quality in all kinds of merchandise is sold in Peterborough at rates which compare favorably with those given by the mail order houses in Toronto or Montreal. It is only reasonable that it should be so when we consider that our local merchants do not have to bear the same burdens of taxation or general expense that the large city stores have.

Sometimes we see the mote in our neighbor's eye in spite of a very large beam in our own. Have not all of us, at one time or another, been just as foolish as the manufacturer we mentioned?

We know of an experience of a friend of ours which is just as much to the point. He wanted a certain book, and as he prided himself on his erudition he did not suppose anyone in Peterborough would have ever called for the book, and that there would be no prospect of obtaining it locally. Consequently he sent out of town for the book, without even inquiring if the local dealers had it. He paid $2 25, the publisher's price, plus postage, and when the book was received he found it had been damaged somewhat in transit. Shortly after he saw the book in a local store, and learned that the price was $2 25, the same as the out-of-town price, but he was out the postage and had a damaged copy. He also learned that several copies had been purchased here by people whom he knew. He should have at least given the local dealer a chance to get it for him.

The moral of all this is that though distant fields may look green, a closer inspection will reveal the fact that they are just about the same color, and contain perhaps fewer wheat heads to the acre, than the field close at hand, with the disadvantage of being harder to get at. Let us look at home before jumping to conclusions that we can do better elsewhere. It would result to the advantage of all concerned, the buyer, the seller and the town in general.

The Men Who Insure WHO ARE THEY?

Are they not the men who consider FIRST their responsibilities to THOSE DEPENDENT ON THEM?

Are they not the TRUE MEN, the men who do not live to THEMSELVES ALONE, the 100 per cent FINE MEN?

HORSE RAN AND BOYS JUMPED

Neither Were Hurt However and the Damage Was Trifling

A runaway that looked rather alarming for a few minutes occurred this morning about eleven o'clock. The delivery cart of R. J. Cox, the butcher was coming down Brock Street hill, in charge of a couple of young lads. One of the traces slipped down allowing the shaft to strike the horse. This started it to such an extent that it became uncontrollable and ran away. The boys jumped out and the animal went right down Brock to George and into the stables at the rear of the butcher shop. No damage of any extent was done.

Judgment Reserved

To-day's Toronto Mail and Empire says of a case in which local people are interested:

Judgment was reserved in the case argued before Mr. Justice Riddell re the share of Ontario Bank stock on which their holders, Joshua D. Collins and Mrs. Ella Walsh, wish to be relieved from double liability. Mr. Charles Moss, for the shareholders, argued that as the shares had been taken from the officers' pension fund by the bank they thereby became canceled, as it was illegal for the bank to buy its own stock.

MUSEUM OF THE ARCTIC.

Fort Simpson Has a Most Enviable Collection of Birds and Books.

Times change. Up at Fort Simpson on the Mighty Mackenzie there is a cluster of log buildings, the beams of which are now getting a little rusty with rot. Years ago, there used to be tall stools in those buildings, heavy ledgers, and an army of strapping young chaps who rubbed their palms together to keep warm, and when they were feeling comfortable, took a spell at adding up tall pyramids of figures, and talking smoothly to their red brothers, whose wont it was to drop in off the trail with a pack of pelts. That was Fort Simpson in the days that it was the head-post of the Hudson Bay Co., the headquarters for guns and food before the board packed the whole outfit, clerks and all, down to Fort Smith and made it the base.

The evacuation must have taken place suddenly. For the Hudson Bay Co. clerks left considerable treasure behind them. This property tells a highly interesting and creditable feature of the lives of the clerks of Fort Simpson; skins and figures were by no means their whole existence. At Fort Simpson you will find taxidermy and literature; a collection of Canadian birds whose equal no museum in the Dominion possesses, and a library — antiquarian. It was Bernard Ross, factor in 1859, and one Hennicott who got together the birds and the books—mainly Hennicott. He was an old army veteran who loved the open places, and a chair and a book before the glare of the campfire when the sun went down. The books have the biggest appeal to a delver in the museum of the Arctic. There's humanity in those sere, mosquito-bitten pages. They belong to a hardy age: before the literary era of Robert Chambers and the hammock. Here is part of the mental menu of old Fort Simpson:

"Virgil," printed by order of George II., with a royal proclamation signed by Hollis Newcastle, 1741; "Works of British Poets," Robert Anderson, M.D., 1795; "History of Europe," Sir Archibald Alison, Bart., 1859.

The traders at Fort Smith are going to chase back after their things aesthetic it is reported. And there is a rumor that the National Museum is to receive a present of the birds.

He Planted a Barn.

Perhaps the most remarkable barn in the world is owned by Harold Mackubbic, a farmer at Lloydminister, Saskatchewan, in Canada's northwest. When building the structure several years ago he was short of money and timber was scarce. He used green willow for the corner posts and sides, setting them into the ground in a vertical position.

The following season he found that the posts had roots and were growing rapidly. That fall the floor of the barn, which before had been on the ground, was three feet above the ground level. A year ago the barn was on stilts nine feet high, and the owner put another story underneath, making the original one-story barn a two-story structure.

The lower floor is now two feet from the ground, the willows are growing rapidly, and the farmer looks forward to the time when he can put in a third story, when, so he says he will convert the structure from a barn into a dwelling [illegible] in it.

SEVERELY CUT ABOUT THE FACE AND HEAD

The night watchman at the Oriental came across a man early this morning who had been sleeping in the stable and P. C. Adams, who was notified, took him to the police station, where he gave his name as Pearson. Later it was found that the prisoner was severely cut about the face. When asked for an explanation he claimed that he had been assaulted and clubbed by two men. However, the marks would indicate that a horse had either kicked him or stepped on his head. He had been sleeping near the horses. Pearson came here last Sunday. He had five dollars in his possession.

Dr McPherson was called and treated the wounds, after which the man was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

HIGH-CLASSS SMOKER GIVEN BY NO. 8 COMPANY

A Happy Evening Spent at Their Quarters in the Armouries.

"You've got a long way to go," said Lieut Playford, during a comic selection at the smoker given by No. 8 Company of the 57th Regiment, at their rooms in the armories, and the words are well applied when it is said that you've got a long way to go to find better entertainers than this same company.

Capt McPherson and his boys were "at home," and the occasion was a real happy one, not alone for themselves but also for their guests, which included Rev. Canon Davidson, chaplain of the regiment; Major Eastwood, Quartermaster Sergt Edwards, Capt Higgins, Col. Sergt. Sucee and press representatives.

To use the words of Rev. Davidson, as he responded to a toast to "The Staff" "No 8 Company is going ahead," and it was a step in the right direction

The evening was one of song, music, short speeches and refreshments of the highest order. When Corporal Griffin wasn't working his concertina, or Sergt Joyce his phonograph, Quartermaster Sergt Edwards or Col. Sergt Smith were entertaining with songs that suited the occasion, and in which the gathering could join in the chorus.

Captain McPherson proposed the toast to "The Staff" and it was honored by Rev. Canon Davidson and Major Eastwood. Both speakers expressed great pleasure at being present, and tendered their congratulations to No. 8 Company. Glowing references were made to Capt McPherson for his splendid services to his company and regiment, and the gathering showed their sympathy with these remarks by lustily singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Major Eastwood touched on ideals which a million men should have to make him a true soldier. He urged that the members of No. 8 company, set up high ideals for themselves and act on them at all times.

Commendatory remarks were made by Sergt Hanwell on the work of Corporal Griffin, who assisted by Private Hutchinson, hung the decorations for the occasion. The smoker was brought to a close shortly after eleven o'clock, by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

FINED FOR DISORDERLY CONDUCT ON G.T.R. TRAIN

An unusual stir was noticeable at the police court this morning. The past few weeks have seen a calm. Now comes the storm.

James and Herbert Newhall pleaded guilty to the charge of obstructing and impeding Conductor George Jobbitt, while in the execution of his duty on a train.

Each was fined $10 with $2 costs, the same to be paid forthwith. The alternative was twenty days in jail

The trouble took place in the smoker of the Lakefield train as she was making her trip to the city last evening. Three men got on at Lakefield, and proceeded to cut loose in the car. Conductor Jobbitt endeavored to pacify the men but was unsuccessful. They were using bad language and at one time got after the brakeman as he came through. He was threatened by the trio one of whom held a big bottle over his head, as if to strike. One window was broken. Finally they were locked in the car and the police station was notified on the arrival of the train

P.C. McGinty answered the call, but through no fault of the officer, one of the men made his escape.

"We are not going to have respectable people annoyed in our public conveyances by men who don't respect themselves," added His Worship after giving the above judgment

FINES WERE PAID.

The fines were paid by a foreman of the Cavendish Lumber Company, with whom the men are employed

BACK TO COBOURG.

Patrick Bard answered that he was advised to make connections with the train at noon, and remove to Cobourg, from whence he said he came.

"The plum pudding supply on the hill is limited," so His Worship stated

NOT WANTED

Chas Gold didn't think he was guilty, but he too is not wanted here. He had none of his namesake, and after many promises to leave the city at once, was given his liberty.

RANGE NEEDED FOR REGIMENT

Absolute Necessity in Building up of a Company

During a short address to the members of No 8 company at their smoker, last evening, Major Eastwood referred to the absence of target ranges for the use of the members of the 57th regiment.

He said that a range was an absolute necessity in the building up of a company.

The regiment had now a splendidly equipped Armouries and its star was in the ascent, but what was further needed was a range, as it was a most important item in the life of a company or regiment.

STRIKE SYMPATHIZERS BURN STREET CAR AT WINNIPEG

Motorman is Badly Cut by Missiles When Crowd Bombard a Stalled Trolley—Stuffing is Torn From Cushions and Used to Kindle the Blaze.

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.—The most serious disturbance since the inauguration of the street railway strike took place last night in the same locality of the previous big disturbance, but the damage done was considerably more, a car being burned so that only the shell remains.

A belt line car had been stalled at the corner of Logan avenue west and Gallagher street, owing to the fact that the power had failed. At this point there are no street lamps, and the car was on the track in the darkness, with only the motorman and the conductor inside, waiting until the power had been restored. Strike sympathizers passing by noticed the car, but at first, suspecting it was a police trap, paid no attention. One man, bolder than the rest climbed to the roof and adjusted the pole to the wire. As no lights came on, the real conditions of affairs became known, and a crowd of about a thousand rapidly assembled.

In a few moments bottles, stones and pieces of ice were rained at the car. The windows went like paper, and the motorman received a very bad cut over the eye. The conductor escaped uninjured.

The cry then went up, "Burn the car," and this the crowd quickly set about to do. The stuffing was torn from the cushions, and a bale of botton batting was secured nearby. These were piled on the floor and ignited. In a few minutes it was a burning mass.

The fire crew from the Weston Hall turned out as soon as it was known, and managed to put out the blaze, but all that was left was the shell and iron works. The police were also telephoned for as soon as the crowd assumed a serious aspect, but so quickly was the work done that when they arrived there was no one around the burning car. The car was valued at $8,000, but the loss will not be a total one.

A belt line car at the corner of Frances and Notre Dame had stopped to allow some passengers to alight, when a revolver shot came crashing through the skylight. From the direction it came it appears to have been fired from an elevation, but the culprit escaped. Bottles were fired through a window of a Broadway car, but no one was hurt. There were several ladies and children on the car.

Wm. Mullin and Albert Bradley were arrested, charged with throwing bottles through a car window. Bail was refused, as they are said to formerly have been in the employ of the street railway.

So far as the daily handling of traffic is conceived the city is quiet.

Cars, while not running on time, are plentiful enough, and so far all accidents have been minor ones.

A few missles are still flying, but nobody has received injury of any magnitude in this strike, which is now in its eighth day. Guards at the car barns are very vigilant, but policemen no longer ride on every car.

The Garment Makers' Union on Thursday night resolved to permit none of its members to assist in making uniforms for the new employes of the company, and also to withdraw the union label from any shop making uniforms for them. However, the firm that has the contract, a Manitoba clothing company, in response to a query, offered to bet $10,000 that their employes were making the uniforms. This was in response to a statement by the secretary of the Garment Workers' Union, that no member of the union is working on any garments. A committee of this union will visit every tailor in the city to interest them in the car strikers' cause.

Fears Re-Arrest.

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.—Savyo Federenko, the Russian refugee, whose extradition warrant was recently annulled in the King's Bench, is in hiding, as his friends expect that an attempt will be made to re-arrest him before long. He intends, however, to appear publicly on the stage of the Queen's Theatre on Sunday afternoon, in order to thank, through an interpreter, a mass meeting for help and sympathy of the public during his captivity.

Land Hunger of United States.

BYLAW COMMENDED BY CITY COUNCIL

To The Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir: As members of the City Council, we wish you to know that we heartily approve of the Bonner-Worth bylaw, and ask you to support same with your vote and influence.

This Company will spend between $20,000 and $25,000 a year in wages.

They will build a factory at an approximate cost of $12,000. The machinery and equipment therefore will cost over $18,000. The Company has capital paid up to the value of $40,000. Business precaution prompted them to guarantee but 30 hands. As a matter of fact they will start with between 40 and 50. The goods they will produce are manufactured in only one other town in Canada. If they wish to do so they can to-day contract for the whole of their output. The management is in the hands of skillful men, experienced and trained in this particular line of business. The two active men are themselves investing one-third of the total capital.

After the Company has acquired its land, and erected its buildings it asks the city to loan them 50 p.c. of their expenditure up to $12,000 and after they have been in operation for a full year, the city is to loan them the other 50 p.c. The loan is to be secured by a mortgage on the land, buildings and fixed machinery, the latter to be worth not less than $2,000. One year from the second payment the Company will repay to the city $1,000 and a like sum annually until the loan is repaid. The Company will pay school taxes to the extent of about $100 a year. The loan will cost the city $292.00 per year.

The Company has attractive offers from other towns, but prefers Peterborough. The prospects are that within two years, the capacity of the plant will be doubled. The plans are drawn providing for this. When the success of the enterprise is assured, those already connected with it are prepared to invest much more heavily. There is no stock for sale. This is a good proposition for the city and we are heartily and unanimously in favor of it and want you to register your vote and use your influence with your friends in order that we may obtain the necessary three-fifths of the total tax payers.

Your Obedient Servants,
W. G. Morrow, Mayor; W. H. Bradburn, George Duncan, J. J. Turner, jr.; H. Morgan, Jos. Batten, J. J. Duffus, W. J. Metheral, J. Graham, H. Phelan, R. Hicks, G. A. Gillespie, W. Buller.

DUKE MAY NOT COME

Official Gossip Says Connaught is Needed at Home.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—The Duke of Connaught will not be the next Governor-General of Canada. At least that is the opinion in official circles in Ottawa. The opinion is based on a substantial hint of a semi-official nature received from the Mother Country.

It was announced shortly after the death of King Edward that it had been the wish of the King that his brother, the Duke of Connaught, should go to Canada as Governor-General, and for that reason the term of Earl Grey was extended for a year. However, King George is said to have discovered that the duties devolving upon a King of England are too numerous and too onerous for one man to attend to. There is a constant succession of corner-stone ceremonies, opening of hospitals and countless other similar functions, where the King feels he should be represented in person, or by a prince royal.

When Queen Victoria was on the throne she had as aides, King Edward, then Prince of Wales, and the Duke of Connaught. When King Edward came to the throne he was assisted by the Duke of Connaught and Prince George of Wales. King George, however, finds that he has only one competent assistant to represent him, and this is the Duke of Connaught, as the Prince of Wales is not yet old enough to take his place as his father's representative.

The necessity for the Duke of Connaught remaining in England is said to be becoming more and more evident to the members of the royal family, and it is believed that someone else will be named to succeed Earl Grey.

It is unlikely that Earl Grey will remain here another year.

After Fire Comes Pestilence.

Minneapolis, Dec. 24.—Pestilence threatens to add its horrors to those of the forest fires that swept Beaudette and Spooner, and snuffed out thirty-two lives last October. Two thousand fire refugees, huddled together in barracks in those towns, and fed by the Red Cross Society, are in danger of smallpox contagion, introduced into the country by lumberjacks from Michigan, where the disease has been raging. Upwards of twenty cases are reported at International Falls. There is scarcely a town in Northern Minnesota without at least one case.

Too Drunk to Testify.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 24.—"It is gross contempt of court," is what Justice Clute in the non-jury sitting of the high court termed the non-appearance of David Adair, chief witness for the defence in the Suddaby-Lonsbury agreement of sale case, when Lawyer Hanning, K.C., informed the court that Adair could not be present on account of his intoxicated condition, and asked for an adjournment.

"If you bring him here in that condition I will send him down," observed his lordship.

Broke Into Postoffice.

St. Thomas, Dec. 24.—Returning to his store at 10.15 Thursday night, George Fife, keeper of a general store and postoffice at Orwell, disturbed three burglars, who made a hasty exit through the window by which they had entered, taking $20 in cash with them.

Had they not been disturbed they would probably have got $100 in cash in the till of the postoffice. The men went eastward. No clue to their identity. The Aylmer police are investigating.

Coal Strike Ended.

Cardiff, Wales, Dec. 24.—The great Welsh coal strike, which for weeks has caused much suffering among 40,000 idle miners in the Aberdeen district, was ended yesterday. At a monster mass meeting of representatives of the miners it was decided to terminate the strike, the men to return to work immediately after Christmas. The grievances of the men will be submitted to a conciliation board.

SMUGGLING SYNDICATE

Vancouver, Dec. 24.—The existence of a great company, with headquarters in Canton, Hong-Kong and branches in all parts of the Chinese Empire, having for its purpose the smuggling of Chinese into the United States and Canada, was vouched for before the Chinese commissioner here yesterday by A. J. Loftus of the Bank Line steamer America.

Capt. Loftus was the first officer of the steamer Oceana, on which three Chinese stowaways were discovered in Tacoma last spring. The ship's carpenter at that time said Loftus was in league with the chief boatswain and steward and that seventeen Chinese stowaways has escaped from the vessel at Vancouver. Thursday the officer denied all personal knowledge of Chinese smuggling, but stated that since the Tacoma incident, his company had discovered in Hong Kong the smuggling syndicate referred to, and, with the aid of the British police in that city, was making every effort to break it up. The compradores, or chief tallimen of the liners from the Orient were also mixed up in the plot.

Gambling Raid.

Montreal, Dec. 24.—In pursuance of their sudden activity in dealing with gambling, the police yesterday made a couple of notable arrests, when Martin Finn and Eddie Sullivan were arrested on a charge of conducting a gambling place at 47 St. John street. Both men pleaded not guilty. Forty-seven St. John street at one time was one of the most extensive pool rooms in the city. It is situated in the heart of the banking and financial community.

Encouraging Copper Industry.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—In order to encourage the copper industry, an order-in-council has been passed stating that "no royalty shall be charged on the products of copper mining locations for a period of ten years, that is, up to the first day of January, 1921, and that no reservation be made in the patents issued for such locations of a royalty on the sale of the products thereof during that period."

Branches For I.C.R.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—Acquisition of branch lines from the Intercolonial Railway is under consideration of the board of management, which, it is understood, will endeavor to fix the price and conditions of lease before making any report to the Government.

There is a reason to believe that the new international railway across New Brunswick from Leonards to Campbellton, the Cape Breton Railway, Point Tupper to St. Peters and the coal roads in Cumberland County, N.S., are viewed favorably.

The lines are not to be bought outright, but acquired by long lease with annual payments.

Tiny is Happy Again

A FLOATING MENAGERIE

Vessel Reaches New York With Cargo of Big Snakes.

New York, Dec. 24.—A python of thirty-five feet and an elephant of thirty-six inches were among the passengers on that modern Noah's Ark, the Muncaster Castle, which arrived from the Oreint yesterday. Not content with becoming a miniature zoo, the Muncaster Castle, on this trip also claims the record of saving twenty-one persons from suicide.

Just after leaving Cahina, according to her officers, the vessel picked up a dismasted ship, which had drifted 1,200 miles at the mercy of the sea. The twenty-one survivors who had had nothing to eat or drink for six days, were suffering such agonies they had determined on suicide by drowning and were about to cast themselves into the sea when they sighted the Muncaster Castle. They were rescued immediately, and landed at the first port on the Indian coast.

In addition to the gigantic python and the tiny elephant, the steamer's menagerie included dozens of snakes, none less than twenty feet long; a pig-tailed monkey, five Siamese red-faced apes, apes, a number of rare and beautiful birds, an Albion fish, and several remarkable specimens of Chinese and Japanese gold fish.

While in the Straits of Malacca one of the Chinese stokers went into the animal section and saw the snakes. Then he rushed on deck, peered over the sides, shouted that sharks had no terror for him, and dived into the sea. Second Officer C. G. Bonner ordered a boat to be lowered and a volunteer crew rescued the Chinaman, much against his will, and brought him safely back to the stoke-room. The luckless stoker was over-awed by his thirty-six other fellows in the stokehold, who considered he had a "bad joss," and regarded him with evil eyes.

Candy Kid Gets Life Sentence.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—Leigh Rhodus, known to the police as the "Candy Kid," robber, and who, when arrested in East St. Louis for burglary a month ago, confessed to two murders in Chicago, because he said he preferred a murder trial in Chicago to a burglary trial in East St. Louis, was sentenced yesterday to life imprisonment.

Rhodus gained his sobriquet of "Candy Kid" from his confession that he robbed over one hundred persons in Chicago that his young bride might have all the candy she wanted.

Fairles Is Dead.

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.—Wilfrid Fairles, aged 27, a C.N.R. fireman, died here in the general hospital Wednesday as the result of injuries received while doing special police duty in Rainy River, Ont., during the forest fires, which swept Beaudette and Spooner on the American side off the map and during which between thirty and forty people perished.

Fairles, the first night he was upon patrol, was shot in the head and terribly beaten, the perpetrators getting away undiscovered. In the confused and unorganized state of affairs it was several hours before he was discovered.

He is survived by a father and mother in St. Catharines. His brother Thomas is a grocer in London, Ont.

Filibustering Expedition.

New Orleans, Dec. 24.—Coincident with the departure late Thursday of the steamer Hornet, General Manuel Bonita, former President of Honduras, General Lee Christmas, soldier of fortune, and one of the leaders of the alleged revolutionary expedition against President Davillo of Honduras, and several Americans, who have seen service in Central American wars, disappeared from this city.

That the Hornet took on arms and ammunition after sailing from this port and that she is planning an attack upon one of the gulf ports of Honduras will be reported to the State Department by the Honduran Minister, with a request that the United States intercept the alleged filibuster.

Vindicative Husband.

Wheeling, W.Va., Dec. 24.—John Ailiff, husband of the woman for whose murder Thomas Wayne, a negro, was found guilty at Quinnement and sentenced to be hanged, arrived here yesterday morning to witness the execution, which took place in the Moundsville, W.Va., penitentiary, a few miles from here, late yesterday afternoon.

"I would travel a thousand miles to see that man put to death," declared Ailiff.

HARROW MAN TRIES TO GET $5,000 FROM UNCLE BY THREATS

Hanlon Wright of Harrow, Ont., Patrols Street With Rifle and Revolver Waiting for Relative—Police Called in From Other Towns.

Harrow, Ont., Dec. 24.—The siege of Harrow has been lifted. Hanlon Wright, the young desperado, who has been going about terrorizing the place with the guns he carried, in an effort to extort $5,000 from his uncle, W. G. Wright, a prosperous insurance man, has left town. He hired a livery rig and drove out of Harrow about six o'clock last evening.

Current report is that he is going to Western Canada, where gun play may be a shade more popular.

Wright was given $75 by his uncle, it is stated, and it was by this means that he was able to hire a rig. His escape is in the face of the calling in of the police from outside places. Constable Laporte came here from Amhertsburg, but returned to his own place without doing anything, and no attempt was made to prevent Wright from leaving the place. A bench warrant was secured yesterday in Windsor, it is understood, but it is not known whether or not any attempt will be made to serve it, now that Wright has gone away. Harrow is rather relieved than otherwise at his departure, and his uncle, who has kept closely to his house since Monday, except when he was in Windsor, will probably share in the feeling of relief.

This exciting chapter in Harrow history is something unique in the annals of Western Ontario. Wright, who is a man of about 33, was discovered early on Monday morning patrolling the main street with a rifle and a revolver, watching for his uncle to come out of his house. He had been in the place and demanded $5,000, but, by the presence of mind of William Wright's daughter, Ella, he was enabled to evade his nephew. Young Wright then went to his father's place, outside the village, and demanded $50, which he was refused. Since that time he has kept to his house, except on a couple of occasions, when he took to the street, with his gun still on him, and during which time people kept pretty well out of his way.

The impression is that Wright is insane. William Wright received several Black Hand letters lately, and the nephew is believed to be the author of them.

Killed the Repair Man.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—Attempts of burglars two weeks ago to rob a building in Kimmell, Ind., resulted in a man's death in Chicago yesterday. The victim was trying to repair the damage done to a safe a fortnight ago.

The safe had been brought to a repair company here, and Stephen Pavletik, a safe repairer, endeavored to open the door, which had been wedged shut and the combination dial destroyed. A sledge hammer blow on the door to straighten a corner touched off a charge of nitro-glycerine, which had been behind the door ever since the attempted robbery. The safe door was blown across the room, crushing the repair man's head like an eggshell.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Twenty-four deaths are reported from Chicago, as a result of the disastrous fire there.

Charles Teno of Walkerville had his neck broken through the negligence of a fellow-employe starting the machinery without his knowledge.

George Teasdale, proprietor of the hotel in which Miss Brimacomb was murdered, was convicted at Cobourg for selling liquor without a license.

After a stormy all night session the Chamber of Deputies yesterday passed the Spanish Government's "padlock bill" by a vote of 108 to 20. This is a notable victory for Premier Canalejas.

There can be now little doubt that the St. Lawrence Bridge Co. has been as good as awarded the contract for building the superstructure of the great Quebec bridge, the cost of which will be about thirteen million dollars.

J. M. Gill, editor of El International, Tampa, Fla., the organ of the striking cigarmakers, was arrested Thursday on a charge of conspiracy to prevent cigarmakers from returning to work. He was sent to jail in default of $5,000 bond.

Baron David Guenzberg, a famous Jewish benefactor, died at St. Petersburg yesterday, aged 54 years. He was the son of Horace Ossipowitch Guenzberg, President of the Central Committee of the Jewish Colonization Co., who died in 1909.

Alex. D. Lannon, captain in the fire department, Chicago, injured at the stockyards fire Thursday, died late last night. This makes the official lost of dead 24. Coroner Hoffman announced that the inquest will be opened next Wednesday morning.

The wage dispute between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and sixty-one railroads west, north and south of Chicago became critical yesterday, and it was admitted in all quarters that a sudden break in negotiations might come. None of the parties to the controversy would talk.

A young homesteader, Edw. Staunton, living near Pine Lake, Alta., was found by two of his neighbors unconscious, with a bullet hole from a 22-calibre rifle in his forehead and another in his chest. He has not recovered consciousness to give any account of the affair. His rifle was found near him with the breach open.

Gives $1,300,000 for Hospital.

New York, Dec. 24.—In behalf of a donor, who withholds his name, George L. Rives, chairman of the board of directors of Columbia University, and Robert W. Deforest, president of the Presbyterian hospital, announced last night that $1,300,000 had been pledged for the perfection of an affiliation between the hospital and the medical school of the university. The gift comes through Edward S. Harkness, a member of the wealthy family of New York and Cleveland, who adds $300,000 himself "for the erection upon a site belonging to the hospital of a surgical pavilion containing 150 beds and equipped with modern appliances and conveniently accessible to this pavilion, a complete laboratory for advanced research work."

Struck By a Train.

North Bay, Dec. 24.—Peter Beaucage, a young Italian, was struck by a C.P.R. train, near Yellick, six miles west of North Bay, Thursday night, and seriously injured. After being struck, Beaucage laid out in the snow most of the night, in the intense cold, until discovered in a frozen condition by the crew of a freight train, who placed him on the eastbound morning express, and he was taken to North Bay Hospital. One leg and one wrist are broken, besides other injuries, and he is suffering severely from exposure.

May Lose His Feet.

Cornwall, Dec. 24.—John Jesmer, a section hand of the New York Central Railroad, son of Captain John Jesmer of Cornwall, met with a serious accident Tuesday morning, by which he may lose one of his feet. Jesmer was at work in the yards, cleaning out switches, when one of the cars which was being switched caught one of his feet, crushing it badly. He was taken to the Ogdensburg Hospital. Jesmer is about 23 years old, and lives with his wife and one child at Massena Springs.

This is the first case of its kind ever brought against a hotel in Chatham. Magistrate Houston decreed that in all future cases the maximum fine of $50 and costs will be inflicted.

Vancouver, Dec. 24.—E. P. Davis, K.C., for nineteen years chief counsel for the C.P.R. in British Columbia, has left that company to accept similar service with the Canadian Northern. J. E. McMullen, who was sent from Montreal here a couple of years ago, will assume most of the Canadian Pacific work.

Wharton, N.J., Dec. 24.—Locked in their room while their mother went to Dover to buy Christmas presents for them, John, aged 6, and William, aged 2, sons of William Sumbey, were burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed the home.

While the fireman were searching the ruins for the charred bodies of the children, Mrs. Sumboy returned with her arms full of Christmas presents. She swooned and was taken to the home of a neighbor.

A Sad Case.

Edmonton, Dec. 24.—After traveling 7,000 miles from New Zealand to join her prospective husband, Oswald Hall, a prosperous farmer of Vermillion, Lydia Bentley was married to him the other day as she lay on a cot in Misericordia Hospital here. SATURDAY, DEC. 24, 1910.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

To-morrow is Christmas day, gentle reader, as you are no doubt fully aware. It is the sincere hope of The Review that it once again celebrating the joyous day, you are at peace with yourself and with your fellow-men; that the birthday of our Saviour, marking another milestone in our march onward to the future life, finds you with thought and sympathy for others not so fortunate as ourselves. In this life we come; we go. Let us in our brief space of time upon earth, do all possible kindness to our fellow-men, for we pass this way but once. Our achievements are as naught, except as they uplift and assist our weaker brethren along life's thorny way. Let us, in the height of festivity and cheer, remember the fallen brother and sister, these whom the hard world spurns. "Even as ye do unto these, my brethren, even so do ye unto Me."

The Review wishes its many readers the brightest and happiest Christmas possible, and in the words of Tiny Tim, "God bless us, every one."

BANK EXAMINATION

The bill which Parliament will consider, amending the Banking Act, at this session, contains the following paragraph, this being the principal provision for external inspection and examination—

"The minister may, at least once in every two years, have an inspection made of any bank, by an auditor or inspector appointed by him for that purpose, and such officer shall have power to examine all books, papers, documents and notes in the possession of the bank, for the purpose of securing exactness in the annual and monthly returns required by section 112 and 114 of this Act, with regard to the financial condition of the bank."

It will be noticed that this puts into the hands of the Minister of Finance the power to, at any time—but not more than once in two years—order an investigation into the books and accounts of any bank. In fact, such action will not be taken unless at the instigation of the Finance Minister, who, under the circumstances, would be performing the very unpleasant duty of directing suspicion, perhaps totally unwarranted, on the officers of a bank.

This is not the right sort of external examination. No Finance Minister would feel justified in ordering such an investigation unless information had been forthcoming that things were radically wrong, and then it would be too late.

To prevent more bank failures, which arise, as a rule, through unwise placing of funds by the officers, a system of periodical external examination, with a report thereon, must be instituted to OPERATE AUTOMATICALLY by law. It shall then be no ones unpleasant duty to practically accuse a bank of being in an unfavorable position. Let the external examination include every bank, once a year. This regular investigation, discriminating between no banks, big or small, is the best safeguard the public has, either for investment in stock or in a business account.

And it may be remarked that recent events have shown the strength and wisdom of the stand taken by H. C. McLeod, late general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who retired because his strong advocacy of external examination did not meet with his directors' approval. This is Mr. McLeod's vindication.

THE BONNER-WORTH BYLAW

It is the duty of every citizen who wishes to advance Peterborough to support the Bonner-Worth by-law. Because Peterborough is favored by the location of some big manufacturing concerns, is no reason why small industries should be disdained. Everything is fish that comes to this city's industrial net, providing it is a sound, sensible business proposition, with satisfactory credentials.

The Bonner-Worth Company proposes to employ a minimum of thirty hands. The actual number may be more, but thirty is the least. Yet these thirty hands will draw pay amounting to about $15,000 a year — money which will be brought largely from outside and spent in Peterborough. Will the merchants, the business men look askance at even $15,000 a year?

The by-law presents a proposition in which the loan of $12,000 to the company is well secured by a mortgage on the real estate, and the bona fides of the proposition must be established in actual concrete form by the installation of machinery before the city advances a cent. Is that not reasonable?

The cost to the city of carrying this loan will be $540 a year, lessening during later years of the debentures. Is not it a good investment for the people to pay a paltry $540 a year to gain an income of $15,000 and perhaps more?

Some of the largest manufacturing institutions on the continent have had humble beginnings. One industry begets another, and progressive Peterborough should take big and small as they come—on an equitable and satisfactory basis of course. Vote for the by-law.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Farmers' Sun says the hog market is stiffening. Toronto must be freezing up.

Ex-King Manuel of Portugal will visit Canada to make a study of British colonial methods. Canada will be able to see Manuel labor.

The Western Farmers in urging their importance on the Laurier ministers, stated that the deputation represented a wealth of $300,000,000 and behind them was a wealth of $1,500,000,000. Surely they cannot consistently claim lack of prosperity as a reason for abolishing the tariff. The western farmers have done remarkably well in this world's riches.

The Laurier patronage system is a weird and wondrous thing. The faithful are cared for with the greatest solicitude. When the collector of customs at Vancouver wants a waterfront watchman, to see that Chinese stowaways do not escape to shore, he telegraphs 3,000 miles to Ottawa. By post or by wire he is sent a list of "eligibles."

From this list of charming gentlemen he makes his pick, but ere they get drunk and are inefficient. The collector has no high opinion of the Vancouver faithful, as a result.

Premier Asquith, speaking at Nottingham, took occasion to strongly deny that the Liberal party will be at the mercy of the Irish Nationalists. He says that while office is desirable, it will cease to be so the instant the Irish section of his majority is his sole dependency. He will resign office the moment he finds himself unable to direct the policy and legislation of the country according to his wish. From which it may inferred that John Redmond, and his American dollars, potent though their influence may be, will not play the dictators to the extent the Unionists have alleged.

Willing to Be Reasonable.

"Do you believe in long engagements?" he asked after she had consented to be his.

"Yes, dearest," she replied. "I have always thought it was such a mistake for two people to rush into matrimony before they learned to really know each other."

"Well, about how long would you wish the engagement to be?"

"Let me see! Would you think it was too long if we didn't get married until a week from next Thursday?"—Chicago Record Herald.

THE BELTED PLAID.

This Was the Original Dress of the Scottish Highlander.

The original dress of the highlander was the belted plaid. This was a piece of tartan cloth, two yards broad and four long, which was drawn around the waist in nicely adjusted folds and tightly buckled with a belt. The lower part came down to the knees in much the same manner as the modern kilt, while the upper part was drawn up and adjusted to the left shoulder, so that the right arm might be perfectly free. This upper part was the plaid, which was used as a covering for the shoulders and body in wet weather, and when the use of both arms was required it was fastened across the breast with a brooch, often curiously enriched. A brooch was also used to fasten the plaid on the left shoulder. To attire himself in the belted plaid required on the part of the highlander no small amount of dexterity. The usual way was to lay it on the floor and after carefully arranging the folds to lie down upon it and then buckle it on. The lower end was fastened at the right hip. The utility of such a dress in the highlands is obvious, for the plaid rendered the man indifferent to storms and prepared to pass a night in the open air in the most inclement weather, while the loose undergarment enabled him to wade rivers or ascend mountains with equal ease. It was thus peculiarly adapted to the warrior, the hunter and the shepherd.—London Mail.

SHE LOVED SNUFF.

Remarkable Will and Funeral of a Queer Englishwoman.

The will of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, which is preserved as a curiosity at Somerset House, England, is a tribute to the delights and consolations of snuff. The testatrix directed that in her coffin should be buried with her all her handkerchiefs and sufficient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to bear the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, and at the door of the testatrix's house were to be placed two bushels of the same quality of snuff for gratuitous distribution. In order to insure the carrying out of her wishes the testatrix made the legacies given by the will dependent upon an exact and literal fulfillment of the conditions above named. In closing she bade all concerned to regard snuff as the grand cordial of nature.

Toned It Down.

"King Edward," said an English visitor in New York, "hated snobbishness. To show how ridiculous snobbishness was he used often to tell about an alphabet book of his childhood.

"This book had alliterative sentences arranged under each letter, thus:

"'Callous Caroline caned a cur cruelly.'

"'Henry hated the heat of heavy hats.'

"Under the letter V came the facetious sentence:

"'Villiam Vilkins viped his veskit.'

"But the young prince's snobbish tutors thought this sentence too vulgar and low for their charge and accordingly they substituted for it the more refined and genteel line:

"'Vincent Vining viewed a vacant villa.'"

Genius and Mediocrity.

Corneille did not speak correctly the language of which he was such a master. Descartes was silent in mixed society. Themistocles, when asked to play on a lute, said, "I cannot fiddle, but I can make a little village into a great city." Addison was unable to converse in company. Virgil was heavy colloquially. La Fontaine was coarse and stupid when surrounded by men. The Countess of Pembroke had been often heard to say of Chaucer that his silence was more agreeable to her than his conversation. Socrates, celebrated for his written orations, was so timid that he never ventured to speak in public. Dryden said that he was unfit for company. Hence it has been remarked, "Mediocrity can talk; it is for genius to observe."

A Long Romance

It Ended Realistically In Wedlock

By RICHARD G. WHITE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

An elderly gentleman sat on the broad piazza of a summer hotel overlooking the ocean. Beneath him the waves were curling in on the beach, casting a line of foam over the smooth sand, and receding with an effervescing sound. There may be people who can sit and watch this incessant rolling in and recession of waves with a stolid indifference. Not so George Warrington, whose spiritual part was made of finer stuff than that of the average man or woman. To him the billows told stories of infinity. More than that, they brought him memories. There was a tinge of sadness in it all, for he was alone in the world, without wife or child.

The waves were recalling to him a picture of his youth. He had seen it from a hotel window. The hour was between daylight and dark. Far out on the horizon a full moon was rising, a belt of cloud across its center. Nearer a black hulk was rising and falling monotonously. Nearer still lay a point of rocks. At low tide it was a little peninsula, at half tide an island embracing a few square yards, at full tide submerged. On its face, looking out upon and absorbed in the beautiful scene, sat a girl. Since she had gone there the sand behind her had been covered by the rising waters, and she was unconscious that her retreat over dry land had been cut off.

Quick thought shot through the brain of the young man looking out of the window. The tide his fancy transfigured to a savage in the wilderness with raised tomahawk stealing on his prey. Again it was a serpent encircling the girl and drawing its coils closer and closer about her. It was really an inanimate ocean unconsciously surrounding a girl unmindful of all save the beautiful scene before her.

In that region the tide runs with great rapidity. Warrenton knew this and, rushing down several flights of stairs, dashed over the sand toward the girl. As he ran he looked to see if a boat were lying anywhere near on the beach. None was in sight. Reaching the strip of water closing in behind the rock, he plunged in and swam across.

The girl's reverie was broken by looking up and seeing a dripping figure beside her.

"Come, quick! You're cut off by the tide."

Turning, she saw the swirling waters behind her. Her face lost its color, for she would be helpless in that quick current. She stood paralyzed.

"Come!" repeated Warrington. But he did not wait for her to move. Seizing her hand, he drew her, supporting her at the same time, to the margin of the torrent. She shrank back. Forcibly dragging her into it, encircling her with one arm, he swam with the other. The distance across the current was not long, but it ran so swiftly that the two were carried along till they found themselves at the end of the little strait, where they were tossed on the waves.

Then came a test of endurance. Warrington was strong and a good swimmer, but by this time the girl was clutching him so as to impede his efforts. At that hour few were on the beach and none within call. Warrington's efforts were having less and less effect, and he was about to give up hope both for himself and his burden when he heard the sound of oars. Making an effort, he got his head as far as possible above the surface and shouted:

"Help!"

The sound of oars ceased, then recommenced with a quicker stroke, and in less than a minute the dark body of a boat appeared on the crest of a wave above the drowning couple. Then a hand was extended, and Warrington put out his own hand and grasped the gunwale of the boat. Between the newcomer and Warrington the drowning girl was got into the boat. Then Warrington was helped in by the boatman.

While Mr. Warrington was passing in memory over the scene that had occurred more than thirty years before a woman whose white hair contrasted with her comparatively young face came up and stood with her hands on the piazza rail, looking out upon the shimmer that was beginning to extend itself from the rising moon. She turned and was about to go away when she noticed the man sitting near her. There was something in his appearance, his wrapt attitude, to tell her that he, like herself, possessed the gift of appreciation of the beautiful. She felt impelled to address him.

"Isn't it charming?" she exclaimed, half to him.

"Say, rather, infinitely grand," he replied, rising and uncovering.

"We women are apt to see the beautiful, you men the grand," she continued. "A child once said, 'God is a beautiful painter.' While the statement places the lesser above the greater, it is still a beautifully expressed thought."

"Indeed it is. But the most absorbing effect of this scene to me is not that it is a picture, but a combination of infinite material forms. It is the wonder in it that impresses me."

The lady having assumed the privilege of her sex to first address the man, he assumed the privilege of proceeding further by asking her to be seated.

"This is the first time in years," she said, "that I have been to the seashore. I love it, yet I fear it. It is to me like the serpent that charms the bird to destroy it. Fancy this tranquil scene transformed by a tempest. There is nothing in nature that is to me so miraculous as those waves. See that leviathan out there rolling in. True, his mane is gilded by the moon, but his body is black. There is a terror in his very silence. There, it breaks! How it pounds the beach!

"I dread the water in any form," she went on after a pause. "Even when it is tranquil it is treacherous. One who cannot swim may drown within a few feet of land. A current will glide along like a crawling reptile, carrying one who may be caught in it out into the great, dark, unmerciful ocean. Oh, I hate the water! I don't know why I came here. I will never come again."

"Madam," said Warrington, "you speak as one who has been caught in the toils of the watery element. You have had what swimmers call a scare. One who has suffered from a fright in the water will never get over it. Once conscious of its terrible grip, one can never be induced to trust it again."

"You are right," she said. "The relentlessness of any inanimate force is terrible, but it seems to me that the power of water is the most terrible of all. How can people cross and recross the ocean? It would seem that one ship being sucked down into the maw of the monster would be enough to deter others from trusting themselves upon its treacherous bosom."

Warrington was sure that the lady had experienced some mishap to give her this dread of the water and was curious to know the incident. But he was too well bred to ask a direct question. Moreover, it occurred to him that possibly it might have given her a mental as well as a physical shock from which she had never recovered.

"I have had," she went on, "what you call a scare. It gave me an incurable dread of water, but in itself it gradually passed into comparative unimportance. There was that connected with it which has affected my whole life."

"Indeed!"

The word "indeed" is an extremely well bred expression and means nothing. It doesn't trespass on any one's feelings, asks no questions, invites confidence only if the confider is minded to give it and leaves him or her to proceed or turn the subject at will. It is one of the most useful words in the English dictionary.

"When I was a girl I was sitting one evening on a rock viewing a scene like this, so enraptured that I was unconscious of the tide rising behind me. I was already cut off when a young man not only warned me, but saved me. Only a fortunate circumstance enabled us to get to the shore."

She shuddered and continued:

"Not for the world would I dwell on that occurrence. It is of what followed that I am going to speak. In novels when a young man saves a girl from a catastrophe they love and marry. In my case a romance was started that was continuous, leaving me with old age before me without a single companion. I could never forget my rescuer, but my rescuer apparently never considered me in any other light than as one he had rescued. At any rate, he never sought me out, never came near me. I had a number of excellent offers, but my mind had become absorbed with one person, and I would yield to none other. And here I am at nearly fifty years of age, desolate because a man saved me from drowning. I would prefer that he had left me to have been engulfed."

After this burst of confidence the lady suddenly remembered that she was giving it to a stranger. There was a momentary silence, at the end of which Warrington was about to speak, when she forestalled him.

"I dare say," she said, "that you are surprised at my revealing to one I have never met before so sacred an experience. Perhaps you will not believe me when I tell you that till this moment I have kept the secret in my own bosom from every living soul. When I came upon you just now this scene brought back the incident of my youth, and a certain kindliness I saw in your eye invited me for once to open the floodgates and permit the long pent up waters to flow forth."

"Madam," said Warrington, "I am aware of that propensity engrafted in humanity to confide. In this case you could not have confided in a person better calculated to console you. It is said that misery loves company. You and I, having been made miserable by the same incident, should love each other's company for the rest of our lives."

"Indeed!" said the lady, in her turn using that convenient word.

"Thirty years ago I saved a girl from drowning. Unfortunately I was so cursed sensitive that I feared to make any advance whatever lest she should think I was presuming upon my service at having saved her. I did not see her again for some time after we left the water, and when I met her on her face was a scowl."

He paused, and the two regarded each other intently. Suddenly the lady burst forth reproachfully:

"Why shouldn't she have scowled? Hadn't you ignored her?"

And so it was that a lady, not recognizing the man who had condemned her to spinsterhood, told him frankly the story of her life. It was the beginning of the end for both of them. A romance that had endured for thirty years was at last ended in realism—that is to say, marriage.

SOLDIER BY HEREDITY.

Lt.-Col. Buell of Brockville Comes of a Line of Warriors of Repute.

Lieut.-Col. W. S. Buell, of the 41st Regiment of Brockville Rifles, is one of the most unusual military officers in the world. He was born a Canadian soldier; likewise his father before him, and his father's father; his grandfather's father was also commander of a regiment; and all these hereditary regiments were headquartered at Brockville. Col. Buell's history is important; because his forbears helped to make history. His great-grandfather, William Buell, was the first settler in Brockville; a U. E. Loyalist who had lived in Connecticut, and when the Revolutionary War broke out packed all he had and shoved up through the wilderness to Montreal. But not to settle down peacefully. He took out a commission as ensign in the 34th King's Rangers, and he fought with that regiment till the war was done. Retiring on half pay he began to practice the arts of peace. With his wife he pushed up the rapids of the St. Lawrence till he came to a beauty spot at the foot of the Lake of the Thousand Islands—which is now Brockville. There he built the first house. Seventeen years later he was elected to represent his constituency in the Parliament of Upper Canada; about which time he was made lieutenant-colonel of the 1st Leeds militia.

Martin, his son, was a sergeant in the militia. He fought at Chrysler's Farm, and other engagements in the War of 1812. About the middle of the nineteenth century he also became lieutenant-colonel of his regiment, and was also elected to Parliament; became mayor of Brockville and editor of The Brockville Recorder. His son, J. D., raised a company of infantry in 1860; and in 1866, the year of the Fenian Raid, he, when the 42nd Battalion was organized, became its first commanding officer. He also followed his father's and grandfather's footmarks by becoming mayor of Brockville, and being elected to Parliament.

Lieut.-Col. W. S. Buell is the only son of Lieut.-Col. J. D. Buell. Curiously enough, he took up the ancestral thread where the other three generations left it off.

He, too, has had some share in public affairs, having served five years in the municipal council, and one year as mayor. He was the first captain of the Brockville Rowing Club, an organisation that has produced championship crews. He has also represented his town on cricket, football and hockey teams, and his regiment at the Dominion Rifle Association for several years.

John H. Martin, a Hamilton bigamist was sent to the pen for five years.

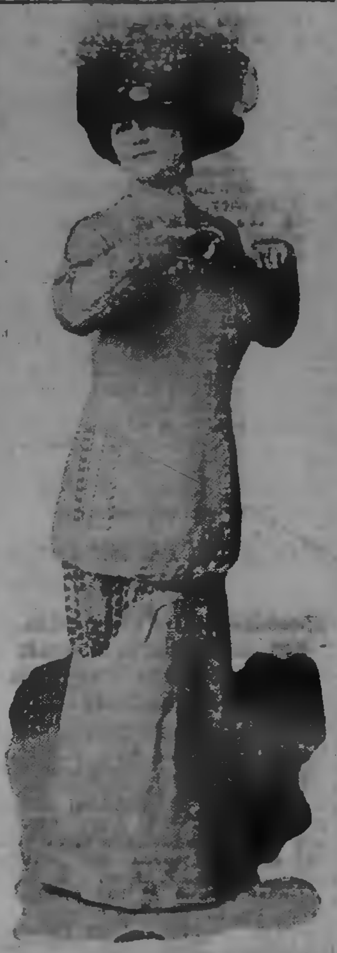
Ways of Remodeling Your Last Season's Suit.



A SMART SUIT OF BROWN ZIBELINE.

Overhaul your wardrobe and find out just what you have.

There is your winter suit. You feel as though you could not wear it another season. But how can you afford another? Let's look it over carefully. The skirt is frayed, in the first place. Well, that can easily be remedied. This is a plan which will serve many times. When the hem of your cloth gown cuts out take a very sharp pair of scissors, insert at the largest hole and cut the edge of the hem through very exactly, so that there will be no jagged spots. Turn both the edges this gives in toward each other, the inner ones a little more than the outer or dress edge, and baste carefully. Then slip stitch by hand, dampen and press. Remove the basting threads before the final press, cutting them frequently so that there will be no pulling. After pressing sew on a good quality of mohair skirt braid, letting it come below the edge, and be sure that this braid has been shrunken, or at the first wetting the hem will all wrinkle.

But before going any further it will be well to clean all spots from the suit before attempting any further renovation. The coat is perhaps the most difficult matter. It is doubtless too long and has the long shawl collar of the past season, but it is not hopeless. Cut the coat to a becoming length, a little below the hips. Fit closely about the hips, then use the material cut from the coat to make the new sailor collar and wide lapels. Have the entire suit pressed thoroughly by a tailor, and, lo, you have a new and fashionable garment.

The smart suit pictured offers excellent suggestions for remodeling last year's finery. It is a three piece affair, and the coat is lined with a brown and tan silk which makes the upper part of the skirt and peasant bodice. A cream lace yoke veiled with brown chiffon brings the waist right up to date.

Latest Paris Hairdressing.

This eccentric coiffure arrangement is the latest cry of Paris. The front hair is softly twisted back from the face and braided in two braids. The braid from the left side is brought at the back to the right side and there arranged on to a cabochon over the right ear, and vice versa. Then the remaining hair at the back is made into finger puffs.

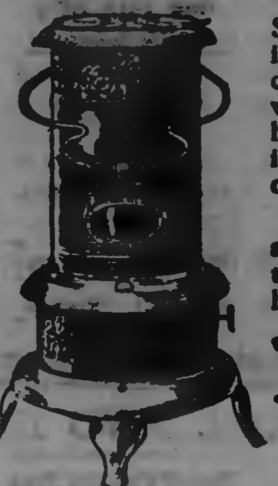
People Who Work Indoors With Their Hands



Seamstresses, watch-makers, artists, draughtsmen, and many others, cannot properly handle their tools with cold, stiff hands. Many a lost hour or two on cold winter mornings results from the delayed heat of furnace or stove.

The Perfection Oil Heater in a few minutes gives the temperature that assures the worker warm hands and pliable muscles. The

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER
Absolutely smokeless and odorless

quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. Has automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned.

It has a damper top and a cool handle. Indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down; it is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain, and cannot get lost.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

Miss Elliott was greatly surprised and expressed her gratitude in a few suitable words.

THE PRETTIEST CARDS AND CALENDARS

Those Issued by Raphael Tuck & Son — Dicken's Calendar a Beauty—New Year Cards Very Dainty

Have you noticed the beautiful calendars, books and cards that are being shown in the various book stores this season, the work of Raphael Tuck & Sons, of Montreal and London. Some of the large calendars are of wonderfully artistic merit, and are well worth the moderate prices asked for them. A Dickens calendar is one of the prettiest of these, the illustration being etchings showing the scenes from the stories of Dickens. Then there is the Longfellow calendar, the Havergal Calendar and a calendar whose illustrations are reproductions of Turner's paintings. Any of these are well worth framing and would make a fine set of pictures for one's library or dining room.

The children's books are especially interesting, Father Tuck's annual as usual being a favorite. There are boxes of rocking animals, puzzle pictures, cut out pictures, books for the little ones, and many other things that need only to be seen to be admired.

The Christmas and New Year cards are especially novel this year and there is no limit to the ingenuity and taste displayed in their manufacture. If you want cards that are distinctively pretty and dainty see that you get a Raphael Tuck line — you are sure to be satisfied with them.

These lines are on sale at all the local book stores.

SANTA CLAUS AT PARK STREET

The annual Christmas tree of the Bible school of the Park street Baptist church was held last night in the parlors of the church, which were crowded to their utmost capacity, by the scholars and friends of the school.

Two large Christmas trees, prettily decorated with presents, and other things, graced the two sides of the platform.

The programme of the evening was given by Miss Ethel Hill, Mr. Harry Goodwin, and the "Missing Link Quartette."

The chair was occupied by Mr. Wally Moore, the efficient and capable superintendent.

The pastor, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, made a short address, and during his remarks suggested that instead of having a Christmas tree for themselves next year, the Park street school provide a tree and furnish it with gifts for the children at the Shelter. He put it to a vote, and the school carried it most heartily. So next year the children at the Shelter will be conveyed to Park street and entertained at the school's expense.

We must not forget to say that Santa Claus made his appearance but said he had to get away in order to get around to all the good boys and girls in Peterborough, who will go to bed early to-night.

"EGGS IS EGGS" BUT THE PRICES SUGGEST DIAMONDS

As High as Forty Cents a Dozen Was Asked on the Market—An Abundance of Turkeys and Other Fowl—Outside Market Was Not Particularly Large.

As prophesied, the market this morning was the largest and most interesting of the year.

As early as nine o'clock, the hall was crowded with eager buyers, but those who bought early had to pay the highest price as the standard of prices was not regulated until late in the morning. Turkeys, as was natural, were in the majority, and geese and chickens were plentiful also. To strike an average price for turkeys was rather difficult, but a fairly decent one could be purchased for two-fifty and three dollars. Geese of very respectable appearance brought $1.75 and $1.50.

But the surprise of the day was the price to which eggs have soared. Forty cents a dozen was what a couple of ladies asked. At another table thirty cents was the price. How is it accounted for?

The market yard attendance was not very large, however. The only offerings there were lamb and beef and a few barrels of apples.

There was no hay or wood on this morning, although there has been an abundance all week.

Some of the quotations were as follows:—

Beef—9 and 10, and 10 and 11 cents.
Pork—7 and 8 cents.
Eggs—30 cents to 40 cents a dozen.
Butter—25 cents.
Turkeys—$2.50 to $4.00.
Geese—$1.50 to $1.75.
Chickens—50 cents to 75 cents.
Apples—$1.75 a bag.

Regarding beef, there is a scarcity, or has been a scarcity in Ontario this year. One of the reasons given for this is that last year there was a surplus of stockers raised, and many dealers shipped large numbers to the western provinces. This year it is vice versa, and western cattlemen have large orders for shipments of beef to Ontario.

Recently Mr. Percy Graham, son of Ald. Graham, who has been on a trip to the west, saw a herd of seven hundred cattle loaded on a stock train destined for the east.

Roy, two chickens, one duck; Harry Blade, turkey and goose; Percy Blade, three geese; George Fitzgerald goose and turkey; George Fitzgerald, goose and turkey; Ed. Simmons, chicken; Geo. Metcalf, pair of chickens; and a turkey. Tom. Rutherford brought down a chicken with his first shot.

Another shoot will be held Monday morning, commencing at 9 o'clock sharp, and is open. Good prizes of poultry and fowl will be offered as prizes.

NOTHING VERY DEFINITE IN THE MUNICIPAL OUTLOOK

The composition of the City Council for next year is problematical.

The only certainty about the situation is that there will be a council of eleven members, a mayor and two aldermen from each ward, for the incoming council will be elected by the ward system.

The added innovation of some of the aldermen being elected for a two year term should give zest to the contest. The two year term is a plan for which every candidate will naturally strive to reach.

There is very little in the municipal situation to attract special attention. A marked feature in connection with the coming elections is the popular indifference, and the almost entire absence of speculation, more or less to the point, to be heard as a rule as the day of nomination approaches. This much is known or can be assumed with a fair degree of assurance. The 1911 council will contain Mayor Morrow, according to the unwritten law that has obtained in Peterborough for a great number of years, by which each mayor has thus been given a second term. So far there is no indication of any opposition being offered to Mayor Morrow's return for the customary second term.

In regard to the aldermen of the new council, it is possible to be more positive as who they will not be than to forecast the council's probable composition. It is certain that Ald. Batten and Ald. Turner will not be elected to the next year's council, for the very good reason that both have declared they will not be candidates.

The problem is not very much simplified when we come to the remaining members of the council, though it seems very probable that all of them will bid for re-election.

The claim that they may have established by their course during the year is to be passed upon by a critical body of ratepayers. It very often happens that there is considerable difference of opinion between the ratepayers and their representatives in regard to the value of the services of the latter. But there are a great many who feel that the present board of aldermen have with a fair degree of competence discharged their duty.

However, there will naturally be several new candidates—there are at every election.

One thing that may lessen the crop of candidates is that each alderman must be a resident of the ward which he represents. Under the present system that passes out with the old year a candidate living in any part of the city is eligible for election regardless of ward boundaries.

Under the new plan of nomination if any one ward should happen to contain an approximate monopoly of grey matter and raw material of municipal statesmanship, there is an easy probability of a surplus of candidates from that division. But in the case of a ward where the results of a fish diet are less in evidence, that ward may be very much in the same position as Old Mother Hubbard when she started to her pantry in pursuit of osseous refreshment for her canine companion.

After nomination day things will have shaped themselves more definitely.

The Canadian Government regulation, regarding the brewing of lager, is probably the most exacting in the world.

It calls for a brew of Hops, Malt and Water only. The American Government places no such restrictions on her brewers.

SPORTING NEWS

PASSING THE PUCK

The team that is bulging the netting, and taking the games without luck, is the team that on home ice or foreign, is handling and passing the puck. The boys of the old school of puckdom, who've scored goals, while battles they'd duck, will tell you that these were the moments when they were all passing the puck. For in hogging, the player quite often, from the boards for a mark he is stuck, and the rest of his team takes to beefing, because he's not passing the puck. There are times when a lone rush comes handy, as a gun on a rugby fake buck, but there's naught half so pretty to gallibirds, as the line that is passing the puck.

SPORT TALK

The intermediates and juniors crossed sticks at the rink last night and the boys were going at top speed for the greater part of the hour. Jack Patterson in the nets for the juniors looks likely and with a few more practices will be in first-class shape to work at this difficult and very important position. The boys are inclined to bunch up instead of patroling their own territory, and this is a feeling which should be left at the club rooms, where the notion is different.

However, both teams are advancing into shape in a satisfactory manner and both look good to the fans.

Notice to Lady Curlers

Any ladies interested in curling are requested to be at the Charlotte street rink Monday morning at ten o'clock.

PUCKLAND

A practice of local O. H. A. players will be held Monday morning between 10.30 and 11.30 o'clock.

Up to the present no arrangements have been made for an opening game here.

HOCKEY

The secretary of the Peterborough hockey club has received a letter from the [illegible] hockey team, champions of [illegible] city league asking for a game with the local intermedaite seven.

W. J. Smith of Kingston has been appointed chief of the Gananoque fire brigade.

POLICE COURT

Leaving his work at a local factory yesterday at noon, a young man whose home is across the line, took too much of the fluid that causes trouble, and instead of occupying a pullman car seat he was one of a trio which faced the Magistrate this morning at the opening of court. It was his first appearance and his offence was overlooked.

Not so was it with the other two. They were found in the arms of Morpheus in the band hall last night.

Both are addicted to drink and spend what little money is made by them over the bar.

One is a mechanic who could earn good money, but apparently prefers to loaf around hotels and guzzle booze.

They were remanded to jail for a week.

Blacklist proceedings will likely be taken in one case.

Not at All Private.

In the trial of a case recently in one of the English courts a witness was asked to repeat a conversation that she had with her husband. Objection was made that the question should not be answered because the conversation was private in its nature. The judge then asked the witness whether anybody except herself and husband was present. She replied that her mother and the husband's mother were, whereupon the judge remarked: "It appears that both mothers-in-law were present. I shall therefore rule that the conversation was public."

Struck by Lightning.

A lady riding in a train found herself seated by the side of an old matron who was exceedingly deaf.

"Ma'am," said she in a high tone, "did you ever try electricity?"

"What did you say, miss?"

"I asked if you ever tried electricity for your deafness?"

"Oh, yes, indeed, I did; it's only last summer I got struck by lightning, but I don't see as it done me a bit of good."

No Exposure For Him.

The member of the legislature of whom some graft stories had been circulated was about to build a house.

"You will want a southern exposure, I suppose?" asked the architect.

"No, sir!" said the man. "If you can't build this house without any exposure I'll get another architect."—Yonkers Statesman.

The Art of Carpentry.

How many common figurative expressions in our language are borrowed from the art of carpentry may be seen from the following sentence: "The lawyer who filed the bill, shaved the note, cut an acquaintance, split a hair, made an entry, got up a case, framed an indictment, impaneled a jury, put them into a box, nailed a witness, hammered a judge and bored a whole court, all in one day, has since laid down law and turned carpenter."

Contrary Human Nature.

"I suppose it is our natural contrariness which makes us do such paradoxical things."

"Such as what?"

"As makes us long for things when we are short."—Baltimore American.

On Sunday afternoon the Guild of Goodfellowship intend to spend a social hour from 3 to 4 p.m. at the Princess Theatre. There will be no regular address, but in its place will be Christmas carols, hymns and sacred songs, in which the whole audience will have been specially selected to make everybody feel perfectly at home, so that those who are in boarding houses, and away from their friends, may partake of the spirit of fellowship and goodwill which animates this day. It is hoped that such a gathering, which is open to all men of 18 years or one, will do something to bring good cheer to the lonely ones in our midst, and help to make the festival a happy one for them.

All men will receive a happy welcome and the larger the crowd the brighter the singing.

THE "BEAUTY PARLOR" QUESTION

ETHEL LLOYD, in the "American Hairdresser."

Much excitement has recently been caused by the publication of an article telling of the experiences of a young woman who went to a large city for the purpose of learning the "beauty work."

As this article appeared in a leading publication read by thousands of women the consequence has been a very general agitation on the subject of "what constitutes good work."

Many of the readers instead of applying this article to specific cases take the ground that it describes the condition of the work as a whole and that consequently no parlor can be run on anything like legitimate principles.

At first glance it would seem that the young woman had wrought incalculable harm in bringing this branch of work before the public eye in such a decidedly unfavorable light.

Some scores of letters from every part of the country have poured in from operators who are in every way above suspicion and who feel that such an article is a great injustice to them.

One conscientious worker writes: "It is a shame to publish such an article for it hurts every one. I just wish I could write an answer and tell of the good results I have obtained and send the article to the paper."

Another walls: "Oh! the trouble that nasty article has made me. You know I do honest work. I had just commenced to persuade my friends that I had entered an honorable profession. Now I have to do all my work over again."

An earnest thinker inquires: "Are such conditions really to be found! I have never considered it possible."

That is where the hard part comes. Honest painstaking, conscientious operators who have studied their subjects and who do their work painstakingly with a careful regard for the well-being of every person who enters their parlors can hardly realize that conditions just as bad as those depicted in the article can really exist.

In truth if one wishes to look the matter square in the face the following admissions must be made.

There are dozens of parlors in this country in which not one person from the proprietor to the youngest apprentice girl has the slightest degree of belief in any treatment given or in any preparation sold. Nothing is known of the skin or scalp. No thought of sterilization is ever entertained. The front portions of these shops always will be elaborate while the back rooms are frightfully neglected.

Many of these shops train (?) pupils who in turn become operators in other establishments and proceed to make what they term an "honest" living by giving treatments they do not understand and selling to the public preparations in which they do not believe.

There are "Beauty Parlors" in which the filling process is taught to any who can produce the requisite sum regardless of other qualifications.

The price charged is quite prohibitive. The instruction consists in securing a metallic syringe something like a hypodermic a mixture composed usually of olive oil and vaseline and a patient who wants the work done.

After seeing this mixture injected several times the student is allowed to begin and in a week or so is turned out a "competent operator."

She is taught nothing of the nerve or blood supply or distribution of muscles. She knows nothing of the skin. She understands dimly that the mixture must be sterilized first and the skin must be cleansed before the injection is made and that is all.

As a consequence of this method of teaching in some of the large cities young women blithely call from house to house inquiring "if the lady would like her wrinkles removed."

Should any one consent the work is quickly done, and the operator departs in search of a new patient, happily ignorant of any trouble that may come as a result of this treatment.

The far-reaching consequence will be seen in a few years, when there will be a universal movement against "all filling." Then, after a time, investigation will prove that the success of the operation depends not only upon the substances used and the condition of the patient.

In other parlors, whenever business drops off temporarily, the owners suggest that her patients try the "skinning process."

The fee varies from $100.00 to $500.00.

One woman who had conducted a parlor of this description told me she was a nervous wreck as a consequence of attempting to do the work, because, as she expressed it, "my patients suffered so while the skin was being blistered."

A physician had to be on hand to give morphine, a trained nurse to look after the patients, and even then results were not always what she hoped for.

Still another peculiar fact was brought to my notice a short time ago.

The proprietor of a large hair dressing establishment asked me if I knew what caused the temporary unpopularity of the Marcel wave a year or so ago.

When I said "No," he explained by stating that the wave itself, properly given, does not injure the hair, and he pointed with pride to a record of his own where for ten years he had waved the same heads.

"But," he said, "not so with my hair dressers. They formed a clique to compel people to tip. When a woman entered the shop who did not tip, the signal was given and the hair dresser would search her hair so she would not come to him again. It worked well for a time. Then the reaction came, and, because of the unpopularity they themselves have caused."

So cases might be multiplied with facts even more pathetic, but enough has been said I am sure to impress upon the minds of the people that there are shops and shops.

The cases cited only belong to the minority, it is true.

There are hundreds of well-appointed, honestly conducted shops throughout the country where good work is being done, and where the workers are constantly in search of more knowledge.

Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys, and just as done out in the morning as on retiring. I was languid and would have to let my household work stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. JOSEPH MARTIN

"Fighting Joe" of Canadian Political Fame in His Element in Radical Riding of England

"Joe Martin couldn't help but be elected in East St. Pancras. It's a riding that will let him go as far as he likes. He can't be too Radical for them."

That's the way a Canadian friend of the famous politician expressed himself when he heard that East St. Pancras had given the Canadian 241 majority.

Some Canadians have surprised this country by their entry into and success in British politics, but not Joseph Martin. Had it been Egypt or South America it would have been the same—everybody would have said: "That's just like Joe Martin."

In Canada he had a unique career. He saw more ups and downs of public life than most politicians, and his downs were of his own making as well as his ups. The trouble was—from the standpoint of other politicians—that he made their ups and downs, too. He it was who raised the issue that ultimately drove the Conservatives from power at Ottawa in 1896. At all events, he is given the credit for this, and for many other history-making episodes in Canada, while his own personal career earned for him the title of "the stormy petrel of Canadian politics."

One writer has said that Joseph Martin was never awed by his own environment—that he made his own environment. But perhaps his early environment that he did not make had its influence on the development of the individualism of his character.

He left his birthplace of Milton, Ontario, when a young boy, and before he was out of his teens he was a telegraph operator in the United States. Then came the panic of 1873, and returning to Canada, Martin was successively school teacher, lawyer, and professional politician. Of course he was a politician while at school and at law, always demonstrating his revolutionary tendencies.

"He might be a good leader in time of war, but not in time of peace; and not a good follower at any time," said an intimate acquaintance the other day.

It was his Radicalism in Canada that got him his first start in politics, and it was his short-comings as a follower that led to those political explosions that are now a matter of history. Had he been an ordinary Liberal he would not have managed to win his first Portage la Prairie seat. But he was Radical enough to make a stand for Provincial Rights, and he became a member of the Manitoba Legislature.

Then one day the press of Canada recorded his remark that "Mr. Speaker was the most unscrupulous partisan he had ever met." Such a remark was shocking, everybody said, and they took it so seriously in Winnipeg, that the Legislature refused to proceed with business until he apologised. The House adjourned for several times, but "Fighting Joe" made no appearance, until he had the whole country talking about him. Then he attended the assembly and apologized. But he closed his apology by adding: "but it's true just the same."

This was while in opposition. In a short time the Liberals gained the ascendancy through Martin's own political genius, and then came his dissensions with Premier Greenway, in whose cabinet he held the portfolio of Attorney-General. Among other remarkable demonstrations of his individualism, he announced that the French language would be abolished in the Separate schools. That, it is said, was the commencement of the Manitoba school question.

JOSEPH MARTIN

Martin was next heard of in the Dominion House as member for Winnipeg, but his faculty for disagreeing with other people led to his defeat. A Winnipeg minister once said of a citizen: "—— would give up a dozen principles for one job, but Joseph Martin would give up a dozen jobs for one principle." He did give up the "job" of representing Winnipeg—but he didn't give up politics.

Farther west he went, and on the coast he soon became a political factor. The vested interests didn't like him, the politicians didn't like him, but that was immaterial to "Fighting Joe." On the contrary, he enjoyed the situation, especially when, despite all kinds of opposition, he rose to the top. Before he became Premier of British Columbia he tasted decided defeat, so decided in fact, that even his admirers expressed doubt as to whether he would ever re-enter politics.

His rise and fall in British Columbia was meteoric, but though he was not heard of for a few years, no one expected that the last had been heard of him.

That he "bobbed up" in Britain was no surprise, nor was any flurry caused in Canada by his flurries in the British House of Commons.

At Townsend village, Mary Withrow's house was burned to the ground

HAMAR GREENWOOD

An Interesting Glance at the Whitby Boy Who Has Been Elected for Sunderland

The election of Hamar Greenwood in Sunderland was one of the events of the present election in Great Britain that gave the Government the greatest gratification, it being a notable Liberal gain. And it was also gratifying to a large number of people in this country, who have followed with more than ordinary interest, the rapid rise of this young Canadian.

Whatever people may think of Hamar Greenwood's political views, there are no two opinions as to his personal qualifications, and those who know him best say that it was only to be expected that having been defeated in York in January last, he should go in to win in December.

It is not many years ago that the member for Sunderland became known throughout Canada for his part in the famous university strike. It was he and a student named Tucker who organised that strike among the political scence students at Toronto University in 1894, that lasted for several months and ended in an official inquiry. Tucker, it will be remembered, was editor of the students' paper, "Varsity," and in the impetuosity of youth he undertook to editorially castigate the faculty. That was the beginning of the trouble that ended in he and Greenwood organizing a revolution.

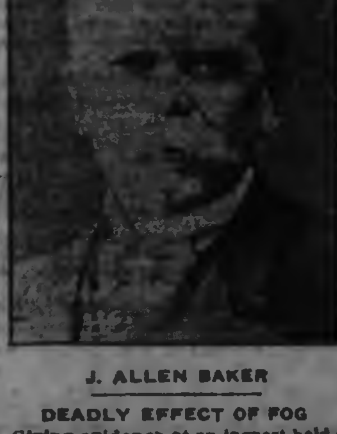
HAMAR GREENWOOD

His fellow-strike-leader may have been hot-headed, but Greenwood's friends say he was cool-headed himself. A good boxer and an all-round athlete, he had developed control of temper, and in this connection it is interesting to recall that he was one of the best cricketers in Canada. Born at Whitby, he had attended the Whitby Collegiate Institute, and here, at the age of sixteen, he was chosen a member of the International cricket team, being large for his age. This team comprised the best cricketers in Canada, who were matched against the pick of the United States.

Perhaps another thing that gave young Greenwood his self-control was the fact that the platform held no terrors for him. From a child he showed ability as an actor and made speeches on the slightest provocation. At one time he was teaching in the village of Manchester, and with another young man who was teaching at Utica, and who is now in Winnipeg, he collaborated in the writing of a melodrama of the genuine blood-and-thunder variety. Greenwood took the role of hero and the other youth that of the villain, and the drama was produced at Manchester before a great audience. And the people of Ontario county still talk of that play.

The stage, as a matter of fact, was seriously thought of by Mr. Greenwood when, after his graduation at Toronto, he went to London, Eng., and decided to make the Old Country his home. Though for some time he was advertising manager of Stead's Review of Reviews, and did other newspaper work, he took up the study of the drama at the suggestion of his friend, the late Franklin McLeay, the brilliant young Canadian actor.

But for some reason he abandoned the idea, and became a temperance and popular lecturer, finally going into politics and law, in both of which he has been most successful.



J. ALLEN BAKER

DEADLY EFFECT OF FOG

Giving evidence at an inquest held at Newington on the body of an aged female pauper lunatic who died from bronchitis, accelerated by fog and cold, Dr. Charles Frederick Williams, medical officer of Newington Workhouse, said that it was impossible to keep the fog and cold out of an institution like theirs, bank up the fires as they might. They had 1,200 inmates there, three-fourths of whom suffered from their chests. Visiting them on a foggy night, one would see them all sitting up in their beds in a long row, all gasping like frogs. Fog was the greatest difficulty with which they had to deal, added the doctor, and a half-dozen inmates had died during the week, the malignity of their ailments having been increased by the fog.

ARE YOU CITIZEN OR PARASITE? A PERTINENT QUESTION

The dictionary says that a parasite is "A living organism that lives on or in some other organism, and from it derives nourishment." Another definition is "An obsequious sycophant who lives at another's expense." Do you realize that there are parasites on the body politic? Most dogs have fleas, and we presume that most towns have parasites. David Harum said that some fleas are good for a dog, as they keep him from brooding on being a dog; but probably the dog is not philosopher enough to appreciate the great advantages he derives from the fleas. We must confess that our sympathies are with Tige in his view of the case, for we cannot figure out just what good our local parasites do to Peterborough.

We can continue the analogy with other domestic animals. The cow eats hay but she gives milk; the sheep seems to live on nothing much of anything and gives wool; ubiquitous Biddy, the hen, goes the sheep one better, she eats up bugs and injurious insects and converts them into eggs. But the parasite—the flea on the dog, the tick on the sheep, the fly on the cow, (Biddy, the hen, has her troubles too)—all these parasites just suck blood and give nothing except annoyance. Parasites are not useful themselves, and they prevent others from being as useful as they might be.

The parasites on our business community are in about the same class. You know the ones we mean. They take everything and give nothing. They enjoy police protection and fire protection, and every other advantage we have; but if they have a dollar to spend they send it to some mail order house that pays no taxes here and does nothing for this city. The parasite wears out our sidewalks with shoes bought in Toronto. He uses our roads. The buggy was bought by mail, and so was the harness. If the horse got sick he would like to get some veterinary mental scientist to give it absent treatment. He probably regrets that he cannot have his hair cut by mail also. He buys books, clothing and furniture by mail.

Nothing local is quite as good as an imported article, according to this individual. He thinks the local tailor cannot make clothes good enough for him, although we know many residents of large cities who continue to get their clothes made at their old homes in the smaller places. They find the designs exactly the same, and the cut and materials just as good, while the price is much lower because the expense of doing business in the small towns is so much less.

The parasite, however, prides himself on his superiority in the choice of everything, and rather insinuates that our local dealers are incapable of judging and our citizens incapable of appreciating good materials.

Some residents of Peterborough have done some travelling on their own account, however, and find that we live a little better here than they do in the large cities. They find that wearing apparel bought here compares favorably with what they see in Toronto or Montreal or New York. Our homes are just as comfortable and just as tastefully furnished. One point is particularly impressed on the observer, and that is that with an equal income a man can live much better here than in the large cities. Taxes, rents, eatables and wearables are all cheaper. So they are glad to be citizens of Peterborough, and are true to the interests of our town. They buy at home.

Are you a citizen or a parasite?

AT THE SIGN OF THE SCALES

Well I suppose you are proud of yourself! Don't you think it is time you were making up your mind to turn over a new leaf. You are only a young man, and with your future before you.

Now I'll let you go this time. Make up your mind that you will be a man.

You are discharged.

This is an ordinary occurence at the local police court. Most people are perhaps too apt, to associate punishment either by fine or imprisonment, with a police court, and overlook the possibility of offenders for the first, second or third time, leaving this institution resolved to act on kindly advice, given by the Magistrate, who could have imposed a heavy fine or a term in prison.

And again, very little prominence is given the work of the Chief of Police and his officers, outside the reports of a session of the police courts.

D. W. DUMBLE K. C.

Police Magistrate for Over a Quarter of a Century

In this particular season of the year, when turkeys, boxes of cigars, etc., are being distributed with a free hand, the officer does his beat, in daylight or darkness—and is knocked.

One time it is "Come now gentlemen move on" or "nice night." Another time it is a drunk with empty pockets, perhaps kicked out of the bar room, and in danger of freezing to death, being taken to a cell, to spend the night in safety at least.

The police court does not have many visitors who come of their own accord, and yet life in many phases is portrayed there daily. Too often it is, the young fellow who thinks it "smart" to drink and swagger around the streets. Then there are the ordinary drunks and the regulars. Others face one or more of long and varied list of charges. Some have been there before and have the proceeding memorized.

And the railbirds. A police court is open to the public, but the daily attendance is not made up of that class of citizens who are seen at gatherings, where a dress suit is the order. There are many who seldom miss a morning session, and it is easy to distinguish the curious from the regulars. Some find keen enjoyment, in the battles between "my learned friend and his opponent. Others smile as the command comes from the chair, "McGinty, open that window" or from another direction, sharp and abrupt, "take off your hat."

There are many things about the local police court, that would make a visit, very interesting, and one that would be remembered for a long time, but the average citizen is no doubt satisfied to pin his faith, the police authorities, and give the Water Street hostelry, a wide berth

EXPRESS RATES ARE TOO HIGH

(MUST BE LOWERED SAYS COMMISSION)

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—What is unquestionably the most important judgment ever rendered by the railway commission is made public to-day with reference to the long drawn out enquiry into express rates. It involves drastic criticism of the express companies of Canada. The kernel of the finding is the following clause:—

"After making every allowance for all the contingencies we find that we are impressed with the fact that the earnings of railways upon express traffic are upon the whole excessive and should be reduced."

"The vital points from the judgment are;—The express rates are excessive and should be reduced."

"It requires no second reading to see that existing form of contracts between shipper and company is grossly unfair.'

"It appears that studied attempts have been made to prevent the shipper recovering compensation in the event of goods being destroyed or lost.'

"The original principle of the company tariff appears to have been:—What are the highest tolls we can charge for the least service rendered?"

"Delivery limits must be revised or must go. New tariffs, involving reductions, must be presented in three months."

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING BRISK THIS YEAR SAY MERCHANTS; SALES UP TO THE STANDARD

The Review communicated with several of the local storekeepers today, as to whether the Christmas trade this year, has been as remunerative as in the past years.

The general opinion was that the trade was fully as satisfactory, and in many cases much more so than in the past. The merchants reported the buying to have been more evenly divided and not coming in one rush as is often the case.

"The clothing business" said Mr. LeBrun "has been pretty satisfactory," although not more so than in former years. The farmers have been exceedingly liberal in their patronage and the trade taken as a whole has been good."

Mr. E. N. McWilliams reported his business to be very satisfactory, and he was well satisfied.

Mr. Thomas Barrie was of the same opinion.

The steady cold weather this month has created a demand for furs, Mr. Barrie said and has accentuated the need of them. The same applied to the Regina branch of his business.

Mr. Robert Fair said that his business has been fully as large as in former years and he was contented.

Mr. James Connal also stated that he was certain that his trade was as large as in past years. He felt sure that it would come up to what it had been formerly.

The jewellry business has also been flourishing. Mr. F. R. Clarke, the well-known dealer, said that in the past twenty years his trade had not been better. He estimated that it has increased fully fifty per cent this year.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

A good way to spend next Sunday would be to drop into the Crystal Theatre and have a sing. You remember how you used to gather around the piano at home on Sunday nights and sing the good old hymns. How could you spend Christmas better than in fond recollection of those happy days. There is a fellowship about the singing in the Crystal that makes a fellow feel right at home. You can't get away from it. It has a warm feel. Mr. J. J. Thompson will say a few words, basing his remarks on the grand old Christmas story. There will be some special singing, but the special feature of the gathering will be found in the hearts of the men who compose the audience, who are far away from home and whose thoughts will be of home and of the dear ones there.

The Sunday morning Bible Study Club will meet in the parlor to-morrow morning and the boys' class will meet up in their own room. Mr. Hodges will teach the boys in the absence of Mr. Tait.

The building will be open on Sunday afternoon from 4 o'clock to 5.30. During this time there will be a Bible class, which will meet in front of the fireplace. This class will study "Life Questions and Their Answers." The question for to-morrow will be "Wherewithal shall a Young Man Cleanse His Ways?"

At St. Luke's

St. Luke's Christmas services tomorrow will be as follows:

7 and 8 a.m. — Holy Communion.

11 a.m. — Morning prayer and Holy Communion.

3p.m. — Children's service in church.

7 p.m. — Evening prayer and sermon.

The rector will preach in the morning, and Rev. J. Bennett Anderson at the children's and evening services.

HALL CAINE'S MASTERPIECE

"The Manxman" With Powerful Cast Coming to the Grand on Wednesday

Under the management of Mr. J. Cosgrove comes Mr. Frederick Clarke this season for an engagement of one night at the Grand, Wednesday, Dec. 28, appearing in a most notable production of "The Manxman," which has been termed Hall Caine's greatest work. Since the successful dramatisation of "The Christian," "The Eternal City" "The Prodigal Son," and last but not least, "The Manxman," the Hall Caine plays have proved to be a most brilliant factor along the lines of present day drama and each has lent wonderfully powerful impetus to the uplifting of the stage. Mr. Cosgrove has surrounded Mr. Clark with a carefully selected cast of players and has given his a most complete scenic outfit to accentuate the beauty of the play. The coming production of "The Manxman" will be one of the bright spots in the theartical season.
